Georgia Southern Announces Plans for Elite Sports Shooting Education Center

Georgia Southern University is partnering with the Georgia DNR to develop an elite sports shooting education center in Statesboro. The new center will have a major economic impact on Statesboro and the entire state as enthusiasts and competitors around the

From the President

In case you missed it, there is a lot happening at Georgia Southern University. This edition of the President's Newsletter highlights some of the more noteworthy news and events that are capturing the attention of prospective students, our alumni and the nation. As you'll read below, we recently announced that Georgia Southern, in partnership with the Georgia Department of Natural Resources and The Easton Foundation, will establish a new Elite Shooting Sports Education Center on campus. The new center will one of two such facilities in the country. A Georgia Southern professor recently received a major grant from NOAA and the Governor's South Atlantic Alliance to better protect the southeastern coast of the U.S. from threats of flooding, storms, hurricanes and erosion. Georgia Southern will renew its tradition of hosting a major concert in the spring when we welcome The Band Perry and The Fray to Allen E. Paulson on Friday, April 20. There are a lot of exciting things going on at Georgia Southern and I hope that you have the chance to stop by campus and see us. Thank you for your continued support of Georgia Southern University.

state and country travel to Georgia Southern to train and compete.

Currently, there is only one other facility like this in the country and we are appreciative of the Georgia DNR and The Easton Foundation for their support in constructing a world-class venue. The center, which will be located near the Recreation Activity Center (RAC), is scheduled to open in August 2013. Read more...

Protect the Coast

Georgia Southern University researcher Clark Alexander was recently awarded a $377,000 grant to better protect the southeastern coast of the United States from the threats of flooding, storms, hurricanes and erosion. Alexander, who is Director of Georgia Southern's Applied Research Laboratory and Professor at the Skidaway Institute of Oceanography says the project will develop a new hazard-vulnerability tool that can be applied to the entire region.
