COMPETITION KEEN FOR GLEE CLUB—MEMBERSHIP-CHORUS PLANS CONCERT

SPECIAL NUMBERS TO BE ON PROGRAM

Is One of a Series of Programs to Be Given During the Year.

Although the Glee Club, under the direction of Mrs. F. E. Barnes, will not be chosen until the beginning of the winter quarter, the leisure arts classes now, which the Glee Club members will be choosing, is making much progress and arousing a great deal of interest and competition for the places on the Glee Club.

The chorus of 60 members, which promised a successful club this year, has been working on folk songs, spirituals, and songs from operas and oratorios.

Plans are being made for a public concert which will be held in the college auditorium December 15th. This program will consist of several special numbers concluding in a group of Christmas carols. This feature is one of a series of programs to be given during the year.

STATE EDUCATORS INVITED FOR VISIT

Invitations Extended Hundreds of Friends and Supporters By Council.

An official visiting day is to be sponsored by the Student Council and the faculty December 11th to be a feature of the program of the school this year. The visiting day will provide for a day when friends, supporters, and school men of this region of the state can come and visit and see the college at work and in play.

Plans for the event are being worked out at present by the Student Council. Approximately 500 personal invitations are being sent out to the superintendents, principals and other men connected with schools represented by the students at college here.

The students are being organized into county groups, whereby all students of the same county will assemble and write to their respective superintendents and principals from which school they graduated. When the group as a whole will send out invitations to the county superintendent.

The plans for the day will include a registration of the former students of the Training School.

As the guests entered the room they were met by a reception committee of faculty members, and many of the old students expressed the thought that T. C. is better than it has ever been.

T. C. came home Thanksgiving in a blaze of glory, and in spite of the number of fur coats and new suits, the teaching profession isn’t bad at all.

The old students began arriving Wednesday afternoon, and on Thursday morning the campus was overrun by alumni who had come to participate in the Homecoming festivities. Comments were heard on every side about the changes in the school and faculty members, and many of the old students expressed the thought that T. C. is better than it has ever been.

Promptly at 10:30 a.m., the program began with the Freshmen Rush. Rush week, which provided thrills and amusement for the large

GROUP DISCUSS SCHOOL PROBLEMS

Recent Superintendents’ Meeting Attended by Downe and Pittman.

W. L. Downe, director of the Training School, and Dr. M. S. Pittman attended a meeting of the superintendents’ division of the Georgia Education Association, which was held in Atlanta Friday, November 22nd.

Problems which were of particular interest to public schools were discussed from the standpoint of the administration.

The chief topic of discussion at this meeting was the Limitation Tax Bill to be voted on by popular vote next fall. This bill will have an important influence on the financial system. In this way each school will have any way connected with students or the college will receive two personal invitations. The invitations will serve to better acquaint the school men with the college and its program. Also it will furnish a means by which the superintendent may keep track of his students.

The entire program has not been decided upon as yet, but according to J. D. Cherry, president of the Student Council.

FRESHMEN PLAN ANNUAL BANQUET

To Be One of Most Unusual and Entertaining Ever Held Here.

Now that the Thanksgiving banquet is over, students are looking forward to another brilliant affair next winter in the Training School. The annual Freshman banquet is held.

The idea of a Freshman banquet each year at Christmas is comparatively new on the campus, though the practice from which it originated is almost as old as the college itself.

Years ago when the gymnasium was where the Student Union is, it was the custom for the student body to meet there for one hour on the night before they left for the Christmas Hollidays and draw gift from the Christmas tree. These years later came the idea of having a special supper before the Christmas tree. From this originated the custom of having a banquet with a special celebration.
What a Homecoming!

And what a great time those old grads had shaking hands and telling again those tales of adventure which took place "way back yonder when . . ."

But what a shame it was that our carnival had to leave a few days before the alumni came.

The next time we have such a group of enthusiasts on our campus it might be well to remember these old-timers.

After all, this is where many of them learned to appreciate the finer things of life, and they won't love us if we forget them when, with a little effort, they could share our good fortune.

The Freshmen are now upperclassmen, or rather they aren't rats any more. After having duly and completely captured the banner in the Freshman Sophomore Rush on Thanksgiving, they are at least free from any Rat Court. From now henceforth, no Freshman, to the great grief of several upperclass boys, may be called upon to make up beds, clean rooms, or run errands. Much as we hate to ad in the rat days have at last become human beings who may think, act and talk at last like college students.

Much has been said in commendation of the recent Homecoming edition of the George-Anne. The members of the staff are thankful and feel encouraged by such comment. We will see the actual preparation that will be made for the 1935-36 session, wins such a place of distinction, the programs must be entertaining. From such worthy efforts we expect entertainment, and not eloquently worded in mind the fact that listeners want and expect entertainment, and not eloquently worded advertisements of the greatness of the South Georgia Teachers College.

THE GEORGE-ANNE

1936 OLYMPICS

Whether American athletes should participate in the Eleventh Olympiad, if it is to be held in Berlin, is a question that holds the root of the debate.

Why America should, and why America should not, are the arguments taken by the American Olympic Committee and the Committee on Air Play in Sports. The former has issued a pamphlet which presents the case for participation, followed by a presentation of the case against participation by the C. F. P. S. In 1932 the International Olympic Committee awarded the games to Berlin at which that time was a part of Republican Germany. Today Berlin and Germany are not Republican, but Nazi. And because of the racial, religious and political angles which have become involved through the Nazi reign, the Committee on Air Play in Sports deems it inadvisable for American athletes to take part, stating that "to hold the games in National Germany would be to give the moral and financial support of the sports world to that which is perhaps the most cruel, the most despotic and the most barbarous government of modern times."

On the other hand the Olympic Committee states that in accepting the German invitation the committee incurred irrelevant racial and religious affairs, and that the A. O. C. does not endorse the policies of any government in accepting its invitation to compete in the games.

The final decision will come from the athletes themselves. Meantime, such men as Norman Thomas, Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, Heywood Broun and Senator J. H. Metcalf seem very much concerned.

AS OTHERS TELL US

Basil Hall, who speaks his mind every week in the Mercer Cluster in his column, "For Men Only," is one of the outstanding state undergraduate writers. Hall writes in a manner which makes one enjoy reading, even if he disagrees with what is written. Some even interested in the way this Mercerian has his say about youth and welfare. So, presenting Mr. Hall:

"Massed Youth notoriously lacks individuality of thought. A vague promise of fame and glory and an ideal, and Youth goes shop-like to the slaughter. And yet regularly, once a year, like Christmas or Easter, we are reminded, not of the horrors, but of the glories of war. The world, say we, would be a sweeter spot were we not, but simply because you were taken in on a poorly hatched plot, 'to make the world safe for democracy'—whatever that means—is not our concern. Our concern is plainly stated in the idea that some day we must serve as po-shots for people we don't even know.

"If the sanctity of our nation is threatened, then we will be the first to jump to our guns. Don't you worry about that. But for you to constantly keep before us an attitude and a minder of militaristic ideals is to eventually instill in us the desire for new worlds to conquer. In no deliberate way, of pacifism is ripler in the bud, and the strengthening of the idea of a Court of Arbitration goes by the board.

"Your glory could have been a hazy, pleasant memory. With your help is becoming a menace."

Mighty Crook." Since everyone thinks that this story is fiction, a summary of his career at Mercer will suffice:

Guy is steadily improving, and Crowe plays his flank like a vet. These boys were in there scrapping on every play. Kessler and Plunkett had the ball down, and the slimy coating on the ball and the quick charge on every play, seldom if ever touch the ball, and crack 'em just as hard on the last play as on the kick-off. Give 'em a hand, fans.

We notice in the Augusta papers that two Kesslers, brothers of our tackle, are burning up football circles. Keep an eye on them, "Crook."

And did we have a big Homecoming or not! Even if the game was all wet, it was great football. The Profs should have won easily had the field been dry. That 95 lb. linesman was one of the best players Stetson had. We understand that the Hatter coach has offered him a scholarship for next year.

Heath did a swell job of punting in the Turkey Day set-to, considering the slimy coating on the ball and the quick charge of the Stetson line. What a triple-threat man this boy is going to be!

Three great athletes sang the proverbial swan song in Thursday's encounter. Where will Coach find three boys who can play football as Fulford, Riggs and Hines have for the last four years? It'll be hard to do. Ron voyage, fellows. We hope you do as well on life's muddy gridiron as you have on T. C.'s.

And now for some more of that space filler, "The Life of the Mighty Crook." Since everyone thinks that this story is fiction, a summary of his career at Mercer will suffice:

While at Mercer he was three times All-Southern in three sports: the first four-letter man in the history of the college; All-American end in the opinion of nearly all writers who saw him play; and largest holder of letters at Mercer, having a total of thirteen. He went from his Alma Mater to Dalton High School, and after coaching there for a few years was discovered by W. W. on one of his long scouting tours about the state and brought to T. C., where he has been disturbing the campus with his "Hurry-Hurry" and "C'mon, let's go!" for the last seven years.

We must admit our failure to determine, despite hours of research and many sleepless nights, the cause for Coach's most outstanding trait (to put it mildly), frugality.
ART DEPARTMENT DESIGNS MASKS

In the art department, under the direction of Miss Small, the students are engaged in making masks for the mask dance. Common clay of a poor grade is used as a base, and gradually better grades of Georgia clay are added and the whole shaped into mask faces.

After the clay molds are sufficiently hardened, they will be used to make paper-mache masks. This will be done by taking small strips of paper and giving them over the features of the masks until a sufficient thickness has been attained to prevent the paper from breaking. When the glue dries and hardens, the mask may be removed from the mold and coated with oil paint to bring out certain features.

Only a few masks are being made at the present, but more will be made in the future. This is a very interesting course and next quarter should see a considerable increase in enrollment.

T. C. OBSERVES HOMECOMING DAY

A crowd of spectators until it came to a glorious finish with Freshman Leroy Cowart capturing the colors for his class. From now on the Freshmen are free men.

The football game in the afternoon between the Teachers and Stetson can be summed up in two words—all wet.

Among The Clubs

L. T. C.

At the last regular meeting of the L. T. C., Louise Raiser, Verma Lassiter, Grace Clynotey and Sara Remington were hostesses.

DIX DOMINA

The regular meeting of the Dix Domina was held Thursday night, November 28th. Plans were made for a dance to be given at the Columns' Tea Room on December 7th.

IOTA PI NU

Members of the Iota Pi Nu fraternity and guests had dinner in Statesboro Thursday at the Norris Hotel. Afterwards they went to the game between the Teachers and Stetson.

SECOND RADIO PROGRAM FRIDAY

The second of a series of radio programs is to be presented ever Station WTOC, Savannah, Ga., Friday, December 6th.

These radio programs are under the direction of Dr. T. B. Stroup, head of the English department. It is Dr. Stroup's idea to capitalize the talent of the various organizations and individuals on the campus by means of these broadcasts.

These thirty-minute programs are to consist of music, drama, plays and talks by various departmental heads, giving the aims and objectives of their department, and a special news bulletin is to carry any special news concerning the activities of the faculty members and the student body.

Negotiations were started last summer between Dr. M. S. Pfitzan and the Borden heads for a special arrangement and a definite time for the presentation of these programs. These broadcasts are to be financed by the college.

THE GEORGE-ANNE

EPICUREAN

The Epicureans were entertained with a feast, Tuesday, November 28th, by their pledges. A dance was given Saturday, November 30th, at the Woman's Club in honor of the old and new pledges. The music was furnished by the school orchestra.

SOCIETIES

The Oglethorpe and Stephens Societies held a joint meeting Wednesday evening, November 27th, in the auditorium.

A Thanksgiving pageant was presented. Other features of the program were acrobatic dances by Barbara Gray and musical selection by a chorus of girls.

in the gymnasium afterward. Then, in 1939, after this custom had been practiced for several years, different committees were appointed to plan holiday entertainments for the year. It happened that the Freshman class was asked to entertain at Christmas. The class was delighted at being given this responsibility and has been allowed to give the Freshman banquet every year since.
