the emphasis at southern has been on growth and change. new buildings have been added, the function of others has changed. more students, larger faculty, program and degree alterations and, perhaps, soon we will have university status. to the left is pictured dr. pope duncan, serving his first term as president of georgia southern college, replacing dr. john o. eidson. the notions of growth and change here at southern have been so enthusiastic, we even decided to change the date of our founding!

the musical comedy, "i do, i do," featuring jack and sally jenkins, was presented on march 2, 1972 in mccroan auditorium. "i do, i do" portrayed the talented and distinguished singing team as an affectionate husband and wife acting and singing out the first fifty years of a successful marriage. sponsored by the campus life enrichment committee, the play drew wide attention from both town and campus enthusiasts.

the masquers' winter production was "ten nights in a bar room." The three-act play was staged in the era of the women's temperance league and melodramatically portrayed the evils of liquor. the dress rehearsal was attended by the senior citizens club, part of the masquers' community involvement program. "ten nights in a bar room" drew community, as well as college, support and enthusiasm. attended by young and old, enjoyed by all.

eagles enter first year in university competition the georgia southern eagles had a very impressive "first" year in university competition finishing 17-9. highlighted by their first place finish in the "hatter classic" in orlando, florida, and the play of the two most talented sophomores, johnny mills and richard wallace, ever to wear the blue and white. the "run and gun" eagles entertained fans throughout the country.

with their exciting fast break, the 100 mark was broken 7 times in a season that saw the eagles have 7 heart-breaking losses. they lost by two points four times and by three on three occasions.

a break here or there and the eagles could have been in post-season play in the mid east regionals or in the national invitational tournament.

things look bright again next year because the eagles had three sophomores in the line up who will be experienced juniors in 1972-73.

if any event on the gsc campus this year can be termed a complete and total success, it would have to be greek week, 1972. but this success did not just happen. it was the end result of the dedicated work of the ifc-panhellenic greek week committee, total participation by the greeks, and concerned guidance and aid from the administration. all in all it could be said that the highlight of the year for the school's largest student organization could hardly have been better.

among the greek week activities in which all fraternities and sororities participated were the greek sing, tug-of-war, a variety of greek games, a reverse beauty pageant, and a long awaited dance featuring the liberation at the hanner gym. the entire week was characterized by the hustle of preparation, a sequence of color on color, sounds of disappointment mixed with those of victory, and a general atmosphere of celebration at the completion of a great year.

the public relations office . . . for their interest in southern's affairs and growth the college relations office, in the past eleven years, has grown from a one man operation to what is now a complete program of five active areas of public relations service with a full time person directing each.

building and directing the college relations program during those eleven years has been a slow and deliberate process. From 1961 until 1966, one person directed the basic areas of public relations, alumni, news and publications.

in 1966, a second full time person came into the program to work with alumni; in 1969, a publications editor and a director of fund raising; and in 1971, a news editor. the director of college relations coordinates the program and handles public relations and special events.

the one main purpose of the college relations program is to report the many and varied activities taking place on the college campus and to reflect on her present day growth and her future tense potential and dreams. this reporting and this reflecting is produced for the many publics available to georgia southern: alumni, friends, and the general populace of the coastal empire, the state and the region.

all this is done through the gsc alumni association; institutional publications, which are used as informational and recruiting devices; news: both state and hometown (radio, t.v., and newspaper); through different public relations benefits which bring the public to the campus; and through the solicitation for contributions of support and monies from the many publics by the fund raising office.

additionally, the college relations staff prepares many professional articles about georgia southern for various monographs and publications throughout the u.s.
