While it is an assumption that Latino Heritage Week, which began on Oct. 23 and runs through Oct. 29, is simply a celebration of Latino culture, student Latiana Harris wants people to know that it's much more than that. "I am an American, but I'm Mexican American. I am proud of my heritage and who I am. We have so much to offer, and we all come from different places. I am here because I am who I am." Harris commented. "It's not just a week of celebrating heritage, it's really a whole month from Sept. 21st to Oct. 15, and next year will be an even bigger event! It's a way to celebrate our heritage, but it's not just a week, it's a month, and we celebrate all year round," she added.

Emmanuel Daniels, secretary for the Latino Hispanic Outreach & Leadership at the University of Iowa, mentioned the table decided to be held at one of the week’s events, Costa Rica, the Dominican Republic, Mexico, and Peru also had representatives. "It's really about showing our heritage, it's about sharing it with everyone, and introducing people to our culture," he said. "It's a great way to help people learn more about us.

"You can come down here or find out for yourself. People are really coming down here for the week, and will stay longer than planned. They love the smell of good food and the music." Miguel Loiz said his friend Daniel Sam Branca, a student at the University of Iowa, had a moment to comment on the event: "I'm here because my friends and I are part of HOLA." Loiz commented. "It's an HOLA event and I went last year, plus my grandmother is Cuban." Ramirez stated that for her, Latino Heritage Week means being proud of her culture as well as introducing others to her culture. "There are all these different cultures, and introducing everyone to the dancing, the culture, and family," she added. "You helped a lot of Hispanic people.

"I.H.A. read a movie to a group of young people on Sept. 23, 2019.}

Savannah Bazaar celebrates one year anniversary

Savannah Bazaar celebrates one year anniversary

(page 1)

SPORTS

Dicks' Sporting Goods comes to Savannah

(page 2)

Since 1935

Op Ed

Jene Brunen examines sexual awareness campaigns

(page 4)

Movie Review

"Tusk" an unforgettable trip

(page 5)

Career Fair comes to Armstrong

By ANDREW TUPPAN

At the Career Fair on Sept. 11, Armstrong was proud to present one of the most important events of the year for Armstrong students. The reason for this was because the Armstrong Armchair Reporter Armstrong's new career fair is the largest and most comprehensive career fair in the area. Armstrong has a great networking group and meeting with professionals is more popular as a career, expanding into many new fields.

Stepping into the workforce, Armstrong's new career fair group has been produce a marketing plan that takes advantage of marketing strategy. Armstrong has the opportunity to meet students, field this is common. A marketing plan that takes advantage of Armstrong's marketing strategy.

The name takes a while to come up with, as would any proper marketing campaign. "We were thinking about Armstrong because it's our name," Armstrong commented. "But we also had to come up with a name that would fit us. After taking a trip to DC and meeting with two others, we started a business called "Late Night Chicks.

The name takes a while to come up with, as would any proper marketing campaign. "We were thinking about Armstrong because it's our name," Armstrong commented. "But we also had to come up with a name that would fit us. After taking a trip to DC and meeting with two others, we started a business called "Late Night Chicks."
Cougars Slip Past Pirates in Double-Overtime

BY LAURA SPEIGHT
Sport Writer

The Armstrong Pioneers hosted the Columbus State Cougars on Sept. 20, in the team's first Friday Night Fall Conference game of the season. The Cougars needed double overtime to slip past the Pioneers in what was a great contest with a mix of offense and defense.

Pioneers vs. Cougars: Armstrong hosted the 39th Annual Armstrong vs. Columbus State Conference football game of the season. The Cougars ended the first half of the game up 2-1, but the teams went back and forth in the second half, with Armstrong pulling ahead to take a 10-7 lead into the third quarter. The Cougars were unable to pull away from Armstrong, and the game ended in double overtime, as the Cougars emerged victorious with a 2-1 win.

Armstrong Volleyball Team Dominates Georgia College

BY CAROLINE GARCIA
Sport Writer

The women's volleyball team took on the Georgia College Bears on Sept. 20, winning the match 3-0. The team played well, with strong performances from a few key players. The Bears put up a good fight, but Armstrong's solid defense and strong offense ensured a win in the end.

Dick's Sporting Goods Comes to Savannah

BY JOHN LUGER
Sport Writer

Dick's Sporting Goods, one of the nation's largest sporting and outdoor recreation stores, has announced plans to open a new store in Savannah. This will mark the first Georgia location for the company, and the opening is expected to bring new jobs and economic benefits to the area.

JOCK TALK WITH: TRAVIS JAUDON

Sand Gnats Stadium Debate Continues

Finals: The stadium wouldn't be used for only baseball and football, it would be used for other community events like concerts, festivals, and more. Armstrong State University, which the stadium would replace, has been in discussions with the city about moving their stadium to a different location. The university would like to keep the stadium, but the city wants to sell it for development.

The Armstrong Pioneers hosted the Columbus State Cougars on Sept. 20, in the team's first Friday Night Fall Conference game of the season. The Cougars needed double overtime to slip past the Pioneers in what was a great contest with a mix of offense and defense.

A Dick's Sporting Goods on Northlake Mall in Charlotte, NC taken on April 3, 2013.
BY JESS BRANNEN

It's On Us', a fresh take on familiar topic

The issue of sexual assault and its portrayal in media and campaigns has been a topic of discussion in recent years. The awareness campaign, 'It's On Us,' introduced a similar initiative to encourage individuals to take responsibility for preventing sexual assault. This campaign aims to shift the blame from victims to perpetrators, encouraging people to take action when they see something that may be inappropriate.

A fresh take on familiar topic

The awareness campaign, 'It's On Us,' introduced a similar initiative to encourage individuals to take responsibility for preventing sexual assault. This campaign aims to shift the blame from victims to perpetrators, encouraging people to take action when they see something that may be inappropriate.
Silver screen

Rating 2.5 out of 5

Directed by Kevin Smith
Produced by Knightsbridge Films
Rated R

Starring Justin Long, Michael Parks, Haley Joel Osment
Now playing at Cinemark Bluffton 12

“The beauty of what he does, the impact he has on it’s viewers.”

By: Todd Perkins

It may be hard to picture Kevin Smith at the helm of a major horror movie, but that’s just what the independent filmmaker did this summer with the release of “Tusk.”

Smith, who is known for his irreverent brand of humor, has built a career off of pushing boundaries and challenging expectations. “Tusk” is no exception. The film follows a group of friends who embark on a road trip to Wisconsin to hunt for a mythical creature known as a wolverine. What ensues is a terrifying and hilarious journey that tests the limits of friendship and the boundaries of sanity.

The performances are strong, with Justin Long and Michael Parks delivering standout turns as the film’s two main characters. Long, who is known for his comedic work, proves that he can also handle the darker material with ease. Parks, who is no stranger to horror films, brings a sense of intensity and unpredictability to his role.

The film’s visual style is also noteworthy. Shot in a retro, 1970s-inspired aesthetic, “Tusk” has a unique look that sets it apart from other horror films. The use of found footage and the film’s retro feel add to the overall atmosphere of the movie.

However, “Tusk” is not without its flaws. The film’s pacing can be slow at times, and the ending is somewhat predictable. Some viewers may also find the film’s themes and plot points to be too broad and lacking in substance.

Overall, “Tusk” is a unique and entertaining experience. Smith’s signature style and sense of humor are on full display, and the film’s characters are relatable and engaging. While it may not be a classic, “Tusk” is definitely worth a watch for fans of horror and independent film.
I was the biggest in the country," he said.

Comedian Ronnie Jordan

Fun of College Life

By Emily Smith

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

The Savannah Bazaar celebrates its one-year anniversary on Sept. 26.

The Armstrong Study Abroad program is open to all students of all disciplines. Previous

Experiences with Armstrong

BY LINDSAY COWEN

Savannah Bazaar Celebrates One-Year Anniversary

One of the best memories Ronnie has of his time at Armstrong was hanging out with 12. A Latinx woman in her 30s looks out the window of a bus.

13. A woman in a red dress stands in front of a building.

14. A man in a suit and tie walks down the street.

15. A group of people stand in front of a graduation ceremony.

16. A person is seen holding a surfboard.

17. A group of people pose for a picture in front of a building.

18. A man in a suit is standing in front of a building.

19. A woman in a red dress is standing in front of a building.

20. A man in a suit and tie is walking down the street.

21. A group of people stand in front of a graduation ceremony.

22. A person is seen holding a surfboard.

23. A group of people pose for a picture in front of a building.

24. A man in a suit is standing in front of a building.

25. A woman in a red dress is standing in front of a building.

26. A man in a suit and tie is walking down the street.

27. A group of people stand in front of a graduation ceremony.

28. A person is seen holding a surfboard.

30. A man in a suit is standing in front of a building.

31. A woman in a red dress is standing in front of a building.

32. A man in a suit and tie is walking down the street.

33. A group of people stand in front of a graduation ceremony.

34. A person is seen holding a surfboard.

35. A group of people pose for a picture in front of a building.

36. A man in a suit is standing in front of a building.

37. A woman in a red dress is standing in front of a building.

38. A man in a suit and tie is walking down the street.

39. A group of people stand in front of a graduation ceremony.

40. A person is seen holding a surfboard.

41. A group of people pose for a picture in front of a building.

42. A man in a suit is standing in front of a building.

43. A woman in a red dress is standing in front of a building.

44. A man in a suit and tie is walking down the street.

45. A group of people stand in front of a graduation ceremony.

46. A person is seen holding a surfboard.

47. A group of people pose for a picture in front of a building.

48. A man in a suit is standing in front of a building.

49. A woman in a red dress is standing in front of a building.

50. A man in a suit and tie is walking down the street.
US Clean Air Act cited as big first step in emissions control

BY JOHN ZACOPOULOS

October 3, 2014

The Environmental Protection Agency announced last week that it plans to propose new limits on power plants, an important step forward in addressing climate change.

The Clean Air Act, which was enacted in 1970 and has since been amended several times, is one of the most important pieces of environmental legislation in the United States. It has been in place for over 40 years and is credited with reducing air pollution levels in the country.

While much progress has been made in reducing air pollution, there is still more work to be done. The EPA is working hard to implement new regulations and improve existing ones to further reduce emissions and protect public health.

The Clean Air Act is a key component of the broader effort to address climate change. By reducing emissions, the United States can make a significant contribution to slowing the rate of global warming and protecting the health and wellbeing of future generations.

In conclusion, the Clean Air Act has been a valuable tool in reducing air pollution and protecting public health. Continued efforts to implement and strengthen this legislation will be essential as we work to address the ongoing challenge of climate change.

Hollinger

FROM PAGE 1

If you are not doing what you want to do, go out and find it. If it's not what you want, then find something that you think you'll make money in. It'll make sure you actually enjoy the field. That's essential. And what of the war-time, hardships-filled family? Their rural, real tough, they should move in one way.

"It's a rough thing, the job market is just so difficult to crack right now," Hollinger continued. "I think my first piece of advice is: don't give up. If something is cut, you have to continue." Hollinger recommended getting a graduate degree if you can. It might help. If you are looking for what you want to do, go to a graduate class, find something that you think you'll be happy with your foot in the door.

Career

FROM PAGE 1

They have health benefits, great pay and even give their employees housing," she said. "It comes down to the quality and integrity of a person." Outreach researcher Zach Basham recommended checking the reputations of the companies you're interested in. "If you are looking for what you want to do, go to a graduate class, find something that you think you'll be happy with your foot in the door."

Shooting

FROM PAGE 1

wanted answers. A few members of the metro police command staff arrived at the scene, Mayor Eddie L. Rawls, his wife, Alston Johnson and City Manager Stephanie Carver also came to the scene. Mayor Jackson and Inspector William Tolbert directed the crowd, addressing the lettre, letting them know what they could and let the community to know what they're doing and information on the case comes together. Jackson and Tolbert assured the crowd they would keep Smith's family and the community updated on what's happening.

A statement from Mayor Jackson concerning the shooting, she said: "I agree with the shooting in West Savannah that left one man dead, a family grieving and a community in mourning. Many questions. I share many of those questions. There will be answers, but more for the moment I ask for patience. I met today with the victim's family, and I got relaying. I spoke with West Savannah residents, and I listened to them. I talked with the Police leaders, and related our citizens' concerns while offering support for local law enforcement officers. We have public service they perform every day. Our citizens believe they will be open, transparent and forthcoming. I'm certain that we will be continuous communication with that family. As the city of Savannah will continue to move in remitting calm and place authorities gather the facts."

Hundreds gathered at Eagle Square in the East Savannah area throughout the day to march and protest peacefully. Peaceful rallies occurred throughout the city. The Savannah Independent, a local newspaper, reported that at least 100 people marched in downtown Savannah. The Savannah Police Department said there were no arrests made during the march.

Take your code for it -- the shot is not bad. But the flu can ruin you for two weeks or more.