How to Use Career Services

self-assessments such as the Myers-Briggs Type Indicator that students can take at Career Services to learn their personality type and general interests. Once you know what career fields you may be interested in, Career Services offers students access to The Georgia Information System, which allows students to see statistics and facts on specific careers. Students can also use Graduation Surveys found on the Career Services page on Armstrong’s website to see what Armstrong students are up to after graduating. According to the Career Services page, Armstrong students who complete their career services stop by to have it reviewed and critiqued.

So, you’ve decided on a major and made a killer resume, now what? The next step is to visit the Career Services website and check out internships and job postings. Career Services posts “part-time, seasonal, co-op, internship, and post-graduate” job openings for employers using College Central Network. After finding a job and submitting a resume, comes the interview process: Career Services offers several tips on how to prepare for an interview, such as outfit do’s and don’ts and sample questions. Students can also schedule a mock interview with Career Services to better prepare themselves for future interviews. To even further prepare students for interviews, Career Services hosts a Clothes Closet every Tuesday and Wednesday. There are also several resources that are beneficial as well as alumni. One way that Armstrong ensures its students learn about these future opportunities is by helping students with career planning, resume preparation, interviewing skills, job placement and graduate school applications.

During the first two years of college, many students change their major at least once (or twice, or three times). Finding the right major can be extremely tough. However, Career Services offers several resources to help students make sure they are on the right track. Students can make an appointment with a counselor to help plan their major and career, or explore their personality and interests to find a major that works for them. There are also several resources that are beneficial as well as alumni. One way that Armstrong ensures its students learn about these future opportunities is by helping students with career planning, resume preparation, interviewing skills, job placement and graduate school applications.

As you can see, Career Services has an abundance of resources that are beneficial to students for preparing for their futures. If you have any questions, feel free to stop by the Office of Career Services located in Memorial College Center, Room 101, or call and make an appointment with a Career Advisor.

The Play Fair was at the Rec Center and a man who had games such as icebreakers for students to get to know each other hosted the event. I really enjoyed both events.”

The Wayne Hoffman event was put on by CUB in the Ogeechee Theater. Hoffman brought student volunteers up to the stage and was able to figure out certain words students were thinking. He also had the opportunity to do spin and get to know the audience better. "Fester has been able to get helpful feedback from students about the events as far," We ask students what they think about the career services, that many students have been asking for feedback as well as future perspectives and student engagements in their lives. Some of the events coming up are speaker Stan Pew's presentation that will be on Sept. 7. RSA outdoor movie night will be on Sept 8, a trip to the Oatland Island Wildlife Refuge that will be on Sept 19, Ronnie Jordan’s comedy special on Sept. 13, and the After Dark After Party on Sept. 23.

The RSA will be presenting “Remember The Tenants” by the Compass Point Clubhouse for movie night and students are encouraged to bring blankets and chairs. The Rec Center will be hosting the trip to the Outdoor Wildlife Center. Visit the career services’ website and check out internships and job postings. The value of a human being resides in their ability to love, not in their ability to receive, which makes every human being here as valuable as a human being can be because you’re giving each other to one another just by being here, so thanks for coming,” said Singer.

An Interview With Local Savannah Band Perpetual Care

“Tell me a little bit about your band, you’re all based here in Savannah, correct?”

Perpetual Care

When asked if there’s

The subject matter of the group’s songs takes most of their inspiration from their real life events and deal with topics spanning from international politics to struggles with addiction and religion. The bands Facebook page describes them as “A globally conscious acid-folk-rock band that points to the absurdity of the evils of consumerism.”

“Almost the songs are pretty cool, I don’t really care how I don’t real like the way that humans are behaving and how I’m being,” Lucas remarks.

When asked about the inspiration for the song “Serious Nonsense,” Lucas says “as far as Serious Nonsense goes, I’m going to be real honest, I don’t know if it’s going to be that serious nonsense cause it’s nonsense, but it has some serious detrimental effects on human lives, there are men that have to hold their sons without any arms and legs, dead from an explosion in Iraq, or the middle east, because of all of this bullshit and nonsense that’s around us right now.

The shirts on our backs and the food that we eat, just like us, these things are cheap. And people get killed over the bullshit, you know, get killed or get messed up stuff happen to get to work faster, people get killed over the fact that we want to buy a pair of shoes for twenty dollars, and that’s why this song is called Serious Nonsense.”

When asked if there’s anything they’d like to add, Messinger chimes in, “definitely, that mention we’re going to have things like moon bounces and dunk tanks at all our upcoming releases. It’s gonna be a party.”

You can catch Perpetual Care at the Foundry Coffee Club in downtown Savannah on September 10 at the Suicide Prevention Day benefit.

CAMPUS VOICES:

What are your thoughts on President Trump’s revoking of DACA?

Well, it’s that time of year again. Syllabus Week is over, we’ve gotten used to our classes and our professors are piling on the assignments. So where do you go to study for your first test or to knock out your first big paper? There are some great places to study on campus like the library or in the Learning Commons, but on-campus studying isn’t for everyone. Here are some off-campus study spots where you can grab some coffee and get your work done!

Found in the Starland District in midtown Savannah is Foxy Loxy Café. Grab some coffee and a taco and head out to their backyard for Acoustic Tuesday, or hunker down in one of the rooms upstairs with your books for a quiet study session in this house-turned-coffee-shop. Foxy serves PERC coffee and has an amazing selection of pastries and Tex-Mex food to snack on. They also serve beer and wine.

TIP: Stop by any weekday from 5:30pm for Foxy’s Happy Hour: $2 Lattes and $2 Lone Stars.

If you need a quieter atmosphere to get your homework done, try The Foundery Coffee Pub in the Victorian District just a few blocks from Forsyth Park. The Foundery is very spacious, giving people plenty of room to spread out and get things done. It also offers a relaxing atmosphere with soothing music playing in the background. They serve the usual coffee and tea drinks, but spice things up with their signature drinks (some of which are named after Game of Thrones characters.)

Graduate student Justin Ellis cracks open his books at The Foundery Espresso on Broughton Street in the heart of downtown Savannah. Personally, I think that if you want to come to our country, you need a reason. I think that DACA is too broad in its current form. If a highly-skilled worker came into this country, that would be understandable. However, a lot of people take advantage.

Will Jackson

I don’t agree with it. I don’t think you should take somebody’s rights from right under their feet.

Heather Pittman

It’s not right. A lot of immigrants come to America to live the American Dream, and President Trump is taking that away from them. It just isn’t right.

Where to Study Off-Campus

Senior Health Administration major Lane Born feels at home studying at Gallery Espresso on Chippewa Square in downtown Savannah. Gallery is a great place to get work done because of the honey feel. Born loves “how much character it has.” Gallery gives off a funky vibe with its mismatched furniture and local artwork that changes weekly. They have a huge menu with homemade pastries, salads, sandwiches, and desserts, as well as tons of coffees and teas to choose from. Born likes that they serve espresso drinks and wine. She says, “I can have a coffee if I need a pick me up and [to] get a lot done, or a glass of wine if I am just wanting to read or study and relax.” The funky, laidback vibe at Gallery makes it the perfect place to kick back, relax and knock out some homework.

As Midterm gets closer and closer, take these off-campus study spots into consideration when you’re looking for the perfect spot to sit down and study!
The point of the option offense is for the quarterback to have just that - an option: to run or to pitch. For redshirt freshman starting quarterback Shai Werts, neither choice was appealing at Auburn on Saturday.

The Tigers' front seven shut down the Eagles' running game, blanketing running backs Wesley Fields and L.A. Ramsby, along with Werts, en route to a 41-7 victory at Jordan-Hare Stadium.

First half

The Georgia Southern offense could get almost nothing going in the first half, with 23 rushes for only 33 yards, including a 25-yard scamper by Werts that accounted for the over two-thirds of the total GS first-half yardage.

"We've got to be able to do what we came out to do, which is run the ball," head coach Tyson Summers said.

The Eagle defense stood its ground with the exception of a few long plays, even after their defensive leader, junior safety Josh Moon, left the game with an apparent ankle injury late in the first quarter.

"Our defense played well early," Summers said. "I thought they kept us in the game."

Senior linebacker Chris DeLaRosa had two tackles for a loss, a fumble recovery, and a forced fumble on a blind-side strip-sack that was recovered by junior linebacker Tomarcio Reese and returned 22 yards for the lone Eagle touchdown. Auburn scored first on a 50-yard field goal that senior kicker Daniel Carlson made look easy. On their third drive, the Tigers rode junior back Kerryon Johnson to the end zone as he sprinted 60 yards down the right side line. Auburn quarterback Jarrett Stidham ran in a 14-yard touchdown, and Kam Martin, in the game after Johnson was hurt, broke a 36-yarder off for another touchdown.

Second half

Without its top two running backs, Auburn's offense didn't miss a beat using its third-string back, Martin. An exhausted Georgia Southern defense was worn down by the tempo of Auburn head coach Gus Malzahn's quick-hitting offense.

To open the third quarter, Martin led the attack down to the 19-yard line, where Stidham hit junior wideout Ryan Davis on a crossing pattern that he caught in stride, then cut across the field and dove into the end zone through three Eagle defenders. With the score at 31-7, the rout was officially on.

On the Eagles' second drive of the second half, Werts was sacked twice, losing massive yardage and asserting Auburn's dominance with the pass rush. Auburn senior linebacker Tre Williams led the charge with two sacks and double-digit tackles.

The Eagles gradually began to pick up yardage in stead of losing it, with Werts and Ramsby each getting loose in the fourth quarter for big runs. However, it was too late for the Eagles to get back into the game.

GS safety Jay Bowdry led the defense with 12 tackles and an interception, coupled with strong efforts from DeLaRosa and Reese. Ramsby led the running backs with 11 carries for 33 yards.

Both teams pulled a significant amount of starters in the second portion of the fourth quarter.

Stay tuned for photos, quotes and updates on Josh Moon's injury and the Eagles.
