Scholars-in-Residence and Patti Pace Performance Festival Returns to Georgia Southern

January 19, 2016

STATESBORO, Ga. — “Celebrating Disability through Performance,” Scholars-in-Residence, Terry Galloway and Donna Marie Nudd, the Patti Pace Performance Festival returns to Georgia Southern University Jan. 27-30 to celebrate the 25th anniversary of the signing of the American with Disabilities Act.

The slate of events features performances, discussions, film showings, a book reading of Galloway’s Mean Little deaf Queer: A Memoir, and the two-day Patti Pace Performance Festival culminating in Galloway’s one-woman show, “You Are My Sunshine: A Kind of Love Story”.

The festival, which runs from 8:30 a.m.-5:30 p.m. Jan. 29-30, honors the late Patricia Pace, Ph.D., who was a teacher and theater director in the Department of Communication Arts at Georgia Southern University from 1985 until her passing in 2000. The festival rotates between the three universities Pace was affiliated with (Georgia Southern, Southern Illinois University, and LSU).

Galloway will perform her award-winning one-woman show “You Are My Sunshine: A Kind of Love Story” on Saturday, Jan. 30, at 7:30 p.m. in the Black Box Theatre, and Rebecca Kennerly’s, Ph.D., “Reflections on the ‘Sweet Life’: The Vidalia® Onion Oral History and Performance Project” will be reprised on Friday, Jan. 29, at 7:30 p.m. in the Black Box Theatre.

The Patti Pace Performance Festival is sponsored by the Campus Life Enrichment Committee (CLEC), College of Liberal Arts and Social Sciences (CLASS), Department of Communication Arts, Department of Literature and Philosophy, Department of Writing and Linguistics, Multicultural Student Organization, Students with Disabilities Resource Center, and the Theater Program.

Admission is free to the festival, but all students and faculty must register with Rebecca Kennerly by email (rkennerly@georgiasouthern.edu) by Wednesday, Jan. 27.
