Introducing "My News"
New University E- Publication to Feature Campus Happenings

Happy August! Thanks for reading "MY News." I'm Rebekah Faulk, manager of internal communications in the Office of Marketing & Communications, and I look forward to sending you campus news, in addition to faculty, staff and student recognition stories in this new email publication designed especially for you. Some of you may be familiar with receiving Georgia Southern in the News as a daily email including Georgia Southern's internal and external news links.

We’ve taken a look at our communications and revamped our approach. Now, instead of receiving a daily email, be on the lookout for this newsletter-style weekly format each Monday in your email inbox. Included, you’ll find stories that correspond with articles published throughout the week on My.GeorgiaSouthern.edu, plus Georgia Southern's top headlines in local, state and national media outlets.

We hope you enjoy this new layout. It's our way of sharing campus news in a fun, interesting format to encourage you to visit our daily updated campus intranet, My.GeorgiaSouthern.edu.

If you have a story idea or would like to request news to be featured, contact me by emailing RFaulk@GeorgiaSouthern.edu. The deadline to request articles is Thursdays at Noon. Go Eagles!
This Friday, Aug. 15, more than 3,000 incoming students will call Georgia Southern University their new home away from home, and over 1,000 faculty and staff members, current students and community members are lined up to help them move in—reinforcing our “large scale, small feel” culture.

“Last year, 3,131 students checked in on the day of Operation Move-In (OMI), 966 arrived prior to that day…and another 960 arrived the day after OMI,” said Vickie Shaw, assistant director of University Housing. “If history repeats itself, and it has for several years, we will have about that same number this year.”
