Projecting Integrity: Online Branding for Nonprofits

Lisa Witzig
Colorado State University, Lisa.witzig@csuglobal.edu

Perry Haan
Tiffin University, haanpc@tiffin.edu

Follow this and additional works at: https://digitalcommons.georgiasouthern.edu/amtp-proceedings_2010

Part of the Marketing Commons

Recommended Citation

https://digitalcommons.georgiasouthern.edu/amtp-proceedings_2010/69

This conference proceeding is brought to you for free and open access by the Association of Marketing Theory and Practice Proceedings at Digital Commons@Georgia Southern. It has been accepted for inclusion in Association of Marketing Theory and Practice Proceedings 2010 by an authorized administrator of Digital Commons@Georgia Southern. For more information, please contact digitalcommons@georgiasouthern.edu.
Abstract

Internet usage has grown precipitously in the last decade, and the implications for marketing are deep and profound for nonprofit organizations. Web sites and online social networking are becoming increasingly important for nonprofits, and the concept of brand personality is another powerful marketing technique that enhances these organizations’ marketing strategies. This study examined the intersection of online branding, brand personalities, and nonprofit organizations, and assessed whether the presence of online branding techniques at a nonprofit’s Web site is associated with a donor’s perception of the nonprofit’s personality. The results of the study demonstrated that online branding is significantly important for a nonprofit organization that is trying to portray itself as reliable, reputable, and honest.

Keywords

Nonprofit; Branding; Brand Personality; Online Branding; Integrity