Honors Students Find Success in Mock Mediation Competitions

GSU's Mock Mediation Team shows off their numerous awards

Georgia Southern's Mock Mediation Club is one of the largest and most successful mediation teams in the United States. Thanks to the efforts of its thirty-five members, it has brought home endless accolades from both regional and national tournaments. Only two years ago, however, it was not even recognized as a student organization.

In 2013, honors student Dylan John (construction management '16) convinced two friends to compete in the regional mock mediation tournament, not expecting to win seven awards and move on to nationals. But without university funding or support, attending nationals seemed like a faraway dream.

"During a presentation at World Congress, we had to admit that we weren't going to be able to go to nationals, due to funding," said John, "but then one of the judges offered us a generous donation and said, 'if I give you this, will you go?'"

Researching Writing and Writing Research: Aleyna Rentz Publishes in Composition Studies

Aleyna Rentz at work in Eidson House

When Aleyna Rentz (English/writing and linguistics '17) first signed up for Dr. Jessica Nastal-Dema's writing studies class, she had no idea it would lead to her first publication in an academic journal. Along with Dr. Nastal-Dema and fellow writing and linguistics major Jayne McGaughey, Rentz co-wrote "The Evolving Identity of an Undergraduate Major in Writing and Linguistics," which will appear in the fall 2015 edition of Composition Studies, the oldest independent periodical in its field.

The idea for the article began with a class discussion of college writing programs and how they should operate in order to best prepare students for careers or graduate programs in writing. During this discussion, Rentz realized just how exceptional Georgia Southern's own writing department is.

"Unlike Georgia Southern, most colleges don't offer majors in writing," said Rentz. "They relegate it to a minor or concentration, rather than treating it like a legitimate field of study."

Alumni Update: Thomas Eisenhart
Delivers Talk to Chemistry Department

Thomas Eisenhart visits with Dr. Engel during his return to campus Life has been busy for 2010 Honors alum Thomas Eisenhart since his graduation five years ago. After spending his first post-graduate year in Belfast, Northern Ireland to study under the Rotary Foundation Ambassador Scholarship, Eisenhart returned to America to complete his Ph.D. in analytical chemistry at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill. Despite the demands of graduate school, Eisenhart found time to pay his alma mater a visit on October 16, when he presented his research to the chemistry department. His talk was titled “Spectroscopic Monitoring of Proton-Coupled Electron Transfer Reactions,” which documented his work over the past four years to develop new methods to better monitor a class of reactions, proton-coupled electron transfer (PCET), which play an important role in developing new energy technologies.
