COBA Programs: AACSB Accredited

The Board of Directors of AACSB International: The Association to Advance collegiate Schools of Business recently ratified its accreditation coordinating and maintenance committee’s early Fall 2007 recommendation to continue accreditation of the undergraduate (BBA), graduate (MBA and WebMBA), and accountability (SOA including MAcc) programs offered in the College of Business Administration for the next five years. The reaccreditation announcement, released by Judy Olian, AACSB International board chair, is a culmination of years of hard work by COBA administrators, faculty, and staff. First accredited in 1977, COBA has maintained its AACSB accreditation for more than 30 years.

While 555 AACSB International member institutions around the world have been affirmed in their commitment to quality and continuous improvement through rigorous, comprehensive peer review, only 160 have achieved additional accreditation for their accounting programs. AACSB accreditation means COBA’s business programs have met or exceeded the highest operating standards, as defined by the independent agency AACSB International, for delivering bachelor and master degrees in business. “It takes a great deal of commitment and determination to earn AACSB accreditation,” said Jerry Trapnell, executive vice president and chief accreditation officer of AACSB International.

“These schools have met rigorous standards of quality, as well as made a commitment to ongoing improvement that ensures that they will deliver a high quality education to students.” Having the stamp of approval from AACSB provides assurance COBA’s curricula is contemporary and comprehensive; the faculty is current and qualified in their teaching fields; policies, procedures, and processes are in place and functioning to ensure quality; facilities and instructional resources are up-to-date; and the portfolio of intellectual contributions is extensive and diversified. In short, it affirms COBA delivers quality education on a level higher than non-AACSB accredited schools of business.

AACSB International was founded in 1916 and began its accreditation function in 1919. As a specialized agency, AACSB International grants accreditation, representing the highest standard of achievement, for undergraduate and graduate business administration and accounting programs worldwide. AACSB International accreditation is the hallmark of excellence in business and management education.

In addition to establishing and maintaining standards of quality for collegiate education, AACSB provides services to and represents the interests of its members. AACSB International accreditation assures stakeholders that business schools, including the College of Business Administration at Georgia Southern,

- manage resources to achieve a vibrant and relevant mission;
- advance business and management knowledge through faculty scholarship;
- provide high-caliber teaching of quality and current curricula;
- cultivate meaningful interaction between students and a qualified faculty; and
- produce graduates who have achieved specified learning goals.

“AACSB sets the global standard for business school accreditation,” said Dean Ron Shiffler. “I congratulate the faculty and staff on a job well done; I especially thank those serving on the AACSB Task Force.” The Task Force included Mary Hazeldean, chair, Tony Barilla, Jim Davis, Trey Denton, Leslie Fletcher, Chuck Hartz, John Hatem, Mike McDonald, Barbara Price, Cindy Randall, Ron Shiffler, Jake Simons, and Bobbie Williams.

AACSB International is recognized by the Office of Postsecondary Education of the United States Department of Education as the accrediting agency for collegiate programs in business administration and accounting.

Study to Define Football Options

Should Georgia Southern remain in the NCAA Football Championship Subdivision (FCS), formerly known as Division I-AA, COBAns figure to provide key leadership in this important decision facing the university. Bids have been solicited for a four-year study to provide insight into the answer. Once the study is begun, it should take three to six months to complete the comprehensive assessment of Georgia Southern’s readiness for FBS football, including a market assessment, allowing fans to have a voice in the process.

The study comes during a four year NCAA moratorium prohibiting movement from FCS to FBS between August 2007 and August 2011. When you’re looking at a decision of this magnitude, it’s good to have as much data as you can get,” Georgia Southern Athletic Director Sam Baker said. The time-frame coincidence of the study and moratorium offer an opportunity to collect necessary information on financial, scheduling, conference affiliation, and Title IX requirements to identify and assess implications of a potential move. Facilities figure to be a key factor in the deliberation. The 2000 additions of the Cowart and Patrick Buildings and the 2006 Bishop Fieldhouse have uniquely positioned the program for growth; yet, one of the primary requirements of moving up to the FBS-level would appear to be the need to approximately double the current 18,000 seating capacity of Paulson Stadium.

While the Eagles have won more national championships than any program in the country in Division I-AA (FCS), the study sets the stage for the University to analyze the potential level of support for FBS football from crucial stakeholders including season ticket holders, major gift donors, corporate sponsors, media partners, annual fund contributors, and key constituent groups.

Again, COBAns figure significantly in all these markets and promise to offer important leadership in these processes.
A Message from Dean Shiffler

AACSB Accreditation: Let’s put it in perspective. You will read elsewhere in this edition of the Eagle Executive about our successful re-accreditation effort that resulted in a letter from our accrediting agency, AACSB International: The Association to Advance Collegiate Schools of Business (AACSB), reaffirming our commitment to quality and our compliance with the highest academic standard in the world for business schools.

Pause with me for a minute and reread those last phrases, “commitment to quality and our compliance with the highest academic standard in the world for business schools.” To be AACSB-accredited means we are all about quality curriculum, quality students, quality faculty and staff, quality buildings and campus, quality operations, and quality alumni. You cannot earn AACSB accreditation or maintain it over the past 30 years as we have done by having mediocre curriculum, students, faculty, staff, buildings, operations, or alumni.

You are living proof that whatever we did when you were a student contributed to your current station in life and in business, and (hopefully you’d agree) that you are better off because of it.

Complying with the highest academic standards in the world sounds pretty lofty, but if the shoe fits—then we should wear it. There are more than 10,000 business schools in the world, and that number is growing. We are one of only 555 of those schools that have earned AACSB accreditation. It may seem “ho hum” to you because it seems every school claims to be accredited. But, if you are a sports fan, maybe this will help put our achievement in perspective. There are more than 1,300 colleges and universities in the U.S. recognized by the NCAA. Only 459 of those U.S. schools are accredited—less than half. Throw in all the international schools, and we can rightly say that we are in the top 5 percent of all such business schools in the world.

Quality and differentiation—that is what AACSB accreditation means to us and to you.

From the Alumni Editor

First, thank you to those who called, sent cards, or visited while I was recovering from back surgery in April. Your prayers and concerns were greatly appreciated.

When the surgeon told me recovery would be three months, I told him I had always recovered very quickly from surgery, “a ruptured appendix, carpal tunnel in both hands, three knee ‘scopes,’ and a heart attack with a stent.” He told me I had not had real surgery, only outpatient stuff. So, after six-and-one-half hours on the table and an eight-inch incision, I have now had “real surgery.” By football season, I should be back on the tennis court.

Now, to business: the airwaves are filled with messages about “change.” If you are in the ‘Boro and on campus, you have witnessed “real change.” The old ROTC administrative annex is gone and a new dorm is going up. The old dorms across from Landrum will go next. Foy is getting a super remodeling. The old Marvin Pittman School is now a new art gallery for the Betty Foy Sanders Collection and a new “black-box” theatre. The Veteran’s Memorial Parkway (a.k.a. the bypass) may be completed with four lanes by Thanksgiving. Two new hotels are almost ready on the bypass—a Holiday Inn and a Marriott Spring Suites. Several new apartment complexes have been approved and will begin construction for 2009 since builders are anticipating 20,000 students in the next few years.

Keeping up with you, our COBA grads, is our objective. We added about 1,000 this year. When you get a blue card, send it back, and if you run into any COBA folks, let me know. We are interested in the careers our folks are following. I hope to see you at Paulson Stadium this fall. The App State Mountaineers, three time national FCS champions, will be visiting us on October 18. We handled the challenge last year... let’s do it again!

Finance & Quantitative Analysis

The Center for Excellence in Financial Services sponsored Financial Services Day to help students better understand the careers available in the financial services industry and held its second annual Community Bank Symposium to foster relationships with area banks.

Information Systems

Mr. Robert C. Newman, information systems coordinator, was recently inducted into Alpha Iota Mu, the information systems honor society.

In April, 21 IS students successfully completed the Microsoft Office Specialist Certification Exam yielding 19 Excel specialists, 1 Excel expert, and 1 Access specialist. The exam is a globally recognized standard for demonstration of desktop skills and is the premier Microsoft desktop certification.

Management, Marketing, & Logistics

Alexus Woods, LIT major, has been selected to attend the 2008 Cohort of the Ronald E. McNair Post Baccalaureate Achievement Program. She will join other Georgia Southern students in conducting individual research this summer at the research institute. The McNair Program prepares and encourages students under-represented in graduate education to consider careers in college teaching and prepares them for graduate study leading to doctoral degrees. Selected students are involved in scholarly research under the supervision of faculty mentors in their research areas.

Dr. Jerry Wilson, professor of logistics and marketing, will serve as Alexus’s mentor.

The Georgia Southern University Society for Human Resource Management (SHRM) Student Chapter has earned the Merit Award. Dr. Bob Hoell, professor of management, is the club’s advisor.

School of Accountancy

Dr. Leslee Higgins, associate professor, recently passed the CFE exam and is now a Certified Fraud Examiner. She has also been named editor of The Journal of Forensic Studies in Accounting and Business.

Dr. Eddie Metrejan, associate professor, attended the SAP Curriculum Congress in Atlanta in February. The annual conference gives faculty hands-on training on various parts of SAP and provides insight into the various projects and other things that faculty from around the world are using in their classes. Dr. Metrejan also took and passed the CFE exam and is now a Certified Fraud Examiner.

In March, the Center for Forensic Studies in Accounting and Business sponsored a Construction Accounting and Law conference in Atlanta.

Chris Shehan, a junior majoring in accounting, is one of 50 candidates and two finalists from the Southern Conference for this year’s Dick Hower Trophy. Regarded by many as college baseball’s most prestigious award, the Dick Hower Trophy is given in memory of the former Florida State University All-America shortstop, major league player, and manager who died in 1987 of brain cancer.

School of Economic Development

Dr. Greg Brock, director, Center for Economic Education, recently made a presentation to the Bulloch County Board of Education. He also worked with 9th grade economics teachers at Wayne County High School. Both of these events fulfilled the Center’s mission of serving as a resource for public school economics teachers. A research paper Dr. Brock coauthored, “What Are the Costs of Being Black,” has recently been featured by The Washington Post, Atlanta Journal-Constitution, Miami Herald, and National Public Radio.

Computer Science

Computer science major Jason Veach presented his research titled, “Using Software to Teach Math Through Culture” at this year’s Honors Research Symposium. Dr. Kera Bell-Watkins, assistant professor, served as Jason’s mentor.

Information Technology

In the graduating class of 2008, Brett Herrin and Tommi Tyler, became the first Georgia Southern students to graduate the Bachelor of Science in Information Technology program. Georgia WebSIT, an online undergraduate degree program offered collaboratively by five University System of Georgia (USG) institutions, Armstrong Atlantic State University, Clayton College & State University, Georgia Southern University, Macon State College, and Southern Polytechnic State University. The program combines the resources, expertise, and technology of the five USG institutions in a key undergraduate instructional area to advance educational purpose, instructional technology, student support services, and distance education.

State-wide Water Plan

The Georgia Comprehensive State-wide Water Management Plan, approved by the 2008 General Assembly earlier this year, leaves business owners, farmers, local governments, nonprofits, and individuals wondering how it affects them and what is required for compliance. It is important to note the adopted plan is only the structure or outline by which the state will plan for current and future water resources, including addressing issues of:

• water quantity and quality (off- and instream uses),
• transfer of water within a basin and to other basins,
• reuse of sewage (reclaimed water) and grey water,
• conservation oriented pricing of water,
• water conservation practices,
• creation of reserves,
• creation of water councils for regional planning.

While the state’s growth continues to put pressure on the demand for renewable fresh water resources, the supply of fresh water is extremely limited, representing only 2.8 percent of the water on earth. As a result, the State-Wide Water Management Plan encourages businesses and industry to use more grey water or reclaimed water in the manufacturing process and to conserve drinking water for human consumption. For the most part, Georgia has never really needed to consider reusing water or reclaiming wastewater for business or industrial growth. Yet, there are many instances where Georgia industries have used reclaimed water in the manufacturing process.

One of the leaders in reclaimed water usage is our neighbor to the south, Florida. In the 1980s, the State was concerned with the disposal problem of re-claimed water resources. Yet, Florida has since learned it helps meet new growth demands for both the agriculture and manufacturing sectors. Some of the largest water reutilization projects in Florida are located in the most populated areas of Orlando, Tallahassee, and St. Petersburg.

The Coastal Rivers Water Planning and Policy Center supports the utilization of alternative water resources, including reclaimed water. While such use of reclaimed water needs careful consideration due to potentially harmful pathogens and pharmaceutical chemicals, these issues are easily overcome by compliance with industry regulatory and best management practices.

Georgia is currently in the process of finalizing the boundaries for the development of regional water planning councils. Each council will develop a water plan that addresses water resource capacities, current and future needs, and available tools, which will include reclaimed water. Looking forward, more information, guidelines, and potential incentives for using reclaimed water will be developed within the next few years.

Zandra Brasington
In partnership with corporate sponsors Wachovia, United Parcel Service (UPS), Watkins Real Estate, Primerica Financial Services, and the W. E. Carter Leadership Endowment, the College of Business Administration has created a special program for its best and brightest students. The COBA Corporate Leadership Council sponsors have funded $1,000 scholarships for each of these students and are providing leadership workshops exclusively for Council members. With COBA’s Center for Entrepreneurial Leadership faculty serving as hosts, scholars meet informally with faculty and representatives from each of the corporate sponsors. An executive from one of the companies delivers a leadership program for all scholars, after which participants are invited to join in receptions and a dinner following the final seminar. The students receiving these scholarships are referred to as Wachovia, UPS, Watkins, Primerica, and Carter Scholars, respectively; together, the thirty-five scholars form the COBA Corporate Leadership Council.
Gentry 2008 Beta Gamma Sigma Chapter Honoree

Beta Gamma Sigma (BGS), the honor society sponsored by AACSB International, presented the Zeta Delta Sorority and earned a business degree in 1995. Jenny built a successful 25 year career in banking with Wachovia holding positions as senior community banker, branch manager, dealer and finance relationship manager, and small business banking team leader. Jenny made history in 2006, becoming the first female bank president in the Savannah area, with her appointment as senior vice president and market president for Kyle Baggett; Draf tin and Tucker, LLP; Albany, presented an award to Ely. Jenny has served as chair of the board for the YMCA of Coastal Georgia, the first female to hold this title in the YMCA of Coastal Georgia’s 111-year history. She has also held board positions in Savannah South Rotary Club, the First City Club Board of Governors, the Savannah Chamber of Commerce, and The United Way. Jenny was awarded the Georgia House of Representatives Commendation Award for Community Involvement. Jenny is a 2002 graduate of Leadership Savannah, and completed the GA100 Mindful Group Women’s Leadership Program in 2004.

A colleague of Jenny’s remarked “She leads by example, and because of that, she has the respect of those who work with her.” She is extremely dedicated to her work, customers, and community. While her dedication is evident in the work she does every day to make the community a better place to live and to work, there is another side of Jenny that loves practical jokes. Jenny’s career as a prankster began in her college days when she moved all of her sorority sister’s bedroom furniture out of the KD suite and set it back up exactly as it was in the parking lot! Years later, on the commercial banking floor of Wachovia, her colleagues arrived one morning to find their restroom had been turned into a disco, complete with hot pink shag carpeting, a disco ball, door heads, posters of Saturday Night Fever, and a guest sign in book! Yes, when Jenny puts her mind to something, the outcome is always successful! 👉

MBA in the Spotlight

Michael B. Kane received his MBA from Georgia Southern in 2005 while employed in the Office of Admissions as assistant director. He later joined IBM in Atlanta as a client executive and currently covers public sector accounts, including colleges and universities, secondary schools, and local governments. In his first year with IBM, Mike completed the IBM Global Sales School and attained 100 percent performance rating. He was recently named head of the marketing focal group. His wife, Elizabeth (Liz), a Georgia Southern alumna, graduated in 2002 with a degree in justice studies and is employed with American Trust Bank, Roswell. They have a son, Brendan, who will be three in July.

From the Director

Graduate Programs Accredited

Dean Emeritus Ori James, in recent years, offered insight on accreditation. “When Georgia Southern achieved initial accreditation in 1977, there were 202 accredited institutions, all in North America. Today, there are more than 500 world-wide and only 25 percent of the business schools in the U.S. are accredited. It is interesting Georgia Southern was accredited before some prestigious universities including Rice, Duke, and Vanderbilt, among others.

As director of COBA graduate programs, it is interesting to reflect on the MBA program, originally begun in 1968 and graduating its first class in 1970. The program first received AACSB accreditation in 1981. The MAcc program, conceived as an MBA with concentration in accounting in 1995, was formally offered and first accredited in 1997. The Georgia WebMBA™ was started and accredited in January 2001.

This year, COBA’s MBA, WebMBA™, and MAcc degree programs all received positive continued accreditation from AACSB International: The Association to Advance Collegiate Schools of Business. We are very proud of this reaffirmation. AACSB is the highest level of accreditation available to business programs worldwide. Additionally, in recent visits by deans from peer institutions, all three graduate studies programs have been recognized as providing quality, affordable degrees.

Graduate Management Admission Council

Perhaps a lesser known, but equally important, consideration reflecting the quality of COBA graduate programs is our college’s full membership in one of the most prestigious associations of graduate business schools in the world, the Graduate Management Admission Council® (GMAC®). GMAC® is a not-for-profit association of graduate business schools open only to schools offering a masters program in business administration. GMAC® “owns” and administers the GMAT (Graduate Management Admission Test) annually to more than 200,000 test takers worldwide, and our students and alumni take the GMAT in order to gain admission to our programs. In addition to administering and researching the GMAT, GMAC® offers a range of courses and services to member schools.

Gaining membership in GMAC® is a difficult and rigorous process akin to accreditation by AACSB. In Georgia, the only full members of GMAC® are The University of Georgia, Georgia Tech, Georgia State, Emory, and Georgia Southern.

MBA in the Spotlight

MSAE: New Online Economics Degree

Fall 2008 will mark the beginning of a new on-line master degree program for graduate studies in the College of Business Administration. The master of science in applied economics (MSAE) will provide graduates with analytical capabilities in three concentrations, regional economic development, financial economics, and industry organization and regulation, including skills and competencies in market analysis and quantitative methods. The program’s graduates are expected to be competitive for employment in financial institutions, industry, and utility and governmental organizations engaged in private-enterprise, economic development.

The three track concentration offerings are designed to ensure graduates have broad exposure to business and governmental employment opportunities. The first track engages a rigorous introduction to statistical and econometric methods; the second includes an economic overview of industrial organization and its regulation; and, the third encompasses application of regional economic development principles.

The 30 hour master of science in applied economics course of study is designed to be completed within a calendar year by a 12-hour spring semester, 6-hour summer semester, and an additional 12-hour fall semester. Admission requirements include a bachelor degree with minimum 3.0 GPA, minimum combined GRE of 1000, and references reflecting relevant experience and achievements for potential success in graduate study. Provisional admission may be granted by interview.

Advancing your career no longer has to interrupt your professional or family life. The MSAE offers the opportunity for professionals to continue their education on-line while maintaining full-time employment anywhere in the United States, Canada, or any U.S. Military installation. For more information, contact John Brown, School of Economic Development, at (912) 478-5216 or Mike McDonald, COBA Graduate Studies, at (912) 478-5767.

MAcc: Forensic Accounting

The Masters of Accounting concentration in forensic accounting offers exciting courses and learning opportunities for students.

White Collar Crime

Don Berez’s white collar crime course featured Project Adrián, a partnership with the IRS Criminal Investigation Division offering forensic accounting students an interactive classroom experience. Special agents from Savannah, Macen, and Augusta recently traveled to Georgia Southern to work with our students. The project placed students in groups and assigned them hypothetical financial crimes, including business owners skimming funds from their company, a bar owner keeping two sets of books, a multi-filer tax scheme, and a drug trafficker, among others. Each group of students had an experienced IRS Special Agent to coach them and provide learning pointers during the exercise. Students acted as “Honorary Agents” to expose the fraud.

Expert Witnessing

In a mock trial conducted at the Bulloch County Courthouse by Tom Buckhoff’s expert witnessing class, plaintiff shareholders of Brodnax Minerals, a gold mining company, sued their accounting firm, Healy & Wallace LLP, for allegedly violating professional standards in issuing a ‘clean’ opinion on Brodnax, which had fraudulently overstated gold reserves. Bulloch County State Court Judge Gary Mikell presided, Susan Cox, Edenfield, Cox, Bruce & Classens, acted as consulting attorney for the plaintiff team, and Laura Wheaton, Brown Rountree, PC, acted as consulting attorney for the defendant team. After excellent arguments by the student teams, the jury returned a unanimous verdict absolving the accounting firm from liability in failing to detect the fraud.

Matthew Barnes (BBA, MKTG, 1986) is currently the director of relationship marketing for PGA Magazine. The golf travel market is a $28 billion market with 58 percent of consumer influence coming from professionals. Matthew is responsible for selecting the appropriate golf professionals to attend trips to individual resorts. Matthew handles every facet of the golf professional’s trip from airfare, accommodations, meals, and, of course, golf. These destinations include Jamaica, Scotland, all over the United States, and in the near future Argentina. Matthew currently resides in Atlanta and is the father of two daughters.

Latavius Powell recently joined Merrill Lynch as a financial advisor in the global wealth management division in Atlanta. Latavius is a COBA graduate who earned both his undergraduate and MBA from Southern. He is president of Phoenix Rising Toastmasters of Decatur, an international public speaking group and a member of Henry County’s Cultural Diversity Committee. Latavius was recently named one of top 50 rising stars by Atlanta Business Journal Magazine and honored by the 100 Black Men of Dekalb for his work in teaching children speaking and communication skills.

David Streets graduated Cum Laude from Georgia Southern in 1985 with a BBA in finance. Upon graduation he went to work for General Motors Acceptance Corporation (GMAC). He began his career as an Account Representative (collection agent) in the Tallahassee, FL, office. After only a year on the job, he was selected to participate in an accelerated supervisory training program. He continued up the ranks and now holds an executive level position in Hartford, CT, as a director of commercial lending. David married his high school sweetheart, Betty Carson, and they have three active boys, Dylan (13), Tyler (15), and Stephen (17).

<td>While it is easy to understand that our football team’s ranking is strongly related to wins and losses, it is harder to figure out how Georgia Southern’s academic ranking is determined. One of the variables often used in computing academic rankings is the percentage of alumni who make financial contributions to the University. The more alumni who give back, the higher our ranking. Won’t you please help us achieve our proper position in academic rankings by writing a check to “Georgia Southern” and designating it to “COBA”? Any contribution—no matter how large or small—is most appreciated!</td>

Stay tuned for Reasons 4 through 1.
The 2008 Awards of Excellence for faculty and staff were presented at a ceremony held at the Nessmith-Lane Continuing Education Building on April 18, 2008.

The Eugene M. Bishop Award for Sustained Excellence
J. Lowell Mooney

The Eugene M. Bishop Award for Sustained Excellence is awarded to the COBA professor who has demonstrated proficiency in all areas of teaching, research, and service. Lowell Mooney came to COBA in 1989 teaching management accounting and has received numerous awards for teaching, research, and service. He is a member of the Institute of Management Accountants, the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants, the Georgia Society of CPAs, and other professional organizations. Lowell is chair of the School of Accountancy’s Student Recruitment, Retention, and Placement committee and created the School Orientation and Recruiting program (SCORING) initiative identified by AACSB as one of COBA’s Best Practices.

The CIT Staff Award for Excellence
Joey Reeves

Joey Reeves, having provided almost 20 years of computing service to academia, exemplifies an extraordinary level of service, support, and leadership to the College of Information Technology. He has taught computing and understands the need for good, sound technical support. Joey has been instrumental in helping create development curriculum in the areas of IT infrastructure and networking, and, more recently, his expertise and skills were instrumental in negotiating the Dell contract for replacement of the College’s lab computers.

The Tomlinson & Bond Families Staff Award for Excellence
Paula P. Newton

“Nicki” Newton is reliable, attentive to detail, and always willing to help maintain budgets, update class schedules, and help students with scheduling as Secretary to Associate Dean Mary Hazelbine. A former department secretary for Management, Marketing, & Logistics, she continued to support the position for more than a year after moving to her current position, providing extraordinary service to COBA in recent years.

The Rutherford Award for Faculty Excellence
Ronald J. MacKinnon

Ron MacKinnon came to Georgia Southern as visiting professor and is currently working to integrate SAP into the COBA faculty in recent years.

The Martin NeSmith Faculty Award for Distinguished Service
Donna K. Fisher

Donna Fisher has provided leadership for the BBA in regional economic development program since joining the COBA faculty in 2001. With service-based learning at its core, REDV students have become highly visible in programs throughout Southeast Georgia. Prior to joining COBA, Donna served as a Peace Corps volunteer, working extensively in Brazil and other countries.

The W.A. & Emma Lou Crider Award for Excellence in Teaching
Michael Reksulak

Michael Reksulak’s commitment to teaching is leverage by experiences he brings to the classroom. A former student wrote, “Dr. Reksulak made a difference in my life in a way that no other educator had been able to do in eighteen years. I commend him for his successes in the classroom, and for helping students gain so much more than the knowledge he passes on in his lectures.”

The CIT Award for Outstanding Research
Wen-Ran Zhang

Wen Zhang came to Georgia Southern from Lamar University as a full professor with internationally recognized expertise in data mining and bipolar logic. His Yin-Yang theory and related works are widely published and recognized on Scholarpedia. Wen serves on the Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers (IEEE) technical committee on granular computing and is a reviewer for the IEEE Transactions on Fuzzy Systems and International Journal of Information Sciences.

The T. J. Morris, Jr., Faculty Award for Outstanding Research
John T. King

John King’s current research interests include analysis of credit card use and informational issues associated with sale of intellectual property. His research has been published in the Journal of Private Enterprise, Journal of Cultural Economics, Financial Services Review, and Topics in Theoretical Economics. Before joining COBA in 2002, he taught economics at Duke, Elon, and Vanderbilt.

The Bank of America Faculty Award
P. Eddie Metrejean

Eddie Metrejean’s teaching and research interests are in accounting information systems and auditing, where he has published a variety of articles in accounting, business, and taxation journals. Eddie is currently working to integrate SAP into the accounting curriculum and serves on the School of Accountancy’s assessment committee, having provided key input into AACSB accounting accreditation. He is a member of the American Accounting Association, American Institute of Certified Public Accountants, Georgia Society of CPAs, and the Society of Louisiana CPAs.
of Excellence

Faculty awards are based upon a variety of characteristics including research activities, teaching excellence, distinguished service, and development potential.

The Charles R. Gibbs Faculty Award

Jerry Burke received his BSBA in economics, MBA and MS in decision and information sciences, and PhD in operations management from the University of Florida. Over the past three years, Jerry has distinguished himself in teaching graduate and undergraduate courses in operations management and developing a new course for the OM emphasis. He is a member of the governance and student resources committee, serves as a referee for several academic journals, and participates in University-sponsored “Conversations with Professors” and “Operation Move-In” programs to assist incoming students. Jerry is also active in the Statesboro community, often seen flipping pancakes during the Kiwanis Fair each fall.

The Brown & Williamson Faculty Award

Linda G. Mullen

Linda Mullen, assistant professor of marketing, is regarded as one of the best professors in the department. She is extremely student-oriented and spends countless hours mentoring, creating résumés, and finding jobs for students. An innovative teacher who has captured the attention of her students through unconventional techniques, Linda’s leadership was instrumental in launching the new Center for Excellence in Sales and Management.

The Sonny Butler CIT Award of Excellence

Linda Carwell

Linda Carwell, secretary to the CIT Dean, is recipient of the inaugural Sonny Butler Award, honoring the memory of Associate Professor Sonny Butler. Butler is remembered by students and colleagues as a fully-engaged and caring instructor, advisor, career coach, scholar, and friend. As founding secretary of CIT, Linda is fully engaged in the lives of CIT students, faculty, and staff. Often going above and beyond to attend to details, she is the glue that holds CIT together while warming the hearts of all she encounters.

Ron and Barbara Shiffler Instructor Award

Janet Moss

Janet Moss joined COBA in 2000, having previously taught at Delta State University, Mississippi, and managing human resources in industry. In teaching business statistics, management and organizational behavior, and human resource management, her initiative, dedication to students, and dependability earn her the Ron and Barbara Shiffler Instructor Award.

The M. Albert Burke Faculty Award

Ioannis Barkoulas

The A. Burke Faculty Fellowship is an endowed faculty fellowship awarded annually to the “Most Valuable Player” among the finance faculty. Ioannis “John” Barkoulas received his BBA from the Athens School of Economics and Business Science, Greece; MBA from West Texas A&M; and PhD in economics from Boston College. He taught as a visiting assistant professor at West Virginia University and Boston College and on faculty at Louisiana Tech University and the University of Tennessee. Since joining the faculty at Georgia Southern in 2003, he has distinguished himself as a prolific researcher with thirty-five papers in refereed academic journals and a dynamic finance professor with the reputation for intensive assignments reflecting real-world situations.

Dean’s Citation for Student Engagement

Kathleen H. Grubin, Aid to Students

Kathleen Grubin involves students in independent study and research on behalf of organizations. Her students gain experience in gathering, analyzing, and disseminating information and enjoy traveling to present their findings. Kathleen has arranged funding to take students to Toronto, Canada, to participate in retailing projects; conducted mock interviews with Target representatives on campus, and solicited retailers to join in the Logistics, Retailing, & IT Career Fair.

Tracy Ann H. Nanny, Engagement and Concern for Students

A native of Kingston, Jamaica, Tracy Ann Harry’s warm and generous nature make her a favorite of students and colleagues. Under her leadership as advisor, the Economics Club introduced student research seminars leading to several students presenting their work at professional conferences. Her academic specialties are economics of education and economic development in which she pursues an active collaborative research agenda.

Kari B. Mannott, Logistics, Retailing, & Information Technology Career Fair

In his capstone logistics course, Kari Mannott takes students in small groups to lunch to get to know them better and help guide them in securing employment with logistics firms. Each semester, he organizes a Career Fair for Logistics, Retailing, & IT students. His industry contacts, coupled with quality logistics majors, have lead several logistics employers to regard Georgia Southern as one of the best schools from which to recruit. Numerous alumni point to him as the person who has helped launch their careers.

Cindy H. Randall, Beta Gamma Sigma

Cindy Randall has served as advisor, secretary, and treasurer for Beta Gamma Sigma National Honor Society since 1999, annually coordinating the National Student Leadership Forum and Awards Banquet. This summer she will join the SOAR team in advising and registering incoming freshmen and transfer students. Cindy regularly teaches quantitative analysis and consistently strives to make the subject accessible and relevant to students.

Camille F. Rogers, IS Internship Coordinator

Camille Rogers consistently earns high evaluations in the Department of Information Systems. As the department’s internship and co-op coordinator, she logs hundreds of miles each year doing on-site evaluations and ensuring internship and co-op students are fulfilling their obligations to employers. Bill’s impact on students may best be summed up as “shock and awe,” consistent with her upbringing as a military brat, because she fully engages students both in and beyond the classroom.

Paige L. Ruter, Student Success

Paige Ruter quickly and consistently dispels student fears and trepidations to develop an excellent working relationship and help them succeed. Students appreciate her organization, clarification of difficult concepts, enthusiasm, and willingness to help. One student wrote, “She spent a great deal of time helping me learn the material and helped me with other courses. She is by far the most enthusiastic and helpful teacher I’ve ever had.” Another student commented, she is “always available, very helpful, and kind.”

Edward H. Sibbold, Center for Excellence in Financial Services

Ed Sibbold’s practical experience and classroom skills have made him a popular instructor with students. He coordinates internships for Finance majors and serves as faculty advisor for the Student Finance Association, translating his professional background and credence with area bankers into opportunities for students.

Stephanie R. Sipa, Innovative and Creative Teaching

As one of the most innovative professors in the school of Accountancy, Stephanie Sipa challenges students, makes learning fun, and receives excellent teaching evaluations. Her three minute expert activity makes class participation fun. She has an open door policy for all students and enjoys advising. Stephanie teaches legal environment of business, the new fraud and society forensic course, and will soon be involved teaching the new first year experience course.

COBA’s Business Advisory Council

The College of Business Administration recently held regional Business Advisory Council meetings in Savannah (April 3) and Atlanta (May 6). The regional meetings provide an update and planning opportunity for Council members on the College’s strategic plan, presented by Dean Ron Shiffler, marketing plan, presented by Associate Dean Susan Williams, and financial resource plan, presented by COBA Development Officer Linda Wilke. Advisory Council President Lee Tompkins updated council members on plans for the Annual Fall Meeting, to be held in Statesboro on September 26, the weekend of the Georgia Southern–Wofford game.

Spring Commencement

On Saturday May 10, 2008, Georgia Southern held its spring graduation exercises at Paulson Stadium honoring more than 2,393 graduating students, one of the largest graduating classes on record. Twenty-four percent of those graduating came from COBA and CIT. A remarkable commencement address by Georgia U.S. Senator Johnny Isakson preceded the ceremonial flight of Challenger who took to the air on the last stanza of Georgia Southern’s alma mater. With a great sense of pride, the flight symbolized our newest Eagles as they, too, take flight into their future endeavors.

After graduation, a reception was held for CIT and COBA graduates and their families in the atrium of the CIT Building where sandwiches, drinks, and cake were served. CIT and COBA faculty mingled with the crowd, meeting the proud parents of their former students. The students and parents alike complimented Georgia Southern and its faculty and staff.

2008 University Alumni Awards Dinner

Two College of Business Administration graduates were among ten awardees recognized at the annual Alumni Awards Dinner held April 5 in the Nessmith-Lane ballroom with Terry Harvin, president of the Georgia Southern University Alumni Association, presiding. Olivia Suggs Flanagan (BBA, accounting, 1969) received the College of Business Administration Alumna Award and Matthew H. Janofsky (BBA, information systems, 1984) received the College of Information Technology Award, both presented by Ron Shiffler, dean of COBA and acting dean of CIT, after dinner and music presented by Karla Qualls.

Olivia S. Flanagan, recipient of the COBA Alumna Award, is a native of Butler, Georgia, a small town west of Macon, where she grew up playing basketball on a state championship team and learning bookkeeping in her father’s Ford dealership. She began her career as an accountant with Arthur Andersen and became a tax manager for Cousins Properties, Atlanta, before joining Bristol Development Corporation, a commercial real estate development firm in 1977 and later serving as a vice president and manager of her own company, Flanagan and Waycaster Construction, until her retirement in 2000. She has been a member of the COBA’s Business Advisory Council since 1988.

Olivia is an excellent golfer and has served as president and board member of The Georgia Women’s Golf Association and serves on the women’s tournament, finance, and handicap committees for the Georgia State Golf Association and volunteers as a golf rules official. She is an ex-officio member of the board of Georgia Golf Hall of Fame, and a member of the Doublegate and Stonebridge Country Clubs. Having lived in Atlanta for 45 years, Olivia has just recently moved to Albany.

Matthew H. Janofsky, recipient of the CIT Alumni Award, was born in Boston, Massachusetts, moving with his family to Gainesville, Georgia, at a young age. After high school, Matt gained employment as a bank teller before enrolling at Georgia Southern with the idea of a finance degree. Active in the Marketing Society and president of Kappa Alpha fraternity, Matt enjoyed college life, learned to fish, and became interested in computers. He earned a BBA degree in information systems in 1984 and began his career with Unisys programming teller machines.

In 1990, he joined COIN Banking Systems, Inc. and, later, became an independent contractor for Altel, BellSouth, Coca-Cola, Delta Airlines, GE Capital Corporation, UPS, and The Home Depot. Then, in 2004, Matt joined a new company, Gladiator Technology Services, a division of Jack Henry and Associates, as vice president for application development, where he presently serves as manager of the development department and oversees Ivan Internet Security Correlation Engine, the system that monitors malicious internet traffic targeted at community banks’ computer systems.

Throughout his career, Matt has maintained close ties with the College of Business Administration and the IS program. He has been a regular participant at Information Systems reunions, serves on the Information Systems steering committee, and has underwritten the Matthew Janofsky Scholarship for IS majors for more than ten years. His proudest contribution to the University will come next fall when his son, Michael, will enter Georgia Southern as a freshman.

Veteran Banker Honored

In 1970, became president of the bank in 1974, and served as chair of the board in 1991 of what is today a vibrant, growing community bank holding company with 79 bank employees and $310 million in assets. Frank Rezier, chair of the Board of Directors of the bank and FMB Equibanc, Inc., holding company for the bank, presented a Resolution of Appreciation commending his 40 years of service, retirement from active board service, and election to director emeritus at the 60th Annual Meeting of the Bank on April 24.

COBANs Make 40 Under 40 List

COBA alumnus Billy G Tyson, 1994 University Friendship Award recipient, was recently elected director emeritus of the Farmers & Merchants Bank board, Statesboro. His retirement from the active board culminates more than 40 years of service to the bank and the financial services industry. Tyson began his career in banking as a cashier in 1968 following brief employment with the railroad while getting his education at Georgia Southern. The bank had six employees and $2 million in assets at the time. Tyson joined the Board of Directors

Bill Howard, president, Claude Howard Lumber Company; Travis Myers, accountant, Dubuis; Hickman, Hill & Cannon; and Rod Williams, partner, Dubuis-Williams General Contractors received the “40 Under 40” recognition by the Business Report & Journal. Vivian received her accounting degree from Georgia Southern in 1993, while Bill and Rod received construction degrees with minors in business in 1992 and 1995 respectively. Congratulations to these honorees!
