Armstrong celebrates '92nd St. Patrick's Day parade in Savannah

LLANA KAMURI
NEWS EDITOR

A novel painted pirate ship, students, faculty, and alumni took to the streets for the 92nd St. Patrick's Day parade on March 17, 2016, for the 92nd St. Patrick's Day parade.

A painting was hand-painted by Armstrong University. Designer Design John Johnson and sailed and the parade room was filled with fun floats. Green stickers bearing the St. Mary's name was handed out to spectators along the parade route, some of whom, showed their pride, painting the "S" signing Armstrong."

Housing spaces receive updates

Summer internships: The time and place to look

SEBASTIAN WRIGHT
STAFF WRITER

The time to be thinking of internships has come now.

According to International Career Services, "The best time to begin your search for an internship is summer of the previous year, around the time most universities hold their career fairs."

Companies tend to start their internship applications from late February to early April and must keep looking until May.

Do your best to be ahead of them schedule will better your chances of getting an internship opportunity.

With the help of Career Services and Sociology in your department, begin theInternship job search and make the network with your professors and research internships that interest you. Though these resources are here to make your search easier, it is your own task that can contribute to make or create opportunities.

And older and bigger companies generally fulfill their internships the fastest. These companies typically have the framework to establish internship programs. If you are seeking an internship with a large company, you should be as organized as if not more.

On the other hand, younger companies often follow schedules that may not match the posting dates of other companies. It is best to carefully look into each internship's interest, instead of blanket the market. Personalizing your application materials for thorough reach of each company is a must.

Unlike academic work, there is no standard that companies are required to follow when it comes to internship schedules. If you feel like you are being passed over for an internship at the university you are looking for, keep an eye on the other companies as well. There may be another chance of the internship that you are not aware of.

Also, there is no need to remain local. If you are having trouble finding local internships, then expand the scope of your search and look to other nearby cities until you find something that interests you. There may be an opportunity you overlooked.

If your dream internship is not available this time around, don't give up. The most important aspect of an internship is building industry experience and connections. The connections that interests you and gain you a competitive edge at your first job.

Meanwhile, do not just settle for the first internship you find. There may be more opportunities available to you.

Keep those things in mind and balance your time wisely as you search. If you spend too much time looking into your first choice, you may miss on other opportunities that could be beneficial to you.

For more information on finding an internship, please see the career services web page at the Armstrong Student Affairs website or call the Armstrong Student Affairs office.

Whether you spent the week lounging on the beach flying into the morning or watching Netflix and binge eating the snacks sworn off at New Years, here's what you missed in the news during spring break.

This week, President Obama became the first U.S. president to visit Cuba in 88 years. Since the announcement of the restoration of diplomatic relations with the Caribbean country, several countries have been removed.

Almost, American businesses are looking to cash in on the vast opportunities open to them. One hard group has already signed contracts to manage beach in Cuba. According to the New York Times, President Obama will speak to Cuban President Raul Castro, held an entrepreneurship conference with American business leaders and visit Old Havana during his trip to Cuba.

The most wanted man in Europe, Salah Abdeslam, was captured in a terrorist attack in Brussels this week. On November 23, Abdeslam was wanted for his involvement in the November 2015 Paris Attacks that killed over 100 people. Other bombing suspects were captured or killed during the attacks and raids following them.

The hacker group Anonymous declared total war on Donald Trump, the organization, who also declared war on ISIS last November in order to stop the Republican candidate's presidential campaign. So far, hackers have leaked personal information belonging to Donald Trump and Panama.

Armstrong begins filming at Memorial University Hospital last week before moving to Tybee Island to continue filming. Actor Denne "The Rock" Johnson took time off from scenes shooting to visit the Children's floor and make pediatric patients happy. Thousands of Savannahians have applied to be extras in the upcoming beach film which will shoot in Savannah until April.
The Armstrong State University Lady Pirates, undefeated with two road wins under their belt, hosted the Peach Belt Conference opponents Georgia College, Friday, March 18 against Augusta University, Sunday, March 20.

The first game against Harrell Recap started the weekend with the Pirate offense. The Lady Pirates had four runs in the first inning to take the lead. The field had added four more runs by the fourth inning with an RBI single from senior Michelle Bureau, a two-run double by Reppert, and a home run lead off to make the score 5-0.

The Lady Pirates were on the way in the fourth off a wild pitch and an RBI single. The Lady Pirates scored one run off a solo home run by senior. They scored one run in the fifth inning to end the game.

The Lady Pirates have now won five games in a row since 0-2 in the PBC. With a 20-8 record, Armstrong could not stay out of the conference, the upset to the No. 1 Florida Tech, March 21, and will host USC, Albany on March 25 through the weekend with doubleheaders both slated to begin at 2 p.m. and 1 p.m. respectively.

Female student athletes celebrated at 'Women in Sports' luncheon

"Women in Sports" was the theme of the semester-long event. Armstrong had been rewarded and celebrated Armstrong's senior female athletes as part of women's recognition for their outstanding athletic achievements. Armstrong's senior female athletes were celebrated for the season.

"Since I've been here, the female sports have been very strong nationally and I think it's really strong for Armstrong. But this year, they really have been the best. For Armstrong to have three female athletes be honored is extremely important," Rush-Potash said. Armstrong's senior female athletes were celebrated for the season and so many girls are being recognized and so many are being recognized for their achievements.

The Pirates return to action this week where the Pirates take on Georgia College on Tuesday, March 22 at 5pm. The Pirates return to action this week with a three-game series against Georgia College.

The Pirates are scheduled to be back with a two-run double by freshman Kailey Cash before the scoreboard readout by Breen, a two-run single by Parrish gave the Lady Pirates the lead. The first three outs were given up in the bottom of the seventh inning to the Pirates. The Lady Pirates were in the lead 6-2. A moment later, a two-run double capped off by a two-run double by senior Kaylee Breen, a two-run single by Reppert, and a base loaded.

Your phone number wilm (Savannah)

Hot Tub. I really would like to relax in a hot tub. Unfortunately, I do not have one. If someone has one that wouldn't mind sharing it please respond... send me your phone number please...

Male bartender at west willows on saturday night wilm (savannah river street)

I waited for you specifically to make my drink because I thought you were someone who have worked pages in your ears and helped a group of drunk black people (mostly female and like 2 guys) before me. Anyway I was in the black Aero shirt and tan shorts. I thought about leaving my number on the receipt but I chickened out. Anyway if you see this (which I doubt anyone really reads these except for inmates) send me a message. I just love to get to know someone.

Out black guy at Crystal Beer Parlor (Savannah)

You have red hair and a beautiful face. I enjoyed talking with you on our flight. I'll probably never see you again but I kind of want to add you on FB or something just in case we happen to cross paths at some point.

I'll use your first name and what you're here in town for so I know it's you.

Four brother at Target wilm (Savannah Target)

You were working at the Crystal Beer Parlor, maybe the manager. You are very attractive and I had a hard time not checking you out as you sat around the register. I'm pretty sure you noticed. As I went to leave I looked over to you and you said thanks and have a nice day, I smiled. When I finally walked out the door you and looked back at you, you were still staring. Would love to meet up with you discreetly. Let me know if you are interested and anything about me so I know it's you. Thanks man.

Connecticut Huskies

CALEB BAILEY
SPORTS EDITOR

When it comes to great American sports teams, it is hard not to think of the Dulles Cowboys of the 1990s, the UCLA Bruins of the 1970s, or the New York Yankees of today. However, there is one team today that does not get near the respect they likely deserve. That team is the Connecticut Huskies women's basketball team. This team has dominated the women's college basketball scene and it is about high time that they are treated with the respect they deserve.

Not only has this team, led by head coach Geno Auriemma, won the last three national championships and are on track for a fourth, but they also hold the record for the longest win streak in college basketball history, the team has won 119 straight games in college basketball, for both men's and women's basketball. This team has a great chance to break the record this year, or the 2014-15 Kentucky Wildcats, who were undefeated up until the Final Four last year, get mainstream plug constantly?

Today around 5:30 pm, you work at Target and were filling up your drink at Starbucks. I was sitting with my daughter, and I would have said more when you spoke to us. What color was your hair? I would love to get to know you!!

I waited for you specifical­ly to make my drink because I thought you were someone who...
Snapshot: Savannah Stopover at a glance

Bradley Mullis
AE Editor

As soon as Spring Break started, we headed downtown to check in with the great artists and girls who were handling all of the behind-the-scenes efforts of Savannah Stopover. The annual tradition of Stopover begins six years ago as an opportunity for bands residing in the South by Southwest Festival in Austin, Texas a place to perform. After a quick Byte to eat, we headed directly to the first performance of the night at The Ships of the Sea Museum to catch Sun Dots and Ra Ra Riot. From there it was off to Amperstrand to check out Culture Vulture and Acid Dad. We concluded the night at an incredible performance from Mothers at Wild Wing Cafe.

Ra Ra Riot

Ra Ra Riot was the big headliner this year for Stopover. The five piece indie band hails from Furman, South Carolina. They began to make a name for themselves in early 2006. The group has released four studio albums to date, along with a flood of EPs and singles. This is a band that is renowned for their energetic live performance and certainly did not disappoint at their performance this year. The Ships of the Sea museum gave audience members the opportunity to get close and see the musical dynamics flowing between the guitarists.

Culture Vulture

If you’ve never seen Culture Vulture perform live, you are going to miss an absolute powerhouse of a performance. The band is comprised of four members, each with a unique and distinct style. This combination created a sound that is both familiar and unique. Their music is a blend of rock and roll with a touch of indie pop. The band’s lead vocals are powerful and captivating, while the rhythm section provides a solid foundation for the rest of the band’s performance. The group is known for their high-energy shows and their ability to connect with the audience on a personal level.

Acid Dad

Acid Dad is a band that belongs in a bar for the rest of their time together. The New York City based quartet features a mix of garage rock and psychedelic elements that have roots in classic bands like The Cramps or Brian Jonestown Massacre. Nevertheless, they blend a certain charm to their live performance, settling into the upright stage at Amperstrand comfortably as if they were playing a quick set back in one of their favorite Williamsburg bars. The group began playing together only two years ago in 2018, but they’re quickly making a name for themselves.

Mothers

Out of all the bands we saw this weekend, Mothers is the one that has really stood out amongst the others. The Athens based band has developed a devoted following over the years with their infectious blend of dream-pop and indie rock. Their sound is a mix of soaring melodies and driving rhythms, creating a unique and captivating listening experience for fans of all ages.

The Social Club on Congress

If you weren’t able to attend Stopover, check out some of the bands below!
Furious Hooves

Furious Hooves is Ryan McCordle's brainchild. The label has been around since their first official release in 2011 with "Without a Fight's "The Sunny Side of Northwood," but things really started taking off in the past few years as the releases began pouring out. Since the start of 2016, Furious Hooves has already put out two singles, "Soft Dreams" and "Saint Corsairs Velvet & Soil.

McCordle originally started out as the graphic designer for Graveface Records, working on multiple layouts and designs for various bands. As he moved forward with his own efforts to start his own label, he brought a lot of the expertise he gained from his past experiences. All of the hard work is beginning to pay off for Furious Hooves and McCordle. In 2015, Furious Hooves was the runner-up for Gravetastic Records for Connect Savannah's best local record label.

Grand Vapids

Forming in early 2014, Grand Vapids spent the course of a year recording their debut album, "Guarantees." Hard work paid off, earning them Flagpole Magazine's Album of the Year in 2015. On "Guarantees," recorded at Chase Park Transduction with indie rock producer Drew Vandenberg, members McKendrick, Swarden and Austin Harris did a majority of the songwriting together. The music on this album is warm and tasty with a sort of 90s moodiness as a backdrop. The Athens based group offered a refreshing nostalgia to Stopover at the Social Club.

Dear Tracks

Dear Tracks is a grungy foursome from Grand Rapids Michigan comprised of members Matt Mesner, Victoria Ovenden, Jacob Juidowski and Alex Milinda. Not to be confused with "The Dear Tracks" band, the group began in the fall of 2014 as the solo project of lead singer Matt Mesner. Mesner moved to Michigan from Florida in hopes of starting a dream pop band.

Now promoting their new EP "Soft Dreams" under Furious Hooves, the group performed at Social Club as part of Savannah Showcase. They've come a long way since their debut single "Wildflower" & "Connectivity" demos, but still carry the same delightful, alternative essence.

Curbdogs

Local band Curbdogs opened up the showcase with their wild blend of melodic pop music. The four-piece began playing together a little more than a year ago, honing their skills and gaining live experience in the underground D.I.Y scene, a fact that was made very clear when the band burst onto the scene and got a massive crowd outside the venue.

A great band to begin the show with.

THE INKWELL

Furious Hooves x Graveface x Noisy Ghost

We were able to catch the Graveface x Furious Hooves x Noisy Ghost Showcase, held at The Social Club on Congress Street Graveface and Furious Hooves are both local Savannah labels, while Noisy Ghost is a collaboration between Ryan Graveface and business partner Michelle King. The group also presented a similar showcase at their respective stands at South by Southwest Festival later that week. Saturday was a perfect day for a showcase. The weather was perfectly sunny, with a nice breeze wailing through the packed Social Club courtyard. Bands played outside all day, starting at 2 in the afternoon until as late as 9 that evening. The showcase was an excellent way to bring bands in from all over the country to present their musical magic for Stopover attendees.
