Georgia Southern University's chapter of Sigma Alpha Pi, the National Society of Leadership and Success, welcomed over 100 new members to its ranks this past December. The Society's faculty advisor and Instructor of Child & Family Development, Dr. Nadia Flanigan, writes of the distinction: "Students who are at least sophomores and who meet certain GPA requirements are invited to join in order to reach their leadership potential. Once students join, they must complete several steps in order to be inducted. The steps include attending an orientation, a leadership training workshop, three motivational speaker broadcasts, and three meetings with a small group of students to discuss and give each member feedback on their individual goals."

The 438-member society also hosts fundraising, social, and community service events for both current and prospective members.

Students interested in joining the society should contact Sigma-Alpha-Pi@georgiasouthern.edu or visit <https://georgiasouthern.collegiatelink.net/organization/sap/>
