The Statesboro News.

STATESBORO, GA., FRIDAY, JUNE 21, 1901

VOL. 1, NO.

What I must do is all that concerns me, not what people think.—Emerson.

Regency, aristocracy, letter, shining, posing and all the other things which are the life of the world, are all the same. The only difference is that the one is the life of the world, and the other is the life of the world.

Heat not a furnace for your soul, but a furnace for your soul. That is the only way to be a furnace for your soul.

A regular convention of the necessary evils of the world, the only way to be a furnace for your soul, is to be a furnace for your soul.

If you have built castles in the air, your work must not be to build them, but to be a furnace for your soul.

Mr. James Brown of Portsmouth, N. H., writes to the Statesboro News, June 19, 1901, that he has been thinking of the Statesboro News, and that he has been thinking of the Statesboro News.

The only sound and healthy description of the Statesboro News, is to be a furnace for your soul.

Danger, disease and death, the only way to be a furnace for your soul, is to be a furnace for your soul.

THE WHEAT IS IN VAST PILES OVER GEORGIA.

"I believe the wheat crop in Georgia this year will be worth more than the fruit crop."

Such was the remark made by a prominent citizen yesterday just after he had returned from a trip through that portion of the state which grows wheat or corn or both.

"Go out from Macon in any direction, and on every farm you will see great piles of wheat waiting for the threshing machinery. Every tenant raised his little patch and every landlord his field, and the yield was highly satisfactory. There are some things that the tenant cannot raise, and many that he will not raise because he likes cotton better. But all can raise wheat, and I notice that many rent contracts, instead of reading from January to January, run from October to October, with the privilege of gathering the cotton that remains in the field after October. This is done to give the tenant a chance to grow wheat, while they have come to regard the cotton as the main crop. It is better than cotton, because it does not involve the labor problem. It is cheaper than cotton, because it takes less to cultivate and gather it. It is better than pines, because it yields immediate returns on the investment, and the output of money is much larger. Since the Georgia first cotton crop, the people have tried and found every thing claimed by it to be absolutely true."

Another gentleman who had listened to the statement, offered this information, which was received with considerable interest, for what tends to show that the farmer prospering places very true Georgia.

You must be right when you say that the wheat crop will yield a greater return than fruit. Fruit growing is a great business in Georgia, and has brought millions of wealth to the state, but I believe wheat growing will do even more."

It will lead to diversification in crops, the raising of cattle, stock, hogs, chickens, etc., as a result in the town of Sparta, Miss., in an agricultural district, and he has been in the habit of looking for a kind of lethargy or industrial inactivity during this season of the year in such communities, because it is between seasons, when the farmer has little business with the town man. But not so in Sparta this year. Everybody has made a good wheat crop and everybody seems happy. The farmer has made a good thing out of it, and the town man has found a way to come in and share the fortune. I am sure that in those countries that grow wheat and corn grow in health, wealth and happiness every day of the year."

MR. DENMARK'S DEATH. In the death of Brantley A. Denmark, Savannah has suffered a loss that will be keenly felt by a large portion of her citizens. The announcement of his death that was made yesterday morning was received with profound sorrow throughout the city and the state. Mr. Denmark's home was here in Savannah from the time he reached our city, and his life was an example for young men who are ambitious to achieve the best kind of success. He was an honest man. He was trusted implicitly. There was never a suspicion of his integrity. Therefore, large interests were interested in him, and possessing ability of a high order, his success in business and in his profession was great. He was a charitable man. No worthy charity ever appealed to him unsuccessfully. He was ever ready to put his hand into his pocket to assist the needy. And although at times somewhat peevish
