Follow this and additional works at: https://digitalcommons.georgiasouthern.edu/inkwell

This newspaper is brought to you for free and open access by the Student Media at Digital Commons@Georgia Southern. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Inkwell by an authorized administrator of Digital Commons@Georgia Southern. For more information, please contact digitalcommons@georgiasouthern.edu.
students present research at annual TechFest

DONNY WILLIAMS
STAFF WRITER

Last Friday the department of Computer Science and Information Technology hosted Armstrong's TechFest 2017. TechFest featured student research projects and an open discussion about the current state of the tech industry. Representatives from local tech companies such as Creative Chef, Commerce V3, HabMag, IC's and eLine showcased their business and offered students research advice.

Stephen Boye and McKell West won first place for their 95 percent confidence interval for a three-month prediction of stock prices. Senior computer science major Ryan Mims and his team took second place with their project. Chamsakdi Baddi took third with his work concerning data encryption using elliptic curves.

Representative speakers from the Technology Association of Georgia, Larry Wilson and Nick Batey, agreed that cyber security and big data encryption using elliptic curves are of interest.

Since 1935 THEINK WELL35 @INKWELL35 QUARTERFINALS ICRAIGSLIST ART SHOW TENNIS TEAMS FIGHT ONTO QUARTERFINALS... more information on upcoming Pride Month events, check out Armstrong's calendar and GSA flyers around campus.

STAFF WRITER

Georgia Southern University (GSU) President, Dr. Jaimie Hebert speaks at Consolidation Town Hall Q&A on April 12. (Live stream video still via Armstrong).

"Our consolidation will inspire creativity and fire people up," said "that's okay," put it back in the box and start placing departments within those colleges, we’ll know where they’re located and start placing departments there.

And change is always difficult, even when it’s the right thing to do," Hebert said. Hebert plans on Armstrong’s campus serving as campus will be the epicenter of Georgia Southern University (GSU) President, Dr. Jaimie Hebert will have an office on Armstrong’s campus as well as a presence on the Hinesville campus.

Bell Howells, department head of Languages, Literature and Philosophy, commented that there is "a tremendous amount of anxiety that’s really escalating in relation to local structures, departmental structures... and fully faculty are feeling it in terms of what things are going to look like here, not just in the upper levels but in the levels we work in every day." Because we are early in this process... I think there will still be a lot of unanswered questions. I think we’ve got the colleges established, know where they’re located even if they’re not completely seen as... national universities," he said.

The Guy-Straight Alliance’s (GSA) Pride Month celebration continued last week. Maddox, junior sociology major, at Armstrong State University’s news source since 1935.

LUCY STONE NEWS EDITOR

Georgia Southern University (GSU) President, Dr. Jaimie Hebert, visited Armstrong’s campus for a Town Hall meeting on the consolidation between GSU and ASU last Wednesday from 2-3 p.m.

Held in the Fine Arts auditorium, the meeting began as some of their parents took their coming out stories. "When you are queer you can usually tell when another person is, too. However, when a straight person says that "inspire creativity and fire people up," and to remember that "every company is a technology company."" Many graduates look to quintessential tech companies like Apple but forget that many fields in the modern day digital economy call upon computer science expertise.

Even non-tech-focused businesses still hire tech professionals for positions involving big data management, online advertising analytics and trade logistics. An encouraging mention of the $50,000 annual salary average for some Georgia tech positions sent a sigh of relief through the crowd.

When discussion opened for the audience, several students voiced their concerns about the imminent threat of automation to the long-term livelihood of their future job positions. Forward thinking students fear that the machines they are studying will end up replacing them in the workforce. Students, representing the LGBTQ+ community.

"When discussion opened for the audience, several students voiced their concerns about the imminent threat of automation to the long-term livelihood of their future job positions. Forward thinking students fear that the machines they are studying will end up replacing them in the workforce. For more information on upcoming Pride Month events, check out Armstrong’s calendar and GSA flyers around campus.

"There is a perception of difference between the Georgia Southern campus and the Armstrong campus. I invite you to visit. Come talk to folks," Hebert said. After being asked about diversity on campus Monday in his office on Armstrong’s campus, Hebert has an office on Armstrong’s campus as well as a presence on the Hinesville campus.

Bell Howells, department head of Languages, Literature and Philosophy, commented that there is "a tremendous amount of anxiety that’s really escalating in relation to local structures, departmental structures... and fully faculty are feeling it in terms of what things are going to look like here, not just in the upper levels but in the levels we work in every day." Because we are early in this process... I think there will still be a lot of unanswered questions. I think we’ve got the colleges established, know where they’re located even if they’re not completely seen as... national universities," he said.

The Guy-Straight Alliance’s (GSA) Pride Month celebration continued last week. Maddox, junior sociology major, at Armstrong State University’s news source since 1935.

LUCY STONE NEWS EDITOR

Georgia Southern University (GSU) President, Dr. Jaimie Hebert, visited Armstrong’s campus for a Town Hall meeting on the consolidation between GSU and ASU last Wednesday from 2-3 p.m.

Held in the Fine Arts auditorium, the meeting began as some of their parents took their coming out stories. "When you are queer you can usually tell when another person is, too. However, when a straight person says that "inspire creativity and fire people up," and to remember that "every company is a technology company."" Many graduates look to quintessential tech companies like Apple but forget that many fields in the modern day digital economy call upon computer science expertise.

Even non-tech-focused businesses still hire tech professionals for positions involving big data management, online advertising analytics and trade logistics. An encouraging mention of the $50,000 annual salary average for some Georgia tech positions sent a sigh of relief through the crowd.

When discussion opened for the audience, several students voiced their concerns about the imminent threat of automation to the long-term livelihood of their future job positions. Forward thinking students fear that the machines they are studying will end up replacing them in the workforce. Students, representing the LGBTQ+ community.

"There is a perception of difference between the Georgia Southern campus and the Armstrong campus. I invite you to visit. Come talk to folks," Hebert said. After being asked about diversity on campus Monday in his office on Armstrong’s campus, Hebert has an office on Armstrong’s campus as well as a presence on the Hinesville campus.

Bell Howells, department head of Languages, Literature and Philosophy, commented that there is "a tremendous amount of anxiety that’s really escalating in relation to local structures, departmental structures... and fully faculty are feeling it in terms of what things are going to look like here, not just in the upper levels but in the levels we work in every day." Because we are early in this process... I think there will still be a lot of unanswered questions. I think we’ve got the colleges established, know where they’re located even if they’re not completely seen as... national universities," he said.

The Guy-Straight Alliance’s (GSA) Pride Month celebration continued last week. Maddox, junior sociology major, at Armstrong State University’s news source since 1935.

LUCY STONE NEWS EDITOR

Georgia Southern University (GSU) President, Dr. Jaimie Hebert, visited Armstrong’s campus for a Town Hall meeting on the consolidation between GSU and ASU last Wednesday from 2-3 p.m.

Held in the Fine Arts auditorium, the meeting began as some of their parents took their coming out stories. "When you are queer you can usually tell when another person is, too. However, when a straight person says that "inspire creativity and fire people up," and to remember that "every company is a technology company."" Many graduates look to quintessential tech companies like Apple but forget that many fields in the modern day digital economy call upon computer science expertise.

Even non-tech-focused businesses still hire tech professionals for positions involving big data management, online advertising analytics and trade logistics. An encouraging mention of the $50,000 annual salary average for some Georgia tech positions sent a sigh of relief through the crowd.

When discussion opened for the audience, several students voiced their concerns about the imminent threat of automation to the long-term livelihood of their future job positions. Forward thinking students fear that the machines they are studying will end up replacing them in the workforce. Students, representing the LGBTQ+ community.

"There is a perception of difference between the Georgia Southern campus and the Armstrong campus. I invite you to visit. Come talk to folks," Hebert said. After being asked about diversity on campus Monday in his office on Armstrong’s campus, Hebert has an office on Armstrong’s campus as well as a presence on the Hinesville campus.

Bell Howells, department head of Languages, Literature and Philosophy, commented that there is "a tremendous amount of anxiety that’s really escalating in relation to local structures, departmental structures... and fully faculty are feeling it in terms of what things are going to look like here, not just in the upper levels but in the levels we work in every day." Because we are early in this process... I think there will still be a lot of unanswered questions. I think we’ve got the colleges established, know where they’re located even if they’re not completely seen as... national universities," he said.

The Guy-Straight Alliance’s (GSA) Pride Month celebration continued last week. Maddox, junior sociology major, at Armstrong State University’s news source since 1935.

LUCY STONE NEWS EDITOR

Georgia Southern University (GSU) President, Dr. Jaimie Hebert, visited Armstrong’s campus for a Town Hall meeting on the consolidation between GSU and ASU last Wednesday from 2-3 p.m.

Held in the Fine Arts auditorium, the meeting began as some of their parents took their coming out stories. "When you are queer you can usually tell when another person is, too. However, when a straight person says that "inspire creativity and fire people up," and to remember that "every company is a technology company."" Many graduates look to quintessential tech companies like Apple but forget that many fields in the modern day digital economy call upon computer science expertise.

Even non-tech-focused businesses still hire tech professionals for positions involving big data management, online advertising analytics and trade logistics. An encouraging mention of the $50,000 annual salary average for some Georgia tech positions sent a sigh of relief through the crowd.

When discussion opened for the audience, several students voiced their concerns about the imminent threat of automation to the long-term livelihood of their future job positions. Forward thinking students fear that the machines they are studying will end up replacing them in the workforce. Students, representing the LGBTQ+ community.

"There is a perception of difference between the Georgia Southern campus and the Armstrong campus. I invite you to visit. Come talk to folks," Hebert said. After being asked about diversity on campus Monday in his office on Armstrong’s campus, Hebert has an office on Armstrong’s campus as well as a presence on the Hinesville campus.

Bell Howells, department head of Languages, Literature and Philosophy, commented that there is "a tremendous amount of anxiety that’s really escalating in relation to local structures, departmental structures... and fully faculty are feeling it in terms of what things are going to look like here, not just in the upper levels but in the levels we work in every day." Because we are early in this process... I think there will still be a lot of unanswered questions. I think we’ve got the colleges established, know where they’re located even if they’re not completely seen as... national universities," he said.

The Guy-Straight Alliance’s (GSA) Pride Month celebration continued last week. Maddox, junior sociology major, at Armstrong State University’s news source since 1935.
Pirates fight on to PBC quarterfinals

Teresa Durham
Staff Writer

It was an emotional weekend for tennis players and their fans as the teams played their last home matches.

Winning this weekend’s matches was crucial for the Pirates, who gained a No. 2 seed against the Nighthawks. Montgomery University’s Warhawks, the men were only suffering a loss in the non-conference matches. The women were most successful in doubles partnerships were reunited and it was Senior Day.

A nice senior ceremony was held before the match. It was an emotional day. A nice senior ceremony was held before the match. President Bleicken was outstanding of Jan Porteset and Alberto Chamorro. The last match with the Pirates was held before the match. Men's Tennis players Ignacio Hernandez and Luca Cerin (Armstrong Communications)

A new doubles pair composed of Leukia Styblova and Tatjana Stoll performed in five nights, a formula that was most successful in doubles partnerships were reunited and it was Senior Day.

Emily Smith
Photography Editor

Lorenzo Camilli was the last to win his tiebreak, but he did not recover. He lost match by 6-1, 6-0.

Mark Laishley 6-2, 6-1 Alvaro ‘Chano’ Chamorro finished next but only due to a muscle cramp late into the match. Eventually Chamorro could not recover. He lost 5-7, 7-5, 10-5, while Luca Cerin had an intense match up with Niklas Zeilen.

Leukia Styblova for No. 2 singles was able to sneak out a 6-4, 6-4 win over Dallalaha.

Allen Patch at 6-2, 6-3, Luca Lutostac with 6-2, 6-3, and finally Tamir Chalifour at 6-2, 6-2 all won their matches. Lutostac seemed particularly emotional but was up and laughing with friends and teammates soon.

Ranked No. 1, Tatjana Stoll had the hardest time against Felicia Baratta as they went into a third set of 15-point tiebreaker. At 6-1, 6-2, 10-3, Stoll unfortunately lost, but played an amazing overall win.

Leukia Styblova for No. 2 singles was able to sneak out a 6-4, 6-4 win over Dallalaha.

A new doubles pair composed of Leukia Styblova and Tatjana Stoll performed in five nights, a formula that was most successful in doubles partnerships were reunited and it was Senior Day.

Tatjana Stoll performed in five nights, a formula that was most successful in doubles partnerships were reunited and it was Senior Day.

The men’s team cleaned up almost just as well. They seemed to have harder in the doubles department with No. 1 doubles going into an extra game, making the score 9-8. Luca Cerin and Ignacio Hernandez fielded it well. No. 2 doubles was easily won at 6-3 with a team of Jan Porteset and Alberto Chamorro. The new freshman duo of Alvaro Chamorro and Berna Kantz also defeated their opponents at 8-4.

No surprise, Ignacio ‘Nico’ Hernandez was the very first player finished that evening at 3-3, singles winning his last match by 6-1, 6-0.

"Everybody has done such a marvelous job. What a great tradition this has been and what wonderful student athletes," Bleicken said. "I don't think people generally know how outstanding our student athletes are."

Head Coach Sean McCallery was excited and looking forward to the next step in the PBC Tournament.

"Today was great [with] (it) being able to send off our seniors Luca, Natio, and Anca. They’ve obviously met a lot a program," he said. "We’re excited about getting our full team back and we’ll see what happens next."

The PBC Tournament Quarterfinals will be April 21-23 at the Dr. Eddie Floyd Tennis Center in Florence South Carolina.

Before the San Antonio Spurs and Golden State Warriors played on national television on March 11th, Warrior coach Steve Kerr announced the resting of his star players Steph Curry, Klay Thompson and Draymond Green. Spurs coach, Greg Popovich, followed suit shortly after to announce his players would also be resting.

Kerr cited his players' health for the playoffs as the reason behind the rest. He also proposed a shorter schedule in order to avoid the need to rest players during the season.

In order to help ease into a transition period of reducing the schedule, Kerr claimed he would also roll out rest days for his players, which may not be perfect, but it may get our best players get extra rest throughout the season. It is hard even just going down the list of players who made that dramatic difference in five nights. I don't see that happening because there is money at stake for everybody," said Kerr.

Lorenzo Camilli was the last to win his tiebreak, but he did not recover. He lost match by 6-1, 6-0.

"Everybody has done such a marvelous job. What a great tradition this has been and what wonderful student athletes," Bleicken said. "I don't think people generally know how outstanding our student athletes are."

Steve Kerr proposed the NBA reduce its schedule.

In March, Steve Kerr proposed the NBA reduce its schedule.

In order to help ease into a transition period of reducing the schedule, Kerr claimed he would also roll out rest days for his players, which may not be perfect, but it may get our best players get extra rest throughout the season. It is hard even just going down the list of players who made that dramatic difference in five nights. I don't see that happening because there is money at stake for everybody," said Kerr.

Steve Kerr proposed the NBA reduce its schedule.

"We'll come as close as we can to eliminating the four-out-five formula. We think we can make a dramatic reduction," Adam Silver, NBA Commissioner, said, via ESPN.com. "We hear you loud and clearly. It’s a function of number of days in the schedule."

While the physical grind of back-to-back and heavy loaded schedules has been well documented, the mental aspect of the game does not receive the same spotlight. Larry Sanders is the perfect example of the NBA’s mental toll.

Sanders suffered from an anxiety disorder that required him, when the anxiety flared to a breaking point, to spend hours alone in order to fully recover. However, being on a bus or a plane loaded with teammates and coaches, isolation is nearly impossible to find.

Sanders quit the NBA in 2015 in order to focus on his mental health. While a reduced schedule could be beneficial for player’s physical and mental rest, the financial may be too much for Commissioner Sil...
Creepin' on Craigslist

Rule or Die means forever - nwo

Trust is everything until you lose respect. When you let someone sacrifice everything for you then you will prey to take care of "yourself" that's ironically messed up. There is ALWAYS a way if the love is real and apparently it wasn't. You experienced different types of pain all through life but letting your walls down only to be stabbed in the heart... that's the type wound that never heals.

Hug a stranger in downtown - nwo

I had just finished my meal outside the restaurant and you walked up to me to talk. You sensed there was something and you felt like you needed to tell me a few things. Your touch and hug made me feel better than I have felt in such a long time. I felt a connection to you, and I want to talk more. Please let me know you weren't just an angel.

Cutest Dimples in Savannah - nwo

I stepped on your shoes on the way to the bathroom on St. Patrick's Day in Savannah Smiles Dancing Piano, and I didn't know if it was the beer or the jello shots, but your smile had me SHOOK. I don't even care if I cramped you out by grabbing your arm when we ran into each other at a different bar a couple hours later (don't ask me what it was called), I was hammered.

I just wanted to see your stupid cute dimples again. You're pretty sure you have wavy brown hair and brown eyes, too, and you might have been wearing a grey sweater (and refusing to dance with me in a conga line). I was wearing a green shirt and hoop earrings, and kept asking questions I didn't really care about the answer to (like your name and what college you went to).

So, yeah, if you're ever drunk off your ass in Savannah again, hit me up and we'll make out by the ice machine outside.

Saw you on Montgomery this morning - nwo

I was driving my car and stopped at the stoplight on Montgomery and Oglethorpe.

You were with a girl and you were in the passenger seat. You had an overalls, it was around 11am, and you are extremely pretty. I couldn't help but stare and I'm pretty sure you saw me. I think I might have audibly said "aww". My hair is white. Let me know if you are interested.

Dropped off - nwo

Picked you up in Wilmington this Thursday to see your group of girlfriends for a party. Me drunk driver. Let's communicate tell me the type celebration you were attending with that bruised nose lol.

Safe Space Training
April 20
12 p.m.-3 p.m.
University Hall 156

Military Science AROTC Award Ceremony
April 20
2:30p.m.-5p.m.
Oglethorpe Theatre

Annual Student Awards Convocation
April 20
9a.m.-7p.m.
Student Union Ballroom

Piano in the Arts: Sides and Duets
April 20
10a.m.-4:30p.m.
Armstrong Fine Arts Auditorium

NAACP White Party
April 21
7:30p.m.
International Garden

21st Annual Savannah Asian Cultural Festival
April 22
10 a.m.-4 a.m.
Hunter, Lenox and International Garden

From Class Presentations to Interviews
April 22
9a.m.-10a.m.
Student Union Skidaway Room

From Class Presentations to Interviews
April 22
9a.m.-10a.m.
Student Union Skidaway Room

2015 Savannah Nights
April 28
7p.m.-11p.m.

CREEPIN' ON CRAIGSLIST

Rule or Die means forever - nwo

Trust is everything until you lose respect. When you let someone sacrifice everything for you then you will prey to take care of "yourself" that's ironically messed up. There is ALWAYS a way if the love is real and apparently it wasn't. You experienced different types of pain all through life but letting your walls down only to be stabbed in the heart... that's the type wound that never heals.

Hug a stranger in downtown - nwo

I had just finished my meal outside the restaurant and you walked up to me to talk. You sensed there was something and you felt like you needed to tell me a few things. Your touch and hug made me feel better than I have felt in such a long time. I felt a connection to you, and I want to talk more. Please let me know you weren't just an angel.

Cutest Dimples in Savannah - nwo

I stepped on your shoes on the way to the bathroom on St. Patrick's Day in Savannah Smiles Dancing Piano, and I didn't know if it was the beer or the jello shots, but your smile had me SHOOK. I don't even care if I cramped you out by grabbing your arm when we ran into each other at a different bar a couple hours later (don't ask me what it was called), I was hammered.

I just wanted to see your stupid cute dimples again. You're pretty sure you have wavy brown hair and brown eyes, too, and you might have been wearing a grey sweater (and refusing to dance with me in a conga line). I was wearing a green shirt and hoop earrings, and kept asking questions I didn't really care about the answer to (like your name and what college you went to).

So, yeah, if you're ever drunk off your ass in Savannah again, hit me up and we'll make out by the ice machine outside.

Saw you on Montgomery this morning - nwo

I was driving my car and stopped at the stoplight on Montgomery and Oglethorpe.

You were with a girl and you were in the passenger seat. You had an overalls, it was around 11am, and you are extremely pretty. I couldn't help but stare and I'm pretty sure you saw me. I think I might have audibly said "aww". My hair is white. Let me know if you are interested.

Dropped off - nwo

Picked you up in Wilmington this Thursday to see your group of girlfriends for a party. Me drunk driver. Let's communicate tell me the type celebration you were attending with that bruised nose lol.
Eclectic Collective showcases senior work

LILA MILLER
ART EDITOR

This past Friday meant more than the return of the weekend for senior art stu-

Sonia Mednick presented intermediary host, thanking Armstrong faculty and attendees for supporting students and the arts as a whole. The artists each took turns speaking about their work. Victoria Klein was the first artist to introduce her work. Klein chose several different mediums such as paper prints, embroidery and crystals to display a recurring theme of beauty and death. She presented black and white photos, photography prints of skulls juxtaposed with vibrant, emotive flowers that she added post process. Klein also utilized sculpture by creating her own crystals using borax on a wearing and ceramic pots. Tanner Levi presented his graphic design and branding work. He thanked professor Angela Horne for her support before illustrating the thought process behind his campaign. Levi chose a bold color palette reminiscent of the cyan, magenta, yellow and key (CMYK) printing process used by standard compound printers. Through his talents, Levi created his own fonts from the older models of pixels within computers. Levi also used his work to create a branding campaign to showcase new media art and find places for them at contemporary museums. His work advertised a ficti-tional gallery reception showing new media work that he hopes to see in the future. Elizabeth Culver was next to present. Culver briefly explained that nature is the main theme in all her work. Her pieces included sewing a tribute quilt for her late mother, using solarization in the Armstrong and utilizing organic materials for a sculpture. The purpose of "STARS" was to be a place for gay people, transgender youths and others to get off the streets to have a safe haven. Johnson was described by witnesses and peers as one of the few people to start the riots. She threw what is now known as "the shot glass heard 'round the world." The riots repeated the following night and again a few nights later. Later in life, Johnson founded the Street Transgender Ad-

"Stonewall" that was released in 2015, which had many inac-rewards. In 1969, Johnson was arrested after only a week. The vice president of the GSA Charles Brunmille who explained that, "as an office-er of the GSA I feel like it's important to know about our heritage and where we came from. It's important for us to learn about our history. This documentary showcases the role transgender people played in the rights for LGBTQ people."

He went on to insist that it is important to show documentaries on the subject matter, compared to Hollywood movies such as the film "Stonewall" that was released in 2015, which had many inaccuracies about the Stonewall riots.

You can watch "Pay It No Mind" on YouTube. For more information about future GSA events and Pride Month, check out Armstrong's events calendar.

Culvert's quilt is made of photos of her mother and iridescent weaving. She also displayed her darkroom solarization landscape photos. One notable piece in her colllection was a large sculpture of a monkey. The tree is mounted to a darkened canvas and is adorned with organic materials. Sonia Mednick went on to present graphic illustrations and comic strips. Mednick illustrated numerous goddesses describing the elements fire, water, air and earth. Digital illustrations and symbolic bat-ties for each goddess further drove home the symbolism. Mednick also created a comic of herself as if she were in a dream world, as well as handmade ghost patches available for purchase. Ronell Hughey used mostly charcoal to create his own take on traditional Masori tattoos. He also created an elaborate, rust-colored quilt depicting a Maori horse. Hughey also presented nearby, organic-shaped ceramic pots. Students interested in viewing the exhibition can visit the Fine Arts Hall gallery from April 14-20.
Recipes to comfort the brain and body

Macaroni and Cheese

Ingredients:
- 1 bag of Shredded cheddar cheese
- 2 cups of milk
- 1/4 cup of butter
- 1/4 cup of flour
- 1/2 tsp of salt
- 1/2 tsp of black pepper
- 1 lb of cooked macaroni

Instructions:
1. Preheat oven to 350°F.
2. In a large saucepan, melt the butter over medium heat.
3. Whisk in the flour until combined.
4. Gradually add milk, whisking constantly, until mixture thickens.
5. Add salt and pepper to taste.
6. Add shredded cheese and stir until melted.
7. Mix in cooked macaroni.
8. Pour into a 9x13 inch baking dish.
9. Bake for 20-25 minutes, or until bubbly and golden brown on top.

Grilled Cheese Sandwiches

Ingredients:
- 2 slices of bread
- 2 oz of cheddar cheese
- 2 oz of mozzarella cheese
- 2 tbsp of butter
- 1 tbsp of minced garlic

Instructions:
1. Preheat grill to medium heat.
2. Cut cheese into slices.
3. In a small bowl, mix minced garlic with 1 tbsp of butter.
4. Spread butter mixture on one slice of bread.
5. Place a slice of cheese on the buttered bread, then another slice of bread on top, butter side down.
6. Grilled cheese until cheese is melted and both sides are golden brown.

Chili Cheese Fries

Ingredients:
- 1 bag of tortilla chips
- 1 lb of ground beef
- 1 can of diced tomatoes
- 1 medium onion, diced
- 1 green pepper, diced
- 1 tsp of chili powder
- 1 tsp of cumin
- 1 cup of shredded cheese

Instructions:
1. Preheat oven to 425°F.
2. In a large skillet, cook ground beef until browned.
3. Add diced onion, green pepper, chili powder, and cumin to the skillet.
4. Drain excess grease from skillet.
5. Pour diced tomatoes into the skillet.
6. Cover and cook for 10-15 minutes, or until vegetables are tender.
7. Spread chili mixture over tortilla chips.
8. Sprinkle shredded cheese on top.
9. Bake for 10-15 minutes, or until cheese is melted and bubbly.

Grilled Chicken and Rice

Ingredients:
- 1 chicken breast, cut into strips
- 1 cup of white or brown rice
- 2 tbsp of olive oil
- 1 medium onion, chopped
- 2 cloves of garlic, minced
- 1 can of diced tomatoes
- 1 tsp of oregano
- 1 tsp of cumin

Instructions:
1. In a large skillet, heat olive oil over medium heat.
2. Add chicken to the skillet and cook until browned.
3. Add chopped onion and minced garlic to the skillet.
4. Cook for 5 minutes, or until onions are translucent.
5. Add diced tomatoes, oregano, and cumin to the skillet.
6. Cover and cook for 15 minutes, or until rice is tender.
7. Serve hot.

Grilled Cheese and Tomato Sandwiches

Ingredients:
- 4 slices of bread
- 4 slices of cheddar cheese
- 4 slices of tomato
- 1 tbsp of butter

Instructions:
1. Preheat grill to medium heat.
2. Spread 1 tbsp of butter on each slice of bread.
3. Place a slice of cheese on each slice of bread, then a slice of tomato.
4. Grill for 2-3 minutes, or until cheese is melted and bread is golden brown.
5. Serve hot.

Drinks

- Coca-Cola
- Macaroni and Cheese
- Grilled Cheese Sandwiches

HAVE AN IDEA FOR A&E?
WE WANT TO HEAR IT!

CONTACT:
LILA MILLER
ARTS.INKWELL@GMAIL.COM
GOT AN OPINION?
WE WANT TO HEAR IT!

CONTACT:
CHIEF.INKWELL@GMAIL.COM
ABOUT WRITING AN OPINION PIECE

ALL VIEWS WELCOME!

CALLING ALL WRITERS AND PHOTOGRAPHERS
THE INKWELL WANTS YOU.
EVERY WED. 12:30 P.M.
MCC 202