A Sound Like No Other...

In 1883 in a small shop in Brooklyn, New York, Friederich Gretsch began creating the sound that today's drummers call “That Great Gretsch Sound.” Now 123 years later the same care and commitment to quality for which the Gretsch family is famous for continues to produce drums with superior craftsmanship, innovation, and of course... That Great Gretsch Sound

1942 was a year of transition for America and the Gretsch family. Fred Gretsch, Sr., who had been the company president for 47 years, retired and handed the company over to his oldest son, Fred Jr. But, with sentiments for the war effort running high, Fred Jr. left his president post to serve in the Navy.

The company reins were then handed to brother Bill, who had been running Gretsch's Chicago office for a decade. Like all Gretsch children, Bill literally grew up in the family business. Bill and his brothers worked many Saturdays at the Gretsch factory in Brooklyn doing everything from packaging phonograph needles to picking up drum heads at the tannery. Running a musical instrument manufacturing company during World War II was difficult. Bill had to deal with key personnel leaving for military service and a government mandate that only 10% metal content could be used in non-war manufacturing products. This severely impacted drum production. Although there were shortages of materials, Bill Gretsch showed no shortage of ingenuity. Gretsch introduced the patriotic-themed "Defender" drum line with many metal parts replaced with wood and a new miracle material of the day called plastic.

Bill and the Gretsch Company were very involved in the war effort. The factory was used to manufacture a wide range of war products for Uncle Sam. Bill also served as a member of the War Production Board and worked with the Red Cross to supply instruments to soldiers.

With the war over and shortages lifted, Gretsch resumed manufacturing Broadkaster and Gretsch-Gladstone drums. Bill also hired Phil Grant as head of promotions and drum sales. Phil convinced many top drummers to switch to Gretsch including Mel Lewis and Louie Bellson, who had Gretsch build the first double bass drum set in 1947.

Although there were shortages of materials, Bill Gretsch showed no shortage of ingenuity.

Like his grandfather, Friedrich, Bill Gretsch's tenure as president was cut short. His death in 1948 due to illness saddened many people. Although president for only six years (1942-1948), Bill Gretsch played an important role in growing "That Great Gretsch Sound" during the pivotal 1930s and 1940s. He is fondly remembered for his warmth, friendship, loyalty, sense of humor, and ability to lead and inspire people to do their very best.

This secret formula has been used on the inside of Gretsch shells for over 50 years. A key component of the great Gretsch sound.

Vintage Styled Tube Lugs
Based on our classic Gladstone style tube lug, the low mass lug design keeps the tension off of the shell.
