4-21-2010

The Madoff/Ponzi Scheme — Part 2

Thomas A. Buckhoff

Follow this and additional works at: https://digitalcommons.georgiasouthern.edu/savannah

Recommended Citation

This article is brought to you for free and open access by the Business, College of - Publications at Digital Commons@Georgia Southern. It has been accepted for inclusion in Business in Savannah Articles by an authorized administrator of Digital Commons@Georgia Southern. For more information, please contact digitalcommons@georgiasouthern.edu.
Those lucky enough to invest early in a Ponzi scheme typically receive the promised returns. Consequently, their promotion of the investment comes across as genuine and instills an almost irresistible urge in friends and family members to invest as well. Since the early investors have become effective marketing tools, the investment founder no longer needs to promote the investment. At this point, the cash really begins flowing in, and the investment promoter’s lifestyle typically escalates to the level of extravagant. Ostentatious houses, luxury cars, designer clothes and exotic vacations all contribute to the illusion that the investment promoters are successful business people. Rather than viewing the extravagant lifestyles of the investment promoters as the red flags they are, investors tend to view them as possibilities for themselves in the not-so-distant future. In other words, greed overwhelms reason and logic.

Another reason the scheme is so effective is that the investment promoters do not have to pay out very much money since those who were paid the promised returns tend to reinvest their money in it. Thus, the promoters must simply send paper statements to investors showing how much they have earned on their investment, which is typically much higher than any alternative investments available to them. Inevitably, one of three things will happen:

- The investment promoters disappear, taking any remaining investment money with them.
- The scheme collapses of its own weight as the economy sours and investor recruiting slows, which makes it increasingly difficult for the promoters to pay out the promised returns and, as the word spreads, more people start asking for their money and create a run-on-the-bank situation.
- The scheme is exposed when regulators examine the accounting records of the business and discover the majority of the listed assets do not exist.

In the end, the promoters—if they can be apprehended—go to jail and the investors lose most or all of their money. Unfortunately, many investors are wiped out financially and never fully recover.

Word to the wise

According to the Better Business Bureau, Ponzi-style investment schemes are “the biggest single fraud threat confronting American investors.” The SEC reports that Ponzi schemes cost U.S. investors billions of dollars every year. To avoid falling victim to a Ponzi scheme, do the following before investing your money in that “fantastic” or “exclusive” investment opportunity:

1. Be skeptical of investments that promise extraordinary returns at little or no risk, even if your family and friends claim they have received the promised returns.
2. Do not invest in anything you don’t understand. If the promoter cannot explain the investment strategy in simple enough terms for you to understand, do not invest in it.
3. Do not invest anything or sign any contracts in a high-pressure situation. Tell the promoters you need time to do research and think about the investment opportunity.
4. Carefully research the investment claims as well as the backgrounds of the investment company along with its promoters. Make sure the investment offering is registered with state securities regulators and the promoters are licensed by state regulators.

In summary, I propose a revised version of an age-old adage: “If it sounds too good to be true, prepare to be scammed.”

Thomas Buckhoff is an associate professor of accounting at Georgia Southern University. He is also a partner with Forensic Solutions LLC, a forensic accounting firm specializing in fraud detection, investigation and prevention consulting services. He can be reached at 912-478-7142 or tbuckhoff@georgiasouthern.edu.

The Madoff/Ponzi scheme — Part 2

Your occupational health program shouldn’t be an occupational hazard.

Occupational health and workers’ comp... you hear the words and your eyes start to glaze over. It’s complicated, costly and it takes up too much of your time. Sound familiar? Then we have a solution you’re really going to appreciate. Just imagine, a program that addresses the three critical areas of convenience, quality care and cost control.

Convenience

We have three locations and flexible hours to serve you and your employees. We’re there when you need us.

Quality care

Our facilities are staffed with board-certified physicians. We have on-site diagnostic and X-ray, as well as laboratory testing. We also perform pre-employment physicals, audiograms, drug screens, EKG, pulmonary function, vision and others.

Cost control

On the business side, we have expertise in regulatory compliance, a competitive fee structure and prompt turnaround time on all reports. We provide comprehensive follow-up care, thorough case management and timely communication to keep you in the loop. Find out more. Stop by the St. Joseph’s Candler Immediate Care Center in Garden City, Midtown Savannah or the South Georgia Immediate Care Center in Statesboro. Better yet, call our Occupational Health Hotline today.

For Immediate Response, Call Theresa Summers At 912-355-6221

Business in Savannah | businessinsavannah.com | 912-652-0300 Wednesday, April 21, 2010 | 7