Williams Named 2018-2019 Governor's Teaching Fellow

December 7, 2018

TimMarie Williams, Ph.D., assistant professor in the Department of Health Sciences and Kinesiology, has been named a 2018-2019 Governor's Teaching Fellow for the academic year symposium program. Williams was one of 18 faculty members across the state of Georgia that was selected after a highly competitive application and selection process.

To be eligible, the individual must be a regular, full-time faculty member who teaches at an accredited public or private college or university in the state of Georgia. Participant selection is based on the following factors: teaching experience, interest in continuing instructional and professional development, ability to make a positive impact on their own campus and a commitment of support from the faculty's home institution.

"Having the privilege and honor to be selected as a Governor's Teaching Fellow presents the ultimate opportunity to enhance my professional development as a tenure-track faculty, thereby augmenting exposure to interdisciplinary innovations within pedagogy while collaborating with faculty across the state," stated Williams. "Knowledge acquired will propel me to bring more inestimable value to our university and students as lifelong learners."

Established in 1995 by Zell Miller, the Governor's Teaching Fellows Program provides Georgia's higher education faculty with expanded opportunities for developing teaching skills by addressing faculty members' need to use emerging technology and instructional tools that are being used in today's society.

To date, more than 75 different disciplines, professions and teaching areas have been represented by over 600 Fellows from more than 70 public and private institutions statewide.
