Flatbed Picture Planes: LaChance, Mosquera, Schissel

Flatbed Pictures Planes is an exploration of how the painted or printed surface functions today as an information-dispensing artifact. How does the static picture plane operate in contemporary information culture? What does representation mean in a society increasingly organized by abstract networks? Contemporary artists Alicia LaChance, Laura Mosquera and Amy Schissel have dispensed with notions of painting as a single window into a unified picture space, and instead create non-hierarchic and multivalent approaches to layering and simultaneity in tune with hybridized, jump-cut modes of seeing.

Join us Thursday, Feb. 2, for a curator lecture with Gallery Director Jason Hoelscher. The presentation will be from 5 - 6 p.m. in Arts Building, room 2071.
