It goes without saying that every G.T.C. student should remain on campus for the golden anniversary celebration and that every student should plan to attend the convocation.

This ceremony will herald the future. And it will be a time for looking forward.

Meets Library

Since winter quarter began, Hassie Maude McElveen, head librarian, has been instructing and acquainting freshman English classes with the library.

The first day Miss McElveen showed the locations of all the books. The Dewey decimal class system was explained and books were found illustrating each

The card catalog was explained the next day. The class learned to look for books by author, title, and the subject matter. For experience a student was given the subject of a book, the title of a book, and the author of a book and was required to find out additional information about the book with the use of the card catalog.

On the third day special reference books were discussed. Students learned to find encyclopedias, atlases, handbooks, almanacs, and special reference books of poems, quotations, and familiar sayings.

The fourth lesson took place in the periodical room. Students learned how much time the use of the Reader's Guide could save them in finding magazine articles.

On their final days of class in the library they began using their newly acquired knowledge in preparing a bibliography on the topic they had chosen for their term paper.

According to Miss McElveen, introduction to the library an invaluable help to the students whether their future depended

The Life You Save

At assembly this past week, President Henderson cautioned all drivers on campus to observe the traffic regulations as issued during fall quarter. Further, he stated that the best driver is the courteous driver. We heartily concur, in that these regulations are for the driver's safety and the death that might be prevented by cautious, courteous driving might well be YOURS. It goes without saying, that every privilege involves an obligation. When the privilege to drive an automobile is issued in the form of a driver's license, the issuee is expected to assume the obligation of mature judgment while handling an automobile.

Near the conclusion of the fall quarter an accident took place in front of Sanford Hall. This accident could have been prevented and one of the parties involved assumed a slower speed while driving around the circle. At this time we advocated painting a center line in order to aid drivers to maintain their side of the road. It is sincerely hoped that action will be taken on this in the near future.

The road circling the front campus was designed to permit two-way traffic as a convenience to those driving autos. This drive was not designed as a race track. Those responsible for its construction assumed that a speed of 15 to 20 miles per hour would be the maximum speed. However, this is not the case. Remember, courtesy requests that you drive safely. Common sense demands it, and it is hoped that regulations governing this will be more strictly enforced in the future.

It is an obvious fact that the rear part of the dining hall presents a visual obstacle to those using the road around the back campus. This might well be termed a "dead man's turn." No doubt the designers of this building did not foresee a traffic problem. Nevertheless the building is there. A logical solution to this traffic hazard might well be the construction of speed breakers to slow down the fast driver.

Be a COURTEOUS DRIVER. The life you save might be YOURS.

Basketball Band Commended

These groups remain on campus for weekends when they could be out playing for dances which would bring in some of that much needed

Directed by students who are planning to become band directors when they begin their teaching duties, the basketball band has done a commendable job this year.

Last year, when it was discovered that band performances at halftime slowed the concession sales at Saturday night ball games, an organ was installed in the gym to provide some diversion throughout the evening.

However, according to the results of one of the Inquiring Reporter's columns, the statistics showed that more people were in favor of having live music at the games.

Whether or not this fact influenced the reinstating of the band performances is a mystery to The George-Anne, but it is a generally known fact that not only those who asserted their opinion in print, but many others, feel that much is added to the Saturday evening entertainment.

Dr. Alexander Leaves

G.T.C. this week received the resignation of one of its most outstanding faculty members. Dr. Thomas B. Alexander has resigned as chairman of the division of social science to accept a position as associate professor of history at the University of Alabama. He was respected by all of his students and his career on this campus was a very fruitful one.

The University of Alabama is indeed fortunate in gaining Dr. Alexander's services, and G.T.C. will find it difficult to replace him.

Last Monday morning, January 20, President Henderson spoke and emphasized the fact that Georgia Teachers College was going to observe its 50th Anniversary and homecoming on the weekend of February 7-8. He further stated that all students should make a special effort to stay on campus homecoming weekend.

This led me to think of that "age-old" question of school spirit and how well is it observed on this campus. On Thursday nights at basketball games, one can find a large portion of the students well represented. However, when an opera or some other classical production is presented, student representation suffers immense-

To redeem themselves in the sight of faculty members and former G.T.C. students, the present day students can impress everyone by having a large majority of students on during homecoming campus

A lot of hard work has gone into the planning and preparation of this gala event. This will be one of the best, if not the best homecoming parade and program presented in the history of G.T.C. This will not be one of those dull G.T.C. weekends for there will be plenty to see and do.

Now is your chance to show that G.T.C. has the "ole school spirit.'

Let's Build Men First; Then Build Specialist

following the Immediately Russian Sputniks a wave of outrageous cries belittling our technical education flooded the country. "We need more scientists, more mathematicians, more technical training in our elementary and high schools," said John Q. Public. The American people demanded to know why Russia slipped ahead of us in technology.

Russia's Sputniks, more than anything else, made our people conclude that more students should specialize in math and physical sciences. If a rejuvenated program stressing science and math is presented properly in our schools it could be of tremendous value; if it is not properly presented it may be disastrous.

Because of communistic teaching the Russian student lacks a proper moral background. A denial of God also means a denial of good. Since the Soviet student, and country for that matter, possess such tremendous technical knowledge he is extremely dangerous. Too much of a specialized education is not good. If we begin to stress science and math we must proceed cautiously. It is better to build the man first and the specialist later.

What our schools need more than anything else is a well planned guidance program. It forced thinking.

will mean hours of intelligent planning and cooperation among many people. If it is operated correctly, tremendous strides can be taken in all directions, not only in math and science, but also in the humanities and so called vocational subjects.

Just what is considered a properly operated guidance program? If the answer to this was known it would certainly simplify matters. However it is not known and the only way it can be known is through experimentation. Curriculum planning and the guidance program should have an intermingling relationship.

Educators may possibly suggest a course in logical thinking to be taken in the senior year of high school. Perhaps a course in Russian history would also be planned in the curriculum. If taught in the right manner these courses would not necessarily be "dry" to the secondary student.

Don't get shook, these are only speculations. But I sincerely hope that when educators change some of the curriculum they do not stress too much subject matter in one particular field. The person who receives a well rounded education can certainly adjust to a situation far better than a person who has been indoctrinated into

Superior Students Will Exempt Basic Courses

One-half of the age-old problem of how to inspire the exceptional child, and how to coach the retarded student, may be solved soon.

A placement test, which will serve as a medium of dividing the students who should exempt various courses from those who need such knowledge included in their college education, has been instituted at the University of Georgia.

In justifying the move, Dr. Joseph A. Williams, Georgia's dean of students, stated that the examinations given by the educational Testing Service at Princeton, N. J., were the result of a nation - wide

Exemption and credit will be given to those students who make high grades on the tests

-signifying that they already have the knowledge required for completing the specified courses.

Giving college - preparatory work to high school students who appear to be brighter than their classmates as an educational theory originated in the idea that these students will develop more rapidly than others, if conditions are ideal.

The G.E.D. (Georgia Educational Development) tests have already exempted veterans from certain courses. At G.T.C. there is a system by which one quarter's work in English can be skipped; however, here no credit is given.

The new tests, which are being given at the University, will cover the fields of English, biology, mathematics, American and European history, literature and others more advanced.

Only three students have made the grade on these placement tests as yet; each has had special preparation beyond regular high school instruction.

Student Vs. City Gives Chaperon Breakdown

Those three fans of mine wanted to hear about my senior trip in this week's column. Oh, in case you're worrying, "those three fans" are merely figments of my imagination, and besides that, they didn't really want to hear about my senior trip. I just said that because I racked my marbles for an idea for my column, and senior trip was the only thing that came out.

So you see, I'm really just sneaky about the whole deal, and end up writing about what I want to. And if I can keep up this beating around the bush, I won't even have to write about the senior trip.

Oh, yes, senior trip: first of all, I had to pack a few articles to carry with me-all of which proved utterly useless.

Incidentally, we went to Washington, D. C., and New York City, by way of the Silver Meteor. This was the first time had ever ridden on a real live train, and I could hardly restrain myself, so carried away was I by it all. After we pulled out of the station, my best friend and I explored the cars. The engine, the diner, the lounge, and the club car—this was our favorite car, even if it was the last one and we were in the Nevertheless, we did make it into Washington, and started out on our sightseeing. (We saw more sights!!) My favorite spot was Smithsonian Institute, in which we were allowed 20 crummy minutes to see all those exhibits. Well, those chaperons were nuts if they thought I was going to leave after just 20 minutes! So I said, if they want me, they'll have to find meand Smithsonian Institute is a BIG place.

After an hour and ten minutes, I turned the wrong corner-straight into the arms of the chaperon, and got hauled off to Mt. Vernon. I got lost there, too.

We pulled up stakes in a day or so and crashed New York City—that's a REAL BIG place. Of course, we went to the Empire State Building and went up on it. That was real fun, but did you know that the guides get real mad if you hang over the side of the wall?

We went to the tops of most of the skyscrapers, but none of them were working, I guess the machinery must have been out of whack while we were there. Anyway, I don't think the chaperons liked it too much when I'd stay up there after everybody else had gone, but I sure did want to see those skyscrapers in action.

The last day in New York, we went to Macy's just an hour before we were supposed to leave-I got lost, along with my best friend. So we walked back to our hotel-I still think we used the west door when we went into Macy's, because that hotel sure was on the wrong side of town.

All in all, I had a real, genuine blast on my senior trip, but I still can't for the life of me figured out why my chaperon had a nervous breakdown when we got home. I guess she lost too much sleep.

Beat Mercer!

Tomorrow night the much improved G.T.C. Profs. will be loaded for Bear-Mercer Bear that is. The Bears are the Profs most intense rival. Down through the years this has been the game of the year for the Profs, and it will be again this year. Mercer is enjoying its most successful season in years and will be favored to take the Profs.

The Profs started slow this season, but they have been improving steadily and last week they played the powerful Quantico Marines off their feet.

This is a traditional contest and won-lost records mean very little when two intense rivals meet. Remember the Tech-Georgia contest this year.

With a few breaks and plenty of moral support from the fans the Profs can take this one. So be in the stands tomorrow night and remember to yell good and loud, BEAT MERCER!

This may appear as just another basketball score and another defeat for Coach Scearce's forces, but in the points, and Ralph Berryhill wit process yo ucan't deny that G.T.C. won a moral victory 11 points paced the Cougars against the star-studded Marine team. G.T.C. played what Coach Scearce said was the best game they have the Bears with 10 points. played all year. The Profs went in the game playing the role of the underdog, nevertheless the underdog role never phased them because it was nip and tuck all the way, and the Profs never gave up the ship. Who knows, maybe the Profs will finish the season in fine fashion despite the sagging win record.

With baseball just around the corner, I think it would be unfair not to mention a few facts about the great American pastime. The height of nterest looms around one of baseball's most colorful figures. Yes, Pee Wee Reese is going to call it quits after this season. The long-time Mr. Shortstop of the Booklyn Dodgers said, "Life may begin at 40, but my baseball life as far as a player is concerned is going to have tocease after this year."

Reese seems to be undisturbed over the shift of the Dodgers to the west coast, but he stated that he hated to leave Brooklyn.

Pee Wee will be sadly missed and never forgotten by all loyal baseball fans who for 17 years have witnessed this great play on the baseball diamond.

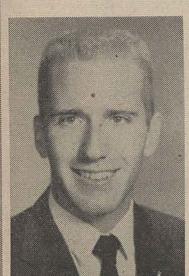

Like any other organized function, sports need a set of rules or code of Ethics to follow. Try this for size:

Sports Ten Commandments

- 1. Thou shalt not quit.
- 2. Thou shalt not alibi.
- 3. Thou shalt not gloat over winning.
- 4. Thou shalt not sulk over losing.
- 5. Thou shalt not take unfair advantage.
- 6. Thou shalt not ask odds thou are unwilling to
- 7. Thou shalt always be willing to give thine opponent the benefit of the doubt.
- 8. Thou shalt not under-estimate an opponent or over-estimate thyself.
- 9. Remember that the game is the thing, and he who thinks otherwise is no true sportsman.
- 10. Honor the game thou playest for he who plays the game straight and hard, wins even when he loses.
