ABOUT THE COLLECTION

Administrative History: The First District Agricultural and Mechanical School library collection was initially housed in a small room in the campus' main Administration Building and included over 2,000 bound volumes. By 1924, the same year the school was renamed Georgia Normal School, the library came to occupy the entire second floor of the building and included a single reading room, periodical room, two small conference rooms, and one office. In 1926, Frances Stubbs was employed as the first trained librarian and by 1929 the library's collection had grown to include 5,000 cataloged volumes, daily newspapers, and sixty periodicals.

During a transitional period in which the college moved from a normal school to a four-year institution, curriculum changes made heavier demands on library resources. The Rosenwald Building was completed in 1938, at a cost of $65,000, and was the first building dedicated especially to library services. Named the Rosenwald Library because of a contribution from the Julius Rosenwald Fund, the building consisted of a main floor with a split level ground floor, with a capacity to accommodate 276 individuals and 54,280 volumes. The library further became a selective depository for United States Federal documents in 1939.

The library's collection continued to increase steadily reaching the capacity of the physical facilities of the library. A 1962 self-study determined that if top-level library services were to meet the needs of increased enrollment and expanding academic programs, a new library building must be built. In 1972 construction began on a $4,000,000 library complex to meet the needs of the rapidly expanding campus. The 132,000 square foot building opened to Georgia Southern College students in Fall of 1975. In 1985 the building was named for Dr. Zach S. Henderson. Dr. Henderson (1902-1985) was a star student and athlete in college and began his career in education as principal, coach and science teacher of Eastman High School. In June 1927, he was tapped as Dean of Georgia Normal School, a position he held until February 1948, when he became President of the College, then Georgia Teachers College. His presidency included the period in which the college was desegregated. He retired in July 1968, having served Georgia Southern for 41 years.

In summer of 2004 a $22.75 million expansion and renovation project to further expand the facilities at the library began. The expansion was completed in August 2008 and added an additional 101,000 square feet to the library's area.

Scope and Content: This collection consists of various papers, records, and memorabilia of the Zach S. Henderson Library. Materials span 1933-2019, with the bulk of materials covering 1973-2004, and include accession and cataloging bound-volumes, circulation reports, annual reports, meeting minutes, committee papers, and promotional materials including audiovisual materials about the library.

System of Arrangement:

Materials are arranged in three series. The first series contains accession records for Georgia Southern's library from the 1920s through the 1950s. The second series contains library records and documents. The third series contains audiovisual materials and oversized items.
