The status of the student who accidentally sent a racial slur to her future Georgia Southern roommate in July is currently unknown. Full Story

First Amendment could limit disciplinary actions for student who used racial slur in 'triggerish' incident

The First Amendment's freedom of speech clause could play a vital role in Georgia Southern University's approach to the "triggerish" incident that occurred in July. GS Interim President Shelley Nickel and Frank LoMonte, director of the Brechner Center for Freedom of Information, provide context to the process. Full Story.

Uber: Stay safe while riding

Car services like Uber and Lyft are becoming increasingly popular as convenient ways for people to get around town, but with this growing trend comes additional dangers. Full Story.

How Chad Lunsford is approaching his first season as head coach of the Eagles

Head football coach Chad Lunsford's office is exactly as one may assume. A big desk takes up one half of the floor as a couch sectional and a black coffee table grace the other side. Full Story.

Red Zone: What students should know about sexual assault

Red Zone is the first six weeks of classes during which students are most likely to fall victim to sexual assault. According to the Rape Abuse and Incest National Network, one in four women and one in 16 men experience sexual assault while in college. Full Story.
