Georgia Southern offers Graduate Studies information session

MARCH 5, 2007

Anyone interested in pursuing a graduate degree at Georgia Southern University is invited to attend an information session on Tuesday, March 13 at 6:30 p.m. in Henderson Library Room 1300 on the University campus in Statesboro.

The session will provide information on more than 45 graduate degree programs and majors, requirements, financial aid and upcoming deadlines.

Four new programs will be introduced for Fall 2007: the Doctor of Clinical Psychology, Doctor of Public Health, Master of Science in Applied Economics, and Master of Accounting with a concentration in forensic accounting.

“Georgia Southern’s graduate programs combine challenging academics with professional development,” said Dawn Lipker, graduate studies manager for the University’s Office of Admissions. “Faculty and staff are fully invested in each graduate student’s progress and success. It is a winning and worthwhile combination.”
