Yoko Sekino-Bové

Ceramic Artist

Nationally respected potter, Yoko Sekino-Bové is a Japanese-American artist whose ornate ceramic artwork blends her Japanese upbringing with her experiences living and working in the United States. Her work has been exhibited in both commercial and educational galleries across the U.S. as well as South Korea, Canada, Turkey and the Dominican Republic.

Yoko will present a lecture on her work on Tuesday, Oct. 18 from 5-7 p.m. in VA, room 2071.

“Yoko’s artwork creates dialogues that expand our understanding of art, culture and community ... particular stories in her work inevitably touch on all the humanities. A platter, vase or tea set might humorously illustrate easily relatable stories of past relationships, the struggle of meeting new friends, or the difficulty in communicating in an unfamiliar language," said ceramics professor Jeff Schmuki. "No matter your background, each story is easily relatable."
