that he carries it off so well. To one accustomed to the more fantastic plots of Mr. Forster's other novels, such a scheme—a triangle, two of whose members are seemingly improbable, much less compelling—is difficult to take seriously. But the simple plot gains a masterful complexity from small but carefully woven details; and it emerges not only unique, but as a fascinating book of this past decade.

The ending (there are actually three distinct endings) is its most outstanding feature. Fowles versus convention in telling a story of Mr. Forster's major themes. Just as he examines this modern man's life, he places his characters so does he examine it in his art. Refusing to impose convention on his work, he insists on treating his characters, not as real people, but as pieces in a game.

Finally, one can only hope that this wonderful work will be left in the beautifully designed book from Little, Brown ($6.95) and not turned over to the butchers in Hollywood to be made into a movie as dreadful as the one made from The Magus.
REPEAT PERFORMANCE
AIM OF ASC GOLFERS

Since the beginning of full quarter, the Armstrong State College Golf Team, defending champions of the G.I.A.C., have been working towards their upcoming season. Twice weekly they work with weights in the gym, and the other days they play at LaVida Country Club.

The team is composed of new personnel this year. Lim Brotheron is the only returning returnee, however Phil Gray did play and letter with the team last year. New members on the team include Robert Bradley, Mike Cohn, Bob Ferrelle, and Mike Lay.

The first match was March 30, at the Savannah Inn and Country Club. Armstrong, Georgia Southern, Bryan College from Rhode Island, and Michigan College from Ohio participated in that match. Future matches include The Citadel, South Carolina Augusta College, possibly Jacksonville, and the other conference foes. The conference match is May 21 and 22 in Macon, and Armstrong will be trying to become the first team to win the conference three years in a row. If the team captures the conference crown, they will travel to William Jewell, Missouri for the national finals.

In a recent Inkwell interview, Jim Brotherton said that he felt Armstrong has a good team, but they lack experience playing in this conference. After the first couple of matches, each player should gain confidence in his game, and the team can then concentrate on winning the conference again.

The Armstrong Baseball Team opened its season over the Spring break. So far the results have not been favorable for Armstrong; out of seven games, the Pirates have won only one. They defeated Western Carolina 7-4, but lost to Pembroke State 6-0 and 12-6, Belmont-Abbey 5-1 and 7-3, Davidson 5-1, and in a second game, Western Carolina 5-4.

The schedule is advantageous for Armstrong, with a majority of the games at home. Also, by playing teams out from Georgia, like Pembroke State, Glassboro State, and Davidson, the name of the school will begin to be known outside of Savannah. This is one reason why the athletic program at Armstrong is so important.

The conference games started Saturday, April 4, against Piedmont. As of yet, there is no way of rating Armstrong to the other conference teams, but it is felt that the Pirates have a good chance as any other team.
