System downtime resolved

June 23, 2011

Update: GIL Technical Support Services has reported that the networking issues have been resolved. Please let us know if you have any further problems with these services. Thanks!

The University of Georgia is currently experiencing networking problems which is probably causing some slowness and connection problems. UGA networking staff are working on the problem and we hope it should be resolved shortly.

This difficulty affects our statewide library catalog system, in both the GIL Classic and GIL-Find versions. Other statewide electronic systems might also have periodic downtimes while the issues are being resolved. Thanks for your patience, and please let us know how we can assist you in finding what you need. You can ask a librarian (with live chat) here, and you can search the WorldCat database of library catalogs (including ours) here.

Passwords for computers in Henderson Library

June 23, 2011

Beginning summer semester 2011, computers in Henderson Library will require passwords for use. This is part of a campus plan for all computers that will be fully implemented by fall semester 2011. Anyone using a computer in Henderson Library will need a password to log on to that computer. Community users will be required to register at the circulation desk on second floor to get a password for use on computers on second floor only.

Beginning Monday, June 27, students, faculty, and staff will need to use their My.GeorgiaSouthern login for computers on the first floor. Community users will not have access to computers on the first floor.

More details will be available as implementation proceeds. Thanks for your understanding!
