MISSION

The Student Success in Writing Conference is designed to promote the success of students in writing courses at the secondary and postsecondary levels. The conference also seeks to establish and maintain dialogue between college and high school educators. We are committed to offering practical workshops and theoretical presentations on topics related to the teaching and craft of writing.

National Writing Project

Writing Project Workshops are led by Teacher Consultants who have participated in various sites of the National Writing Project Summer Institute.

ROOM 217 – PANEL
8:40 - 9:40 AM

Examining Voluntary vs. Required Visits to Writing Centers

Deborah Reese, Monica Rausch, Oluwakemi Elufiede, Armstrong Atlantic State University

Through scholarly research and empirical evidence, the panel studies the question of whether students’ grades or satisfaction levels improve after being required to visit a writing center three or more times.

ROOM 218 – PANEL
8:40 - 9:40 AM

Teaching Writing in the Literature Survey Course

Kelly C. Walter Carney, Emily Leverett, Emily Wright, Aaron Adams, Methodist University

The panel explores creative methods of teaching writing in literature survey courses, including novel scholarly assignments, creative writing options, and online composition projects.

ROOM 210 – PRESENTATIONS
8:40 - 9:40 AM

First – Day Writing Assignments—What Are They Good For?

Pamela Meyers, University of South Alabama

Questioning the effectiveness of traditional first-day writing prompts, the presenter explores alternatives to assessing students’ initial writing abilities.

A Multi-Purpose Composition Final

Phillip Gardner, Francis Marion University

This session presents a final exam model that features a persuasive essay for a real audience and purpose, requires evaluation of text, and serves as an organizing device for the entire course.

ROOM 211 - PRESENTATIONS
8:40 - 9:40 AM

Instructional Technology As Collaborator in Redefining Audience

Maria Clayton, Middle Tennessee State University

The presenter examines the question of whether instructional technology can help beginning writers recognize that effective rhetoric has an audience beyond the teacher, one reader/evaluator.

Connecting and Writing: A Service Learning “Micro Project”

Carolyn Thomas, East Georgia College

The presenter describes an experimental assignment that offers a solution to time and workload management concerns that accompany service learning projects in the writing classroom.

ROOM 212 – WORKSHOP
8:40 - 9:40 AM

The Just Memo: An Exercise in Perception

Benie Colvin, Clayton State University

This workshop creates a classroom activity that helps students explore how the meaning of language is often determined by the framework through which we view it.

9:50 - 10:50 AM • CONCURRENT SESSIONS

ROOM 217 – PANEL 9:50 - 10:50 AM

Teaching/Writing/Researching: The Trinity of Student Success
Jennifer T. Scoggins, Nicol Auguste, Margaret McClellan, Savannah College of Art and Design

The panel focuses on collaboration among faculty, writing center professionals, and reference librarians to reinforce student success in writing.

ROOM 218 – PRESENTATIONS 9:50 - 10:50 AM

Using Bloom’s Taxonomy to Sequence Writing Assignments
Rachel V. Leroy, Georgia Southern University

Using a memoir assignment, the presenter discusses the use of Bloom’s Taxonomy to achieve specific learning outcomes by building a writing sequence that scaffolds learning from lower orders to higher orders thinking.

Assessment: Keeping It Simple with Survey Monkey
Stefanie Frigo, North Carolina Central University

This presentation overviews an in-house assessment of writing intensive courses, one which provides useful feedback for teachers and administrators, as well as offering students the opportunity to contribute to course design and revision.

ROOM 210 – PRESENTATIONS 9:50 - 10:50 AM

Who’s in the Wrong? A View of Error from Inside the Writing Center
Jennifer Stutzman, John Carroll University

The presenter examines error theory and writing center practice, revealing that what student consultants have been trained to view as “errors” are not always what they focus on during consultations with peers.

Apologies for Grammar Instruction?
Linda Moore and Carol Hulse, University of West Florida

The presenters examine the controversies that surround questions of the validity of grammar instruction in college writing programs.

ROOM 211 – PRESENTATION 9:50 - 10:50 AM

Enhancing Student Learning Through a WID Pilot Project
Rose Marie Toscano and Linda Rubel, Rochester Institute of Technology

The presenters discuss a Writing in the Disciplines pilot project that ultimately produces a team of writing experts who mentor others as they develop a portfolio of writing intensive courses.

ROOM 212 – WORKSHOP 9:50 - 10:50 AM

Audience, Purpose, Genre, Content: What a Wreck!
Julie Strickland, Ogeechee Technical College

Participants in this workshop will engage in a mini-lesson on pre-writing considerations, taking away applications to their own classrooms.

KEYNOTE SPEAKER

Michael A. Pemberton

Professor of Writing and Linguistics and director of the University Writing Center at Georgia Southern University

Keynote Address:
“Redefining Writing; Redefining Success”

Author or co-author of four books and past president of the International Writing Centers Association (IWCA), he has also published more than 80 articles on writing center ethics, theory, and practice in scholarly journals such as the Writing Center Journal, Research and Teaching in Developmental Education, Writing & Pedagogy, and the Writing Lab Newsletter. His pieces on cognitive modeling and writing technologies have appeared in College Composition and Communication, Computers and Composition, The Writing Instructor, and various book chapters. Professor Pemberton serves on the editorial and governing boards of the Writing Across the Curriculum (WAC) Clearinghouse, the Writing Center Journal, Computers and Composition, IWCA Press, WPA: Writing Program Administration, Writing and Pedagogy and the Writing Center Research Project.
ROOM 217 - WORKSHOP 1:40 - 2:40 PM

Why So Serious? Adding Humor to First-Year Writing

Judy Copeland, Richard Stockton College of New Jersey

This workshop explores how exercises in humor writing can help students establish voice and credibility, heighten narrative tension, and make sharp political and cultural critiques.

ROOM 218 - PRESENTATIONS 1:40 - 2:40 PM

Writing Across the Divide: Or, The Things I Learned When I Went Back to High School

Billie J. Jones, James Madison University

The presenter explores a collaboration across the divide, between a high school English teacher and a university writing professor who worked together to teach a dual-enrollment literature course.

Lights, Camera, Language Arts! Student Success in Writing in a Film and Music LINC Learning Community

Jubal Tiner and Michael Porter, Brevard College

This presentation focuses on paired courses, Introduction to Film with Music Appreciation. The two disciplines combine for opportunities in writing development and literary adaptation, resulting in a storyboard sequence set to music.

ROOM 210 PRESENTATIONS 1:40 - 2:40 PM

Hansel & Gretel or Goldilocks: Lost in the Wilderness of Writing

Jamie A. Hughes, Southern Crescent Technical College

Whether student writers need bread crumbs to follow, or prefer to test the beds, chairs, and porridge to find what is “just right” for them, writing lessons that allow both groups to succeed are the focus of this presentation.

Who Am I Now? Finding a Voice in a New Field

Leila Wells, Southern Crescent Technical College

This presentation discusses students’ conceptualization of both academic and professional voices in the first-year writing classroom and how that voice will prove essential to their development as professionals in the workplace.

ROOM 211 WORKSHOP 1:40 - 2:40 PM

Empowering First-Year Writers through Engaged Pedagogy

Ashley Oliphant, Pfeiffer University

Drawing on experiential projects in animal welfare advocacy and middle-school tutoring, the presenter will challenge participants to think about the scope and desired outcomes of engaged pedagogy and consider the ways they can use experiential education in their own courses.

2:50 - 3:50 PM • CONCURRENT SESSIONS

ROOM 217 – PANEL

(R)evo1ution of Writing, (Re)connecting, (Re)forging, (R)evolving: (Re)introducing Web 2.0
Ed Braun and Darrin Campbell, Valdosta State University
Max Shelton, North Dakota State University
Believing that composition instruction should move beyond the traditional text into the multi-modal, this panel will explore students’ pre-existing writing abilities, prejudices, and web identities in comparison to current writing environments, curriculums, and contexts.

ROOM 218 – PRESENTATIONS

Marketing the Online Writing Lab for Global Student Success
Deneshia Smith, Clemson University
Through studying the five best Online Writing Labs (OWLs), participants will learn how to make their OWL synonymous with global student success in writing, as well as making it a resource for professional writers and a financial option for donors.

Ending with a Twist: Using Video to Construct Successful Conclusions to Thesis-Driven Essays
John Regan, Boston University
The presenter describes how video versions of essay introductions and conclusions more accurately represent the depth and scope of students’ thinking within their essays.

ROOM 210 – PRESENTATIONS

‘Writing is like pretty much the worst thing ever’: Metaphors for Failure; Opportunities for Success
Gwen Hart, Buena Vista University
This presentation describes classroom-tested methods for using personal metaphors for writing to reach students who feel that writing is a “chore” or “torture.”

Infusing Creative Writing Assignments into Advanced Composition Courses
Clarissa West-White, Florida State University
This presentation describes how original creative writing assignments can spark students’ interest in writing, thus reducing the fear and dread that often accompany their initial attitude towards required composition courses.

ROOM 211 – PANEL

Preparing Students for Successful Careers through Writing and Service Learning Pedagogy
Lara Smith-Sitton, Laura Howard, and Laurissa Wolfram, Georgia State University
This panel will explore how the redesign and expansion of a service learning internship program, including the implementation of technology-based assignments, results in the transfer of classroom writing skills to real world deliverables.

ROOM 212 – WORKSHOP

The Lunch Bag Sestina: Writing a Collaborative Poem
Beth Copeland, Methodist University
Combining a traditional template with the random associations of the Surrealist poets, this workshop introduces participants to an interactive method of teaching students of all ages to write sestinas.
