Price Selected Fulbright Scholar

The U.S. Department of State and J. William Fulbright Foreign Scholarship Board recently announced Barbara A. Price, professor of quantitative analysis in the College of Business Administration at Georgia Southern University, has been awarded a Fulbright Scholar grant to lecture in the Erasmus MBA and undergraduate programs, The University of Debrecen, Hungary, in Spring 2011. She will be joining the Faculty of Economics and Business Administration at The University of Debrecen to extend the international content of COBA’s programs for graduate and undergraduate business education.

The Fulbright Program, the flagship international educational exchange program sponsored by the U.S. government, is designed to increase mutual understanding between the people of the United States and other countries. The program is administered by the Institute of International Education and funded by the Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs, State Department, which receives an annual appropriation from the Cultural Affairs, State Department, which is funded by the Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs, State Department. The program is administered by the Department of State’s Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs.

Since establishment in 1946 under legislation introduced by the late U.S. Senator J. William Fulbright of Arkansas, the Fulbright Program has given approximately 300,000 students, scholars, teachers, artists, and scientists the opportunity to study, teach, and conduct research; exchange ideas; and contribute to finding solutions to shared international concerns. Forty Fulbright alumni from eleven countries have been awarded the Nobel Prize, and seventy-five alumni have received Pulitzer Prizes. The program operates in more than one hundred, fifty-five countries worldwide.

Recipients of Fulbright grants are selected on the basis of academic or professional achievement, as well as demonstrated leadership potential in their fields. Dr. Price previously served as an exchange professor in computing and quantitative methods at Deakin University, Australia, in 1992. Her teaching has been recognized with the Kenneth L. Stanley Outstanding WebMBA Faculty Award for the Gerogia WebMBA program and Rutherford Award for Excellence in Teaching and Service in the Georgia Southern MBA program.

Dr. Price chose Hungary because her grandparents emigrated from Hungary, before settling in western Pennsylvania between 1906 and 1914. In the summer of 2008, she had an opportunity to participate in a Fulbright-Hays Seminar on the tradition and transformation in Hungary and the Czech Republic, laying a foundation for her selection to Hungary by the board.

Dr. Price has had numerous international travel opportunities, including Hungary, the Czech Republic, Australia, Guatemala, Honduras, and Jamaica. ♦

Battipaglia Visits COBA

Joe Battapaglia, financial market strategist for Stifel Nicolaus and chief investment officer at Washington Crossing Advisors, spoke at Georgia Southern in October. Mr. Battapaglia, former chair of investment policy at Wall Street’s Ryan, Beck & Company, has more than 30 years of financial experience, including Wall Street’s Gruntal & Company and Enkis & Company, along with Exxon Corporation. He is a former trustee of the Securities Industry Institute, the Security Industry Association’s premier leadership and management education program.

Mr. Battapaglia is featured frequently on national television, particularly CNBC and Fox News. He is interviewed regularly by The New York Times, The Wall Street Journal, and business publications in which his market views are often quoted.

In his presentation, Battapaglia described the global economic environment today as an “immense credit problem,” with “global debt at $210 trillion, it is 323 percent of global GDP of $65 trillion,” inferring the sovereign debt crisis has a “stranglehold” on global economic growth. In the U.S., where the debt to GDP ratio was 83 percent in FY 2009 and 94 percent for FY 2010, the economic challenge is employment, as labor and capital mobility of U.S. technology and business models create intense competition from developing nations. China’s manufacturing sector was cited as an example of that imbalance, contributing to a destabilized global currency regime.

Battapaglia graduated Phi Beta Kappa in economics from Boston College and earned his MBA at the Wharton Graduate School of Business, University of Pennsylvania. ♦

New Provost

Georgia Southern University President, Dr. Brooks Keel, recently announced Dr. William (Ted) Moore will join Georgia Southern as provost and vice president for academic affairs on April 1, 2011. Dr. Moore is currently vice president for finance and planning and chief financial officer at the University of South Carolina, where he holds the David and Esther Berlinberg Distinguished Professorship in the Darla Moore School of Business. He is responsible for the areas of Business Affairs, Facilities, Law Enforcement & Safety, Budget Office, Bursar and Controller, Information Technology, and Community and Government Relations. At the state level, he leads the strategic planning for the University of South Carolina System, including oversight of Focus Carolina, a system-wide planning initiative.

Dr. Moore earned his Ph.D. from Virginia Polytechnic Institute, better known as Virginia Tech, in 1982 and maintains an active research agenda in the areas of capital investment analysis, asset pricing, risk measurement, and financial market microstructure. He served as executive editor of the Journal of Financial Research from 2000 to 2005 and has been awarded a number of teaching, research, and professor awards at the University of South Carolina, including the University’s most prestigious teaching award and its award for outstanding research. During his 24-year career at USC, Dr. Moore has served as interim provost and executive vice president for academic affairs, vice president for planning, vice provost for academic affairs, and associate provost for budget and operations.

Dr. Moore served in the United States Army from 1968-1977 and was awarded the Purple Heart while serving as an infantryman in Vietnam. He is married to Linda T. Moore, who has enjoyed a career as an attorney specializing in health care law. ♦
A Message from Dean Shiffer

In public, I am often asked how things are going in the College of Business Administration. In doing so, most people are politely engaging me in conversation and giving me a 30-sec opportunity to play cheerleader for the college.

Since I may not have an opportunity to meet you in person, I thought I would share with you what I tell folks about COBA and Georgia Southern.

Depending on the circumstances and with whom I am speaking, I choose one of the following three or four main themes that I have been delivering for years.

First are our premier programs. Without question, we have become a national leader in the field of forensic accounting. While not ignoring our responsibility to develop certified public and management accountants, we offer today’s undergraduate and graduate accounting students a forensic accounting track consisting of five courses. We have one of the deepest—if not the deepest—programs in the U.S. in terms of curriculum.

We started the Center for Forensic Studies in Accounting and Business to make better connections between the university and practitioners. The Center runs an annual fraud conference, which is now in its fifth year and competes with one other conference as the “major” forensic accounting conference in the country.

Another premier program is our logistics program. At the undergraduate level, we continue to support the intermodal transportation sector with high quality graduates who have a strong work ethic. We are a preferred campus for recruitment by many well-known companies. At the graduate level, we launched our first Ph.D. program in logistics and supply chain management. This program will raise our visibility nationally in research and begin to supply academe with newly minted professors who will teach in universities across the state and the country. I have already heard from two dean colleagues who said they would hire our doctoral graduates right now, if we had any!

Second, I talk about our success in online graduate education. The Georgia WebMBA program celebrated its tenth anniversary this fall and is bigger, better, and stronger than ever. We have more than 300 students currently in the program and have added a sixth school to the original consortium to help us meet demand. We regularly win awards for quality and affordability and continue to attract a higher quality business professional into the program. The average number of years of work experience is 10+ and the average age of our students is in the low- to mid-30s. We sport an 86 percent graduation rate, too. Outstanding!

Our success with the WebMBA program led us to move the entire Master of Science in Applied Economics (MSAE) degree program online. We are now one of the best—if not the best—online masters degree program in economics. Enrollments continue to grow and the quality of applicants is superb. The average GMAT score is 600.

Hopefully, we will launch online versions of the Masters in Accountancy degree and the Executive MBA degree next fall. We expect both programs to benefit from lessons learned in the WebMBA and MSAE programs.

Third, we have several programs on the cusp of breaking out. The entrepreneurship program is making tremendous strides toward becoming an interdisciplinary effort on campus and is attracting interest in the community as well. It will not be long before you will be reading about its successes on these pages.

Our sales program recently received certification from the Professional Society of Sales & Marketing Trainers, and our retailing program completed a partnership agreement, only the second in the nation, with Toys “R” Us to be its preferred educational partner in the Southeast.

The Information Systems Department is hitching its wagon to an enterprise resource planning application known as SAP. We are one of only two SAP University Alliance schools in the Southeast that offer an intensive two-week program that enables students to graduate as certified SAP professionals.

Finally, I would be remiss if I failed to mention the growth of our banking curriculum. The Center for Excellence in Financial Services organizes an annual banking symposium, which has grown in scope and visibility.

As you can see, I have so much to talk about I often do not know where to begin. Reading about all these great programs and accomplishments should make you proud to be an Eagle! Please let us hear from you and please support the Eagle Executive Society, our annual COBA giving program.

Ronald E. Shiffer

From the Alumni Editor

Many, many years ago when I was young, a very popular radio newsman—yes, newsman, not person—Gabriel Heatter, always began his news broadcast by saying, “Ah, there is good news tonight.” I can begin by saying there is good news at Georgia Southern. We have a new president who is a really good guy, the option is back and football is fun again, and The Princeton Review has named COBA as one of the 301 best business schools for the fifth year in a row—remember, the U.S. has about 1,800 business schools and colleges! Sounds like good news to me. And, on a personal note, I now have a new right knee. When we flew to Texas recently, I set off the pat down, however!

Now, to business, COBA has more than 19,000 alumni, but it is still a real problem to get most of you to fill in the blue cards. It is really hard to understand—who those who tell me how much they enjoy the Alumniville section of the paper and seeing what their classmates are doing are many times the ones who did not send in their blue cards. Hard to follow their logic—“It is great to know what others are doing career-wise, but I do not want anyone to know what I do.” Isn’t there a bit of a contradiction here?

It is hard for one old guy to keep up with more than 19,000 alums. It would really be so helpful if you would tell me what your friends are doing. I do not put your name in the Eagle Executive if you do not want it there, but it really, really helps to know what your careers are. The accreditation folks are always interested in what our grads do with their degrees.

As I look over my alumni list, it is also very interesting and discouraging to see so many who are doing well but never make a contribution. Tuition only pays a portion of the cost of an education. The proportion of education funds from legislative tax dollars gets smaller every year. I find it hard to believe that $50 for the Eagle Executive Society would cause serious harm to most budgets.

If you think seriously about your experience here and your current career, can you honestly say that you cannot spare the $50 membership fee? Was Georgia Southern such a bad experience that you are not interested in the welfare of your alma mater? Think about it—didn’t Georgia Southern help you get where you are now?

Best regards,

Finance & Quantitative Analysis

In November, Ednilson Bernardes, represented the U.S. in the International Purchasing Research (IPS) meeting held in the Politecnico Di Milano, Italy. Formed in 2008, the IPS team scholars, from Canada, Finland, France, Germany, Ireland, Italy, the Netherlands, Spain, Sweden, the United Kingdom, and the United States, investigate supply management strategies, capabilities, and performance around the globe. Also, Ed, along with co-authors from George Mason University and Technion Israel Institute of Technology, will present “New Product Development and Supply Network for Sustainable Transportation” at the Decision Sciences Institute session on Entrepreneurship and Operations Strategy.

Information Systems

IS faculty and students attended a North Carolina/ South Carolina Chapter ASUG: America’s SAP Users’ Group meeting in December at BMW Manufacturing Co., LLC, in Greer, SC. The meeting was sponsored by Diagonal Consulting, Rimini Street, Optimal Solutions, Assima Inc., and Extrinsic LLC.

Management, Marketing, & Logistics

Steve Rutner, director, PhD Program in Logistics and Intermodal Transportation, graduated from the United States Army War College in conjunction with his 2008–2010 deployment in the Iraq war. He received a master of strategic studies degree. The prestigious college accepts fewer than one percent of Army officers and the graduation rate is typically around 60 percent.

Tim Jahnke, CEO of Elkay Manufacturing, spoke at COBA’s Society of Human Resource Management meeting about unique career opportunities for human resource majors. His presentation focused on how human resources provides an opportunity to observe and understand a business and a foundation to move up the corporate ladder. He offered tips on how students pursuing a degree in human resources can distinguish themselves in the tough job market and gain experience through internships. Mr. Jahnke concluded, “Without human resource training or experience, it would have been quite difficult to achieve and execute the CEO position.”

School of Accountancy

Dwight Sneatmen, associate professor, is one of 24 CPAs in the state to be accepted in the Georgia Society of CPAs Leadership Academy, a leadership/management training program held bi-annually.

The Zeta Delta Chapter, Georgia Southern University, was recognized as a host chapter for approximately 275 schools and chapters of Beta Alpha Psi internationally at its national meeting in San Jose, CA, in August. More than 1,000 students and faculty from around the world attended the meetings which provided training and seminars on chapter organization, professional development, and career services.

Georgia Southern alumnus Don Daniels, vice president-controller, JetBlue Airways, secured the air travel to San Jose. Don met students in the concourse at John F. Kennedy Airport in New York, gave them a behind-the-scenes tour, including the tower, and took them to dinner during their layover.

Cheryl Metrejean, associate professor, and Eddie Metrejean’s, assistant professor, son, Steven, is a member of the American Boychoir, a prestigious national choir of approximately 40 boys, grades 4 through 8, who attend the American Boychoir School in Princeton, NJ. They tour the U.S. and world singing beautiful music and recently came to Statesboro to present a fabulous concert at the First United Methodist Church.

School of Economic Development

Dr. William A. Ampomah, assistant professor, was invited to participate in preparing the second European Report on Development, launched by the European Union, focused on economic growth in Africa. He also assisted in drafting the first report launched for the European Development Days in Stockholm, Sweden in October 2009.

Mike Callaghan (Econ, 2008 and MS, Financial Economics, Illinois State) co-authored an article, “The Effect of the Kyoto Protocol on Carbon Dioxide Emissions,” in the Journal of Economics and Finance with former professor Risa Kumazawa. Mike is now employed with Fidelity Bank as a mortgage analyst, and Risa is a professor of economics and quantitative sciences at Duquesne University, Pittsburgh.

Donna Fisher, associate professor, Simone Charles, assistant professor in the Jiann-Ping Hsu College of Public Health, Robert Shanafelt, associate professor of sociology and anthropology, and 10 students embarked on a three-week “study abroad” trip to Botswana, Africa, this past summer. They took a 15-hour direct flight from Atlanta to Johannesburg, South Africa, then traveled over land to Gaborone, Botswana’s capital, to the University of Botswana.

Dr. Fisher described the adventure, “I taught a micro-finance course, exploring product line expansion, funding partnerships, and export potentials. Dr. Charles taught a course on environmental sustainability. We all participated in a number of cultural events including a safari, World Cup game, and visit to a traditional Botswana village.”

Students included on the trip were Sharre Ashford, Patti Jo Brown, Holly Delp, Jackson Head, Britt Lanier, Alyssa Oravec, Maegan Rainwater, Samantha Smith, Silvia Tamminen, and Jordan Tompkins. Trip sponsors included the Georgia Southern Center for International Studies, Office of Student Leadership and Civic Engagement, and School of Economic Development.

Homecoming Professors for a Day

This year marked the fourth annual COBA alumni Professor for a Day event at Homecoming. Alumni were invited to come back to campus and spend Friday in class as guest professors to share their real world experiences, along with insights into their own various areas of expertise. The guest professors stressed the importance of mastering the content provided by regular professors. Visiting professors were honored with an appreciation luncheon on campus. A special thanks to those who participated, including Jessica Hood, a project manager for the Liberty County Development Authority responsible for recruiting industry, organizing and conducting visits, and providing assistance to existing industry, graduated from Georgia Southern in 2007 with a degree in economics and a minor in regional economic development. Jessica is also a member of the Georgia Economic Developers Association;

Lauren Medina, employed with Family Connection-Communities in Schools of Alabama as a grants manager, graduated from Georgia Southern in 2007 with degrees in economics and Spanish language and literature, and then went on to the University of Georgia for a masters degree in public policy analysis and non-profit management.

J. Dan Speight, Jr., vice chair and chief financial and operating officer of State Bank and Trust Company, Macon and Atlanta, which has recently grown to $2.7 billion in assets with 22 offices and 460 employees across middle Georgia. Dan earned a BBA in management, cum laude, from Georgia Southern in 1979 and a law degree from the Walter F. George School of Law at Mercer University in 1982. He began his professional career in private law practice as a member of the State Bar of Georgia. He entered banking in the mid-80’s, and, during his career, has served as president, Community Bankers Association of Georgia; director, Georgia Bankers Association; chair, Georgia Bankers Association Community Banking Committee; and director, Independent Community Bankers Association of America.

Stapleton Authors Text

Professor Emeritus Rick Stapleton (M&M&S) has published a textbook, Business Voyages: The book’s tagline, “Set sail for a better world,” illustrates its premise to provide a must-read chronicle for those seeking to recover from the economic chaos gripping the U.S. and the world.

Tracy Ham Inducted into CFL Hall of Fame

Tracy Ham was inducted into the Canadian Football League Hall of Fame in Regina, Saskatchewan Providence, Canada, this past summer, along with former CFL greats Don Narcisse, Elfrid Payton, Bob Cameron, and league builder Joe Pistilli, all honored in the 2010 class.

Tracy, now a Southeast accounts executive with Sony Electronics, had a 13-year career in the CFL from 1987-1999. He threw for 40,534 yards, ran for another 8,043 yards, and scored 284 touchdowns while playing for the Edmonton Eskimos, Toronto Argonauts, Baltimore Stallions, and Montreal Alouettes, surpassing his more than 5,757 yards passing, 3,212 yards rushing, and 34 touchdown college career at Georgia Southern, which led to his induction into the College Football Hall of Fame in 2007. Playing with Edmonton in 1989, Tracy was the league’s Most Outstanding Player and in 1995 helped Baltimore win the Grey Cup, the equivalent of the NFL’s Super Bowl.

Twenty-five years ago, it was Tracy who hooked up with Frankie Johnson for a touchdown with 10 seconds remaining to give Georgia a 19-15 victory over Furman in its first national championship title. The next year, the Eagles made another successful championship run under Tracy’s leadership with the triple option offense. Paul Johnson, offensive coordinator, who installed the triple option offense in 1984 under Erk Russell’s direction, says, “Ham could change the outcome of a game faster than anyone I’ve ever coached.”

Ham’s wife, Valerie, and their sons, Tracy II and Caleb, joined former Eagle teammates Ricky Harris, Herman Barron, Robert Baker, and former Southern basketball player Mike Curry at the ceremony in Saskatoon. Tracy concludes, “You realize a lot of people contributed to your success. I’m very grateful to have been a part of the puzzle.”

Ori James Scholarship

The Beta Gamma Sigma business honorary society was created in 1982 under the leadership of Dean Ori James when Dean James passed away in 2009, Beta Gamma Sigma created a scholarship fund in his name to commemorate his organization and support of the business honorary society.

In order to fund the scholarship, COBA alumnus J. T. Marburger donated the use of an Atlanta Braves suite at Turner Field as a fundraiser this summer. Through the generosity of alumni, friends, and supporters, the effort raised more than $5,000 toward the scholarship fund.

SOA’s 15th Annual EIR

Mr. Clarence Davis, former CFO and COO of the American Institute of CPAs, was the featured speaker for the 2010 School of Accountancy 15th Annual Executive in Residence program in October. Davis’s career took him from a farm to Wall Street, from a CPA firm to industry, from broadcasting to college professor, and from consultant to author. His presentation centered on the importance of financial literacy in dealing with the expansion of government’s threat to business.

COBA Business Advisory Council

The College of Business Administration hosted its 23rd Annual Fall Advisory Board Meeting on October 29-30 on the Georgia Southern campus. Chair Lee Thompsons welcomed new member Greg V. Pressley, CSS, Inc., consultant and certified Oracle Network Partner, and members in attendance, Hoke Brannon, Southwest Airlines, retired; Don Callaway, USMC, retired; Nancy Herring, professor, retired; Billy Hickman, Dabbs, Hickman, Hill & Cannon; Kelly Jones, accountant, retired; Tommy Jones, Jones, Jones, Davis, & Associates; Doug Lambert, Southeastern Hospitality Services; Matt Lane, Gen Cap America; Luxure Lord, Lord Eye Center; Grey Meybohm, Meybohm Realtors; Phil Moore, Porter Keade Moore; Toby Moreau, BB&T Corporation; Robin Rich, Automation Systems and Controls; Bob Sanders, UBS Financial Services; Bill Sprague, Savannah Smooth Roads; and Kenny Stone, attorney.

COBA Dean Ronald Shiffer presented the Dean’s Report highlighting record fall enrollment of 19,691, a 3.2 percent increase from Fall 2009; proposals for a new on-line Executive MBA and Web Master of Accounting program for the college; the Web MBAs celebrating its tenth anniversary; COBA being named to The Princeton Review’s “Best Business School” list for the fifth consecutive year; and, COBA’s leadership in developing the “City Campus” and preparing for the University’s future Capital Campaign.

The traditional breakout and report sessions followed with strategic plan and 2012-13 AACSB Accreditation discussions and feedback. The two-day program ended at with a disappointing football game in Paulson Stadium against Samford University.

School of Accountancy Advisory Council

The School of Accountancy hosted its annual Advisory Council Meeting in the Professional Development Center, CIT building, in October. The executive committee, Phil Moore, chair; Billy Hickman, vice chair; Jim Creamer, faculty development liaison; and Tim Veal, student recruitment, retention, and placement coordinator, recognized the council for its generous support of officers and leadership Beta Alpha Psi, the accounting fraternity, attending the August 2010 national meeting, San Francisco, as a host chapter. The members in attendance included Greg Cashman, Smith & Howard, Atlanta (John Lucht); Jim Creamer, Draffin & Tucker, Albany; Alex Gambill, Pricewaterhouse Coopers, Charlotte; Billy Griffin, Hancock Askew & Co., Savannah (Mike McCarthy); Richard Henry, Holland, Henry & Bromley; Savannah; Bill Herring, WACO Fire & Casualty Insurance, retired, Statesboro; Billy Hickman, Dabbs, Hickman, Hill & Cannon, Statesboro; Raiford Hodges, Dabbs, Hickman, Hill & Cannon, Statesboro; Alex Knight, Habif, Arsegot & Wynn, Atlanta; Charles Martin, Moore Stephens & Tiller, Brunswick; Phil Moore, Porter Keade Moore, Atlanta; Greg Morgan, Mauldin & Jenkins, Atlanta; and, Tim Veal, Nichols Cauley & Associates, Dublin. In other business, the group agreed to have Accounting Advisory Council members participate in the search for a new director of the School of Accountancy and revised two items of the by-laws.

Moore Distinguished Service Awardee

The Southern Conference announced, in June, that Phil Moore (ACCT, 1982) was awarded its 2010 Distinguished Service Award, in recognition of his contribution to the institution. The award was presented by Carolina Ford Dealers at the Southern Conference Honors Dinner, Hilton Head Island, SC, this summer.

The Distinguished Service Award program was started in 2002 as a way for the Conference to recognize individuals from its member institutions who have contributed significantly to all aspects of the university. Joining Moore as this year’s honorees include G. A. Sywassink, Appalachian State; George and Marie Barnett, College of Charleston; William (Bill) F. Schupp, The Citadel; Janet H. Wilson, Davidson; Wes and Cathy Elingburg, Elon; Colonel and Mrs. F. Pelzer Barry, Jr., Furman; Pat Hierscher, UNC Greensboro; Lynn Bogg, Samford; Robert T. (Bob) Davis, Chattanooga, Steve White, Western Carolina; and John Banknight, Wofford.

A 1982 graduate of Georgia Southern, Moore is a managing partner in Porter Keade Moore, LLP in Atlanta. He has been a long-time member of the Georgia Southern University Athletic Foundation Board and served as its president from 2007 until 2009. Under his leadership the Foundation effected a name change to the Georgia Southern University Athletic Foundation and constructed several athletic facilities. Moore played an integral role in leading the organization through a two branding initiatives, “Rings and Diplomas” and “For all the Right Reasons.” He was recognized as the College of Business Administration Alumnus of the Year in 2001 and Georgia Southern Outstanding Accounting Alumnus in 1999.

Ori James Scholarship Participants included donors Edwin Boyd, Lewis Braxton, Billy Crider, Kelly Jones, Ed Nelson, and Martin NeSmith, and attendees, Don Berecz, Charlie Cox, Mac Cox, John D’Andrea, Julian and Frances Deal, Bill and Nancy Herring, Ori Jean James, John Lawrence, Ron LePionka, J. T. Marburger, Gail Reed, Mike Sanders, Asbury and Helen Stembridge, Tom Tharp, and Hubert Tucker. The Atlanta Braves beat the San Francisco Giants 3-2, but the true winner was the Ori James Beta Gamma Sigma Scholarship.

Greetings from the MBA Program! We have had an exciting and busy fall here in COBA. We have new faces, more national recognition, and a new program in the works! First, I would like to say thank you to Angela Leverett who was a mainstay in the MBA office for several years. She accepted a new position with the Board of Regents in July.

As a result of Angela’s departure, the MBA office has a new recruiting coordinator, which will help us expand and improve our efforts in the recruiting and admissions arena. Karen Wells, formerly assistant to Linda Wilke in the Development Office, has recently stepped into the recruiting coordinator role and we are delighted to have her! We are recruiting a new assistant MBA director to improve our connections and contact with alumni. If you are an MBA alum, we would love to hear your feedback or success stories. You can find us on LinkedIn under the group name, “Georgia Southern COBA MBA Students and Alumni” or become a fan of our Facebook group, “Georgia Southern University MBA Program.” You can also drop us an email at mba@georgiasouthern.edu.

On national recognition, for the fifth year in a row, The Princeton Review has named COBA as one of its “301 Best Business Schools.” The publication surveys more than 19,000 students in AACSB-accredited MBA programs around the world to determine which schools stand out above the rest. Our students, once again, cited Georgia Southern’s affordability, the quality of instruction, and approachability of administration as factors contributing to the success of the MBA Program. We are so thankful to our students and alumni for participating in this survey because without your feedback, the recognition would not be possible. We would also like to express our gratitude to the MBA faculty for continuing to provide exceptional instruction and guidance to our students.

Finally, we have submitted a proposal for a new Executive MBA program to be primarily delivered online. If approved, it will launch in Fall 2011. Offering a focus in entrepreneurial leadership, the program will be geared toward working professionals with at least seven years of work experience. By focusing on entrepreneurial leadership, we hope to attract those seeking to be innovative leaders within their organization or who have a passion for entrepreneurship. Keep your fingers crossed because our success is your success!

David M. Coleman

David M. Coleman (BBA, 1978; MBA, 2001) recently celebrated the five-year anniversary of The Old Post Office Café in Brooklet. He and co-owner, Greg Frost, developed the restaurant and catering business in 2005 and have become known throughout south Georgia for their wonderful food and catering delights. David had been a comptroller for an electrical supply company and firm administrator in a CPA firm for over 25 years when he decided to leave the corporate world for entrepreneurship. When the U.S. Postal Service decided to build a new post office in Brooklet, the availability of the old post office building opened the door of opportunity and the rest is history. His successful café and catering business has allowed him to maintain strong relationships with people from the surrounding communities and Georgia Southern. David has found happiness as a successful small business owner. He currently resides in Statesboro and enjoys reading, traveling, and gardening.

Christopher Kimbrough

Christopher Kimbrough (POL SCI, 2006; MBA 2008) has been awarded a 2011 Baker & Daniels’ Law Firm scholarship. The $10,000 educational scholarship includes placement in the firm’s summer associate class. The scholarships were established in 2007 for students of varied ethnic, racial, and cultural backgrounds, including lifestyles, disabilities, and unique viewpoints. Recipients of the scholarship are selected by Baker & Daniels’ executive committee. Baker & Daniels, LLP, with more than 370 attorneys, has offices in Fort Wayne and South Bend, IN, Chicago, IL, Washington, DC, and Beijing, China.

Huggins Joins WebMBA® Staff

Angelia Huggins (IS, 1991) is the new director of Student and IT Operations for the Georgia WebMBA® Program. In the new position, she will be assisting Director Joe Bocchi with admissions, student tracking, and program progression as the WebMBA course management system administrator and IT specialist, including database and virtual document repositories maintenance for comparative data analysis, accreditation, and retention, progression, and graduation reporting.

Angelia is an active officer of the Atlanta Eagle Club as well as a past member of the College of Business Advisory Council. Angelia received the 2002 Young Alumna of the Year award and is a past board member and executive officer of the Alumni Board of Directors.

New MAcc Director

Dr. L. Dwight Scneathen, new program director for the Master of Accountancy, reports a 30 percent increase in enrollment from Fall 2009 to Fall 2010. In the traditional master degree program, the faculty is exploring opportunities to offer more courses in taxation and business valuation, and the Becker CPA Review offering continues to increase CPA Exam pass rates.

The scope of the program is also growing with the introduction of new programs. We now offer a master of accountancy with a concentration in forensic accounting, including courses in fraud schemes, fraud detection methods, expert witness testing, interview and interrogation techniques, and computer forensics. The program provides a comprehensive curriculum preparing students to pass the Certified Fraud Examiner and Financial Forensics exams. Our newest program, the on-line WEBMAcc, slated for launch in Fall 2011, is in approval. This two year, lock step program will allow students not located near a physical campus to pursue the degree online. Overall, the program’s future is bright as excellent students continue to apply, and the number of firms recruiting them grows each year, including Big Four accounting firms from Jacksonville, Charlotte, and Atlanta; Wal-Mart; and government agencies, such as the Georgia Department of Audits and Office of the Inspector General.

For more information on any of our graduate programs, please contact COBA Graduate Studies, P.O. Box 8050 • Room 3300, Statesboro, GA 30460-8050, Phone: (912) 478-5767, E-Mail: mba@georgiasouthern.edu, Website: http://coba.georgiasouthern.edu/grad.htm.
Erin Schrimpf (LIT, 2005), a Chicago trainmaster for CSX Transportation, has been promoted to manager of total service integration for the compliance and execution team in Jacksonville, FL. CSX is the primary operating subsidiary for CSX Corporation, operating 21,000 miles of rail network in 23 states, serving over 70 ocean, river, and lake ports.

Erin began his career as a management trainee with CSX Transportation. He had the coveted opportunity to work in CSX’s Chicago Trainmaster office. In the CSX network, Chicago is one of the busiest and most complex terminals. Erin operates more than 50 trains daily over Chicago’s railroad networks with more than 200 people working with him on any given day. His job as a trainmaster is very demanding, often requiring 60 to 70 hours a week. Erin and his wife currently reside in Chicago, while his son, Christiaan, is in Oregon planning to attend Oregon State University.

Faces of Homecoming 2010

The 2010 homecoming cookout was held under the water tower in the parking lot of Paulson Stadium on November 6 before the Appalachian State game. Special thanks are extended to Jamie Lane; Matt McGhee; Susan Taylor; the Wells family, Bill, Karen, Brad, and Jesse; Linda Wilke; Lisa Williams; Richard and Susan Williams; Jerry and Myron Wilson; and Rongron Zhang for their help with this event, and to Jan Grimes and Linda Mullen for donating their parking spaces. Later that day, Georgia Southern’s Eagles pulled off a 21–14 OT victory against Appalachian State’s Mountaineers.
COBA Welcomes New Faculty

Please join us in welcoming the newest members of the COBA team presented below. We are excited about the talents and skills they bring to COBA. We presently have five faculty and administrative searches for the 2011-2012 academic year: an assistant professor of accountancy and a director for the School of Accountancy; an assistant professor of economics in the School of Economic Development; a director for the Bureau of Business Research and Economic Development; and an assistant director, marketing and admissions, for the Master of Business Administration program.

J. Nicholas DeBonis
Lecturer
Department of Management, Marketing, & Logistics

Nick DeBonis is a lecturer in the Department of Management, Marketing and Logistics. A Vietnam veteran who served on active duty in both the Air Force and the Army, Nick earned his Ph.D. in advertising and marketing from the University of Tennessee-Knoxville. His master’s degree is in foundations of education from Troy State University and his BA, magna cum laude, is from Flagler College in education and psychology. His wife, Susan, is a professor in the Communication Arts department.

Dr. DeBonis has private sector experience as a senior global marketing consultant in the telecommunications, chemical, and pharmaceutical industries with a Philadelphia-based company. He maintains a marketing consultancy with select clients to maintain contact with the day-to-day business world. Dr. DeBonis’s diverse professional background includes having started and run his own business, and stints in both the talent and business sides of the newspaper and radio media. He has co-authored three successful trade books published by McGraw-Hill for the American Marketing Association and has served on the faculty at the Guizuta Business School, Emory, California State-Fullerton, Texas A&M, LSU and Pepperdine universities.

Dr. DeBonis and his wife have two children, Andrew, 23, and Gabriela, 14. They are a soccer family—he still referees high school soccer, his wife is a former coach and both of children played on the state select Lazers team in Peachtree City. The family enjoys wilderness camping, canoeing, and hiking in the North Georgia Mountains, Appalachian Trail, and at the beach.

Eastman Receives Stanley Award

At each WebMBA® graduation, the graduating class selects one professor as recipient of the Stanley Award, named for Dean Ken Stanley, Valdosta State University, one of the founding deans and architects of the WebMBA® program. Jacqueline K. Eastman has been selected as the most recent Georgia Southern winner of the Ken Stanley WebMBA® Teaching Award. This is the second time Jackie has won this award. She won it previously as a professor at Kennesaw State University, where she taught before coming to Georgia Southern.

Center for Forensic Studies

The Center for Forensic Studies in Accounting and Business, in conjunction with the School of Accountancy, offered students a unique opportunity to interact with forensic experts this fall. The presentations offered a great experience for the students, where they had opportunities to learn in an interactive, hands-on environment focusing on foundational academic and interpersonal skills.

School of Accountancy Director Jill Lockwood praised the Center Director Don Breeze for his comprehensive oversight of the student learning programs of the center, “Don has made it possible for students to experience state-of-art technical expertise from the speakers who are engaged daily with application of the skills taught in the classroom.”

Tom Ackerman, special agent, Office of Inspector General, met with the student chapter of the Association of Certified Fraud Examiners and also addressed students in the White Collar Crime classroom to discuss “Plea Bargaining” and “Interviewing in Investigations.”

Daphne Jarriel, assistant district attorney, Ogeechee Judicial District, also spoke to the class, discussing her career choice to go to law school, the functions of the District Attorney’s Office, and its coordination with investigators and the courts. In her presentation, Daphne highlighted a case involving a Statesboro business and $2.1 million dollars in fraudulent loans.

Later, students in fraud and forensic accounting and justice studies had the opportunity to attend the Mock Civil Trial at the Bulloch County Courthouse.

Finally, Alexander Gambill, PricewaterhouseCoopers, Charlotte, spoke to information system and fraud and forensic accounting students in classes taught by Jackie Eastman and Dave Gibson.

PKM Supports Forensic Program

Georgia Southern University recently announced Atlanta-based Porter Keable Moore (PKM) has made a $6,000 contribution to the Center for Forensic Studies in Accounting at Georgia Southern University. The School of Accountancy center offers forensic courses at the undergraduate and graduate levels. “The donation allows us to live out one of our core values by giving back to a school and a program that has done much for our firm,” said Phil Moore, PKM’s managing partner.

Jenna Green, an associate in the PKM group who earned her master’s degree at Georgia Southern, says forensic training is invaluable in dealing with anti-fraud regulations. “It’s training every accounting student should be acquainted with,” Green said.

PKM has been a supporter of Georgia Southern for many years and annually partners with with COBA to present the Fraud and Forensic Accounting Education Conference. The next conference will be held June 2–4, 2011 in Savannah.

COBA Golfers Earn Honors

The Georgia Southern Eagles Golf Team is pictured at the Southeast Regionals of the 2010 NCAA Golf Tournament. The team placed second overall, with Logan Womack leading with a 72.43 and 75, respectively. Logan’s best performance occurred at the NCAA Southeast Regional where he fired a 2-under par 208 for second place and tied his 54-hole career low. Matt’s 2-under par 70 at the Augusta State Invitational set a new career-low and also helped him card a 54-hole career-low 208.

SIFE Inducts Advisory Board

In September, COBA’s Students in Free Enterprise chapter, SIFE, held its first meeting with the 2010 Business Advisory Board. Club President, Jevon Thomas, announced that Barry Westbrook, general manager of Walmart’s Statesboro Wal-Mart Distribution Center, agreed to be the chairman of the SIFE Business Advisory Board. Engagement with Walmart is particularly important for the students involved in SIFE because Walmart is the lead sponsor of the worldwide SIFE organization. Members of the advisory board include Westbrooks; Miles Williams, UniHealth Source; Cleve White, Cleve White Nissan; Rachel Edwards, Wright & Edwards, P.C.; Sarah Chester, First Southern National Bank; Kate Gary, Chamber of Commerce; Lynn Lilly, The Lilly Group, LLC; and Kathleen Gruben, Georgia Southern. In other business, Luke Pittaway, faculty advisor and director of the Center for Entrepreneurial Learning and Leadership, recapped the purpose of SIFE, its history at Georgia Southern, future strategic direction and the role of the Advisory Board. He touched on topics of how members of the board can engage SIFE students and connectivity among community groups and organizations relevant SIFE projects.

BBRED Outreach

The mission of the Bureau of Business Research & Economic Development (BBRED) is to provide critical information and economic development analysis for the region and state. The Effingham Hospital Modernization Study and the Economic Impact of Engineering Programs in the Allen E. Paulson College of Science and Technology are projects which, through BBRED’s research, clients have been able to obtain policy outcomes supportive of their goals.

In the initial project, BBRED was approached by the Effingham Hospital Authority to examine its modernization plan for adding a surgical facility. Three aspects of the project included analysis of the market for surgical services, evaluating the economic impact of construction and operations, and the estimating the continuation value of current property tax allocations. Utilizing BBRED studies, the modernization plan was approved by the Effingham County Board of Commissioners and a grant application was submitted to fund the expansion.

For the Allen E. Paulson College of Science and Technology, the client’s goal was to expand its engineering technology program to an engineering degree program. A BBRED report demonstrated the economic value of the current operations and illustrated the future value of proposed changes. Projections developed for student enrollment, student expenditure, and operating budgets were incorporated into a larger proposal to the Board of Regents. The proposal for a degree program was approved in November, and the full scale engineering program will begin in the Fall 2011.

Additionally, BBRED continues to engage in research of interest to the general public. The Seventh Annual Consumer Confidence and Holiday Shopping Expectation Survey was released in mid-November. It focuses on eleven Coastal Empire counties in Georgia and two Lowcountry counties in South Carolina. The survey was developed and administered by BBRED in coordination with Dr. Jacqueline Eastman and her marketing research class. For the first time in five years, consumers appear to be planning to increase their holiday spending per person, although still lower than the peak levels of 2005 or 2006.

It also appears consumers are slowly regaining confidence after several years of spending declines. With bargain shopping being the primary focus of the holiday shopping season this year, consumers appear to discount stores, like Wal-Mart or Target, and outlet malls will gain a larger proportion of the holiday shopping dollar. Overall, BBRED’s analyses indicate a 2-3 percent increase in holiday sales this year.

Finally, BBRED conducts an annual study that examines a nine-county region, including Bryan, Bulloch, Chatham, Candler, Effingham, Emanuel, Evans, Jenkins, and Screven, to determine the annual economic impact of Georgia Southern University on the region. For fiscal year 2010, Georgia Southern University had a total economic impact of $795.3 million. The increase of almost $85 million over fiscal year 2009 was primarily due to a 7.4 percent increase in total student enrollment over the time period.

For more information about BBRED’s research, or to discuss a future project, please call Joy West at (912) 478-0782, or visit the website at www.bbred.org.

Downtown Statesboro City Campus

On Friday, October 1, during the monthly Downtown Statesboro First Friday celebration, at which merchants open late, local bands play, and street vendors set up, the Downtown Statesboro Development Authority unveiled its new logo signage and cut the ribbon on its East Main Streetscape. The event served as a backdrop for Georgia Southern’s announcement of plans for the University’s City Campus in the old Galleria building in downtown Statesboro.

President Brooks Keel’s vision of promoting economic development took a big step forward with presentation of plans for the new Entrepreneurship Zone, permanent offices of the Bureau of Business Research and Economic Development (BBRED), and a satellite operation of the University Store. Eventually, classrooms for late afternoon and evening classes are expected to be added.

Target and American Express Partnerships

The Center for Retail Studies recently announced partnerships with Target and American Express.

Target Corporation has partnered to sponsor a case study competition in COBA’s retail marketing classes this spring. Target executives will introduce the case to the students on-campus, evaluate progress at mid-term, and judge presentations to determine the winning team. Each member of the winning team will receive a $500 scholarship.

The National Retail Federation is providing a grant of $6,000 to fund the students’ travel to New York to participate in the American Express-sponsored National Retail Federation’s Aspire2Retail Intercollegiate Competition against the University of Florida, Florida State University, University of Michigan, University of Wisconsin–Madison, and University of Arizona. American Express, along with Macy’s, Sears, Toys “R” Us, Wet Seal, and Steve Madden, Ltd., will be mentoring students and helping them develop presentations for the competition. The students will tour the American Express offices while in New York in January.

Byington Named Dean at Coastal Carolina

J. Ralph Byington was named dean of the E. Craig Wall Sr. College of Business Administration at Coastal Carolina University in July. He had been dean of the School of Business Administration, University of South Carolina–Aiken, since 2003 and had previously spent eight years as associate dean and director of the School of Accountancy, College of Business, Georgia Southern University. Dr. Byington also has experience in state government and the business world. He was director and internal auditor at the University of Southern Mississippi, an investigator on the PEER Committee for the state of Mississippi, and chief fiscal officer for the Mississippi Governor’s Office for Federal Programs.

Dr. Byington has been recognized for academic excellence at three universities, receiving the New Faculty Excellence Award from Texas Tech, the College of Business Administration Professor of the Year at Louisiana Tech, and William A. Freemen Professor of the Year at Georgia Southern.

His publications include more than 130 journal articles, book chapters, newsletter items, and proceedings. At the 1996 national meeting of the American Accounting Association, he and a co-author received the Notable Contributions to the Information Systems/Management Advisory Services Literature Award. In 1995, he received the Southwest Federation of Administrative Disciplines Distinguished Paper Award in the accounting area. As a member of numerous professional organizations, Byington served as president of the Southeast chapter of the American Accounting Association and president of the Coastal Carolina University in July.
