Southern Pride To-Go to Inject School Spirit into Statesboro on Friday Nights

If you were in a Statesboro restaurant or hangout this past Friday, you may have been startled by a clandestine group of Southern Pride Marching Band members who have dubbed themselves, 'Southern Pride To-Go.' Each Friday before a Georgia Southern home football game, a small group of musicians raids restaurants and hangouts throughout Statesboro playing the fight songs and other popular tunes to get fans fired up for Saturday's game. I hope that you have a chance to see this tradition in person. Read more...

Alumni to Begin Production on 'Erk'

Two Georgia Southern alumni recently announced plans to begin production on "Erk," a biopic about the life of legendary college football coach Erk Russell. Beau Turpin (producer) and James Kicklighter (director), will begin production on the film next summer. Plans call for the movie to be filmed in both Statesboro and Athens. I was pleased to welcome Coach Russell's sons, Jay and Rusty, back to Statesboro this past weekend to announce the film. Stay tuned for more on this exciting project. We're proud of both Beau and James and we will be looking forward to seeing the finished product. Read more...

It is hard to believe, but Georgia Southern's Botanical Garden will be celebrating its 25th anniversary this year. As part of this milestone, the Garden is receiving a new name to reflect the Garden's growing reputation as a popular destination for tourists, schools and more.

The Garden will now be known as the Garden of the Coastal Plain at Georgia Southern University. The new name was chosen to support the Garden's mission, which focuses on the natural and cultural features of the southeastern coastal plain. Read more...
