Students at Georgia Southern's campuses continue to be fully engaged in classroom, laboratory, clinical, experiential, extramural and co-curricular environments. Yes, things are a little different. We have reassessed all class and laboratory section sizes and assigned classrooms to assure students and instructors follow face covering and social distancing requirements. We have modified course sections and classroom assignments to meet social distancing standards. Our new guidelines and protocols adhere to direction from the CDC and the Georgia Department of Public Health.

The health, safety, and well-being of our students, faculty, staff and communities will continue to be our utmost priority. Remember that a safe and healthy campus is a responsibility we all share at Georgia Southern. That means we all take action to make sure our community thrives. And when we all do right, we value ourselves, our neighbors, our well-being and our environment. It may not always be easy, and it may not always be comfortable, but it's always best for everyone.
