Director’s Message from the Canopy

The CET’s new Instructional Services Coordinator is Stacy Kluge who started working in the CET in early January. Stacy is available to work with faculty on a wide range of pedagogical topics, including course design and development, as well as effective uses of instructional technologies for student learning. For Stacy’s website, go to http://personal.georgiasouthern.edu/~skluge.

The CET’s Faculty Series begins this semester where faculty give presentations or seminars on topics related to teaching, learning, scholarship, and the academic life. The Faculty Learning Community on Service Learning & Civic Engagement will give a presentation on February 22nd. The Faculty Learning Community for Assessing Student Learning will present a session on March 4th on the nature and uses of direct and indirect means of assessing student work and, on April 3rd, Danny Dixon will give a seminar on effective ways to create and use course syllabi. If any faculty (individuals or a collaboration) would like to offer a session in the Faculty Series, please contact aaltany@georgiasouthern.edu.

The CET hosted the inaugural The SoTL Commons: An International Conference for the Scholarship of Teaching & Learning in November 2007. Faculty from 11 countries and 6 continents attended and most indicated they wanted to return for the next conference. There were 10 presentations by 17 Georgia Southern faculty, as well as 66 GS faculty serving as chairs for the concurrent sessions. The Conference Proceedings are available at http://www.georgiasouthern.edu/ijsotl/conference/proceedings/2007/.

The 2nd Annual SoTL Commons Conference will be March 11-13, 2009 in Nessmith-Lane. Keynote speakers will be Randy Bass (Georgetown University), Kathy Takayama (Brown University) and Laurie Richlin (Claremont Graduate University).

In April the CET will begin a new, annual publication that features the members and work of each of the Faculty Learning Communities (FLCs) for the academic year. Entitled FLC Forum, it will be in electronic format with a limited number of paper copies published. The purpose of the FLC Forum will be to recognize the professional commitment and work of the faculty in the FLC program, to inform colleagues about the program and the good work of the FLCs, and to stimulate interest among all faculty to considering joining an FLC for 2008-2009.

This spring there are 47 faculty (from 22 different departments) in 7 separate RRs for these books: The Courage to Teach: Exploring the Inner Landscape of a Teacher’s Life (Parker Palmer), The Advancement of Learning: Building the Teaching Commons (Huber & Hutchings), Learner-Centered Teaching: Five Key Changes to Practice (Weimer), and My Freshman Year (Nathan).

Faculty Learning Communities
(http://academics.georgiasouthern.edu/cet/programs/flc.htm)
It is not too early to begin thinking of joining an FLC for 2008-2009. If you have an idea for a topical or cohort FLC, or if there is a group of colleagues who would like to form an FLC for next year, please contact Alan Altany at aaltany@georgiasouthern.edu. We’d like to see over 100 faculty participate in 2008-2009 (about 80 members this year).
