9TH ANNUAL PROGRAM
STUDENT SUCCESS IN FIRST-YEAR COMPOSITION CONFERENCE

MISSION
The Student Success in First-Year Composition Conference is designed to promote the success of students in their post-secondary English composition courses. The conference seeks to establish and maintain dialogue between college and high school educators. We are committed to offering practical, strategy-oriented teaching workshops, as well as theoretical presentations of composition topics that focus on the link between high school and college. Participants include college, technical school, and high school teachers, administrators, and media specialists, as well as graduate students.

KEYNOTE SPEAKER
Gerald A. Boyd
Former Associate Director, Division of Curriculum and Instructional Services, Georgia Department of Education

Topic: Left Brain, Write Brain

CONFERENCE STRAND
National Writing Project
http://www.writeproject.org

Workshops in the Writing Project Strand are led by Teacher Consultants who have participated in various sites of the National Writing Project Summer Institute.

(Please see the inside back cover for more information about the National Writing Project.)

9:00 - 10:00 AM  CONCURRENT SESSIONS

9:00 - 10:00 AM  ROOM 2903 • PRESENTATION
Peer[ing] Through the E-Port
Beth Beggs, University of Georgia
In this presentation, the speaker demonstrates some benefits of adopting the electronic portfolio for First-Year writing classes. Using this system, students assist their peers in implementing the writing process while producing unified, introspective e-ports as end-of-term projects.

9:00 - 10:00 AM  ROOM 2911 • WORKSHOP
Behind the Mask, Beneath the Dialogue
Deborah Carico, Bulloch Academy
The presenter explores methods of using dialogue analysis to promote a more meaningful understanding of literature in writing class.

What High School Teachers and College Instructors Don’t Know about Each Other (But Should)
Matthew Nelson, Francis Marion University
This presentation addresses what happens when high school and college teachers get together and talk about writing and what goes on (or doesn’t) in the classrooms of their colleagues across the institutional divide.

9:00 - 10:00 AM  ROOM 2904 • PRESENTATION
Teaching First-Year Students Information Literacy Skills through Collaboration
Lisa Smith and Mildred Pate, Georgia Southern University
A university librarian and a writing instructor present a tag-team teaching approach, which allowed them to identify specific information literacy skills that students need to write a multi-genre paper. The presenters include plans for enhancing the program to extend to other classes.

Teaching in Katrina’s Aftermath: Getting Students Back into the Writing Classroom
Kelly Keener, Abraham Baldwin Agricultural College
The presenter offers suggestions for making the writing classroom a space where students can grapple with and reflect on catastrophic events while simultaneously rebuilding their lives.

9:00 - 10:00 AM  ROOM 1908 • PRESENTATION
Literacy as Linchpin: Centering Composition in the Learning Community
Elizabeth Howells, Carol Andrews and Hans-Georg Erney, Armstrong Atlantic State University
Having taught composition as the linchpin course of a learning community, the presenter will discuss tactics for engaging students in the first-year experience through writing. She has worked with librarians, art historians, philosophers, and mathematicians to collaborate on assignments that ensure students are making connections and creating knowledge across the disciplines.

ABOUT THE NATIONAL WRITING PROJECT
http://www.writingproject.org/About

The National Writing Project is the premier effort to improve writing in America. Through its professional development model, NWP builds the leadership, programs, and research needed for teachers to help their students become successful writers and learners.

Every student deserves a highly skilled teacher of writing. To that end, each of the nearly 200 NWP sites conducts an annual summer institute, attended by the most experienced teachers in the area. Together, these teachers prepare for leadership roles by demonstrating their most effective practices, studying research, and improving their knowledge of writing by writing themselves.

After the institute, writing project teachers conduct project-sponsored programs in their own schools and in neighboring schools and districts. They attend to two purposes: developing teacher knowledge and leadership in their home communities and putting this knowledge and leadership to work to improve student achievement. Collectively, across 50 states, Puerto Rico, Washington, D.C., and the U.S. Virgin Islands, NWP sites conducted 7,288 programs in 2005. Additional programs were conducted at associated international sites in Hong Kong and Malta.

This model of summer and school-year programs, designed and supported by the National Writing Project, is validated by NWP research. Studies of student achievement, both local and national, show positive results. Importantly, NWP sponsors research directed by local sites as well as research targeted at key educational concerns, for example, how to support new teachers or how to support teachers, grades 4-12, in their efforts to improve students’ reading and writing for academic purposes.

NWP sites, all located on university campuses, serve over 141,000 educators annually. NWP continues to add new sites each year with the goal of placing the writing project within reach of every teacher in America.
Creating Connections and Community through Art, Writing, and Research
Patricia Worrall and Stacy Koffman, Gainesville State College
This panel will demonstrate how three instructors used an Innovative Teaching grant to create a learning community that promoted technical, visual, rhetorical, and information management literacy skills by designing websites and posters for campus organizations. Presenters will use examples of student work to show how students constructed relationships between visual images and written texts.

The Rites of Passage: The Song Lyric Workshop
Michael Abbott, Georgia Southern University (June Joyner, PRESENTER, Georgia Southern University)
The speaker demonstrates an exercise in the power of music, one that promotes various types of cultural and language awareness. The audience will participate in a discussion of popular music and its connection to teaching figurative language.

What Students Can Expect in the Electronic Classroom
Tim Giles, Georgia Southern University
The speaker will introduce internet applications that are being used in the college writing classroom to create discourse communities and opportunities for instructors to respond to student work.

Why I [Don’t] Use Turnitin.com in my Classroom
Robert Koch and Mark King, Gordon College
In this discussion, two college writing professors, one a Turnitin.com subscriber and the other a critic, debate the issue of using this particular software to detect plagiarism.

Authorizing Students: Integrating Collaborative Learning Strategies and Creativity into Second Semester First Year Writing
Christy Mrozcek, Armstrong Atlantic State University
The presenter will share two specific methods of integrating collaboration and creativity (Collaborative team projects and multigenre portfolios) while students write and learn about literature.

Bam! Kicking Up the Classroom with Creative Projects
Lisa Mallory and Beverly Head, Atlanta Metropolitan College
This presentation will focus on individual, group, and class projects that apply to course objectives while inviting individual creative flair.

AP Courses and First Year Writing Preparation
Mary Ann Ellis, Appling County High School
This session invites college writing and high school AP teachers to ask questions, share strategies, and talk about the demands in each classroom setting.

Reader Response: When Student Writing Gets Personal, How Do We Respond?
Sonya Huber-Humes, Georgia Southern University
Roundtable participants will be encouraged to share vocabulary useful in taking with students who take on difficult topics.

Internationalizing the Composition Classroom: Challenges and Prospects
Thomas Klein, Georgia Southern University
The table talk is intended to explore the potential to internationalize curriculum and instruction in English composition and to brainstorm which challenges and benefits could be expected in this enterprise.

Frustration or Fresh Perspective? The ESL Writer in the Classroom
Mary Hadley and Carolyn Thomas, Georgia Southern University
The discussion will focus on the growing frustration in high school teachers when non-native speakers arrive in their classes: how to balance content and basic grammar instruction.

High School Students Find Birth Parents, Open Businesses, and Change Their Communities: The Senior Year Writing Project
Eleanor Agnew, Groves High School, Savannah, GA

Describing the Senior Project, the speaker shows how seniors select a social problem that interests them. Developing the three-month project, seniors learn the true meaning of writing, as school-assigned writing is transformed into an activity that they remember for years.

11:20 - 12:20 PM • WORKSHOP

More than a Story: Using Great Book to Model Quality Writing
Kate Taylor, East Georgia College

This interactive workshop is designed to remind first-year writing teachers of the connection between great reading and better writing. By charging students to mine a text for imagery, detail, and vocabulary, instructors indirectly model techniques that students will try to implement in their own writing. The goal is to bridge first-year writing techniques and reading texts by treasure hunting for gems in already published texts.

11:20 - 12:20 PM • PRESENTATION

Dialogic Responses to Student Essay
Amy England, University of Cincinnati

The presenter describes a system of dialogic response that encourages student utilization of instructors’ comments, as well as facilitates purpose-driven revision.

The Emperor Has No Clothes: My Thoughts on Assessment
Benie Colvin, Clayton State University

The presenter considers the ideas of key assessment figures in the writing field and weighs their ideas against her students’ needs and the reality of assessment in her college classroom.

11:20 - 12:20 PM • PRESENTATION

Avoiding Death by PowerPoint: Integrating Content that Matters
Lesia Miller Schnur, Ellen Tober and Ruth Goldfine, Kennesaw State University

This session addresses the Dos and Don’ts of a PowerPoint presentation and includes sample presentations incorporating useful tips and tricks. The speaker explores ways to consider content and audience when designing PowerPoint presentations for classes.

2:00 - 3:00 PM • PRESENTATION

Music Videos, Comedy Central, and Hotel Rwanda: Using Media to Understand Rhetoric
Elizabeth Gassel and Katherine Litchfield, Darton College

This workshop examines the use of some Aristotelian rhetorical tools in different forms of media, particularly music videos, in helping students understand the art of rhetoric so they might be better, more persuasive writers.

2:00 - 3:00 PM • WORKSHOP

Beyond Paper, Pen, and Lecture: Talking, Walking, and Breaking Ice in Freshman Composition
Patricia West, Armstrong Atlantic State University

In this interactive session, the presenter shares strategies of the National Writing Project that help students come alive as learners, writers, and critical thinkers. Participants will receive directions for various writing activities, as well as copies of assessment rubrics.

2:00 - 3:00 PM • PRESENTATION

What Interests People More Than Any Other Subject in the World? The Use of Self-identity as a Theme in First-Year Composition Courses
Kathelyn Patria, Brevard Community College

The speaker explores ways for teachers to make beginning composition more relevant to students by using themes of self-identity. The session will give an overview of the theme, basic assignments, and an explanation of how this type of teaching affects learning, both in writing and about the self.

2:00 - 3:00 PM • PRESENTATION

Give Me the Money: Creating a Proposal for Community Enrichment and Involvement
Kathy Whitaker, Georgia Southern University

This presentation describes a project that asks students to prepare a request for a grant to benefit the community. The project strengthens skills in research, argument, and collaboration.
