Specific educational interests

- Special Educator
- Complex needs of inclusive classrooms
- Teacher preparation
Purpose

The study was aimed at deepening understanding of co-teaching practice and explore special education teachers’ beliefs regarding effective co-teaching.
Methods

- Significance – Potential for teacher education, school districts, and policy-makers to enhance teacher candidate learning and aid in professional development (new/career teachers)
- Mixed methods survey design was used

Recommendations for future research

- Explore how communication, collaboration and co-teaching skills are taught
- Examine university/school partnerships that provide enhanced field experiences to prepare candidates for co-teaching
1. What would make this study more rigorous?
2. How could future studies be conducted to get more significant results.
3. Suggest ways to collect data or find existing data sets on student achievement related to students with disabilities in co-taught classrooms verses classrooms that are not co-taught.
