Cast as Miss Julie is Janie Dotson (seated); Bill Gibson will portray Jean, the valet; and Marie All will play Christine in the Masquers' one-act presentation "Miss Julie."

Masquers one-act plays begin Aug. 4

Masquers, Georgia Southern College drama group, will present two one-act plays August 4-5 in McCroan Auditorium at 8:15 p.m.

"Miss Julie," a tragedy by August Strindberg, is directed by Ken Robbins, who describes the play as "a classic with an outstanding history." "Miss Julie" was first presented in Copenhagen on March 14, 1889. The play was first presented in America in 1905 and in Sweden in 1906. Five different movies have been made from "Miss Julie," and it has been presented on American television, as well as being staged as a ballet by both American and Swedish companies.

Cast as Miss Julie is Janie Dotson. Bill Gibson will portray Jean, the valet, and Marie All will play Christine, the cook. Speaking for the cast, Miss Dotson stated, "The play has been great fun to do. It would be worthwhile for anyone to see it."

Music for "Miss Julie" will be provided by the Red Army Ensemble.

"Darkness Falls on Laughter," directed by Wendell Ramage, tells the tragic love story of Cassandra and Apollo. Apollo is played by Wyman Hunt and the Princess of Troy, Cassandra, by Jane Hurst. The Trojan maids are played by Lynn Goodson, Linda Beckworth, Phyllis Stroud, and Carolyn Mentzer.

Ramage calls the play "not a great play, but a good one; one worth doing." Hunt describes "Darkness" as a "moving, exciting one-act play... a pleasure to view."

The stage crews are the same for both plays: Publicity - Libby Brannen, Kathleen McDonald, Carolyn Mentzer, Phyllis Stroud; Sound technician - Ervin Joslyn; Stage manager and lighting - Russell Dasher; Make-up - Lorrie Haynes, Linda Beckworth; Properties and prompter - Lorrie Haynes; Costumes - Miss Jane Lightcap, Lorrie Haynes; House manager - Miss Lightcap.

Tickets are fifty cents and may be obtained in Miss Lightcap's office in the basement of the Administration Building.

Candidates for the Master of Arts degree in the August graduation are requested to have pictures made on the following dates in Room 113 of the Frank I. Williams Center: Those with last names A-I, Tuesday, August 3, from 3:30 - 5:00; and those with last names J-Z, Wednesday, August 4, from 3:30 - 5:00.

New teacher graduate study program up for approval

High school teachers in graduate study at Georgia Southern College will have more options in the planning of their programs as a result of a proposed revision in the teacher education program as announced by Dean Paul Carroll of Georgia Southern College.

High school teachers often want their fifth year programs to contain more depth in the subject they teach. This specialization will be available as soon as the new program is approved by the Board of Regents and the State Department of Education. Other teachers often want to build additional competency in professional areas such as the teaching of reading or the supervision of student teaching or a second teaching field. The change permits these possibilities under the new option, Dr. Starr Miller, chairman of the Division of Education, points out.

Effective with approval early in 1966, those who wish their elective courses in more of the subject matter of their teaching field will be assigned an adviser in the teaching field for a program leading to the degree of Master of Science for teachers in the high school. Other high school teachers who want to meet fifth year certification requirements in their teaching field, but who additionally want breadth in their program of professional study will take the Master of Education degree. The areas of breadth will include opportunities to develop competency in the teaching of reading, junior high education, administration, supervision of student teaching, teaching methods, or a second teaching field. Master of Education programs for high school teachers are planned and directed by faculty members in the Education Division under the terms of this new plan.

"We must wait until 1965 for final approval of the Master of Science degree, but graduate students just now entering the secondary education program can make tentative plans to accomplish their objectives through one of the many options by contacting their Master of Education adviser in the Education Division. If the desire is for a broader professional competency, the adviser can provide for it immediately. If the desire is for greater depth in the teaching field, the education adviser will be able to plan accordingly," Miller said.

The Dean stated that these options constitute a single teacher education program under the teacher education activities of the college and that the Education Division will continue to assume responsibility for program approval and recommendation for certification.

GSC Library begins collection of famous prints

The Georgia Southern College library has begun a print collection, according to Miss Hassie McElveen, librarian. It is hoped that the collection will soon be large enough to lend out to the various buildings and offices on campus. The library has recently had 15 prints which were purchased last year, framed and hung throughout the library.

These include: Mademoiselle, Riviere by Ingres; The Fighting Temeraire by Turner; Restaurant De La Sirene by Van Gogh; Burning Incense by Sargent; Night of Carnival by Rousseau; Turquoise Vase With Flowers by Redon; Bridge At Argenteuil by Monet; Hunters in the Snow by Bruegel; Still Life by Braque; Water Lilies by Monet; Marguerite Reading by Matisse; Mont Ste.-Victorie by Cezanne; Dance Greenroom by Degas; Still Life, Basket of Fruit by Cezanne; and Christ and the Fishermen by Rouault.

Armstrong College President Summer graduation speaker

Dr. Henry L. Ashmore, president of Armstrong College in Savannah, will be the speaker at the twenty-fifth annual summer commencement exercises to be held at Georgia Southern College on August 19. The program will be held at 10:30 a.m. in the W. S. Hanner Gymnasium.

A former coordinator of student teaching at GSC, Dr. Ashmore received his Master of Education and Doctor of Education degrees from the University of Florida. Before assuming the presidency of Armstrong State College in 1964, he served as president of Pensacola Junior College. He now holds the position of secretary to the Executive Council of the Commission on Higher Education of the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools.

Dr. Ashmore has written articles for several education periodicals and is listed in Who's Who in American Education, Who's Who in the Southeast and Who's Who in America.

CPA review will be taught here

John Beegle, certified public accountant, and assistant professor of business at Georgia Southern College, is teaching a CPA review course sponsored by Haskins and Sells, national accounting firm of Savannah. He is using the facilities of Armstrong State College in Savannah for the 13-weeks course.

The object of the study was to familiarize junior and senior high school teachers of biology with the latest advances in the subject matter and to discuss current problems in their teaching efforts. Under the direction of Institute Director Dr. Leo Weeks, the participants studied principles of zoology, cell structure and functions, and principals of botany, matter, energy and life.

ROBERT OVERSTREET

Overstreet will present an evening of readings backstage on Monday

Robert Overstreet, assistant professor of speech, Georgia Southern College, will present an "Evening of Reading," in the backstage area of McCroan Auditorium on Monday August 9, at 8:15 p.m. Seating capacity for the performance will be held to sixty people. Mr. Overstreet will read selections from the poetry of Ezra Pound, Edwin Arlington Robinson, Edgar Lee Masters, T. S. Eliot, W. B. Yeats, Ogden Nash, from the book of Job and the "Ballad of the Sad Cafe."

A graduate of North Georgia College with his A. B. degree, Overstreet holds the M. A. from the Northwestern University School of Speech and is now working on his Ph.D. at Louisiana State University.

Since joining the Georgia Southern faculty he has become widely known as an interpretative reader. His latest appearances include shows over WJBF-TV (Augusta) and WS-AV-TV (Savannah).

There will be no admission charge. The public is invited to attend.

Dr. Henry L. Ashmore, president of Armstrong College in Savannah, will be the speaker at the twenty-fifth annual summer commencement exercises to be held at Georgia Southern College on August 19. The program will be held at 10:30 a.m. in the W. S. Hanner Gymnasium.

Political scientist will deliver lecture series on "Today's Isms"

Dr. William B. Eberstein, professor of political science, University of California, Santa Barbara, will deliver a series of lectures on "Today's Isms," to the members of the social science institute at Georgia Southern College August 9-15.

According to Dr. Jack Averitt, director of the institute, Dr. Eberstein is one of the foremost authorities on totalitarianism and is an author and lecturer of world renown. Three of his best known works are: Modern Political Thought, Today's Isms, and Two Ways of Life.

Lecture series given by Ecke

Dr. Melvin W. Ecke, dean of graduate studies at Georgia State College, Atlanta, presented a series of lectures to members of the social science institute at Georgia Southern College last week on American Historical Traditions. Particular topics of his lectures were: "Liberty and Order in the American System," "The Gospel of Wealth in the Guilded Age," and "Welfare Capitalism."

CLEC Committee selects programs

The Campus Life Enrichment Committee of Georgia Southern College has selected a program to be offered for the 1965-66 school year. The committee chairman, Dr. Jack W. Broucek, feels that this is a well-balanced group of programs which upholds their mission to bring diversified attractions to the campus.

The first of these programs, scheduled for October 14, 1965, will feature John Ciardi, poetry editor of Saturday Review, writer of critical articles, and outstanding lecturer. Also scheduled for sometime in the fall will be a speaker from the Manned Spacecraft Center, Houston, Tex.

The Kaleidoscope Players will appear January 17, 1966, in "Under Milk Wood." Jose Molina Spanish Ballet Company will perform February 9, followed by Whittemore and Lowe, famous duo-piano team on March 24, and Beverly Wolf, nationally known mezzo soprano of opera fame, in the spring quarter.

Former Southern president dies; served two colleges

Dr. Guy H. Wells, fifth president of Georgia Southern College, died recently in Dillard, Ga. He was president here from 1929 until 1934, between the administrations of Dr. Ernest V. Hollis and Dr. Marvin Pittman.

When he came in June, 1926, to serve as dean under Dr. Hollis, the school was named Georgia Normal School. In 1929, it was changed to South Georgia Teachers College. During his administration, the college was admitted to a 4-year rating and given specific right to grant degrees.

After leaving Georgia Southern, Dr. Wells served as president of Woman's College of Georgia from 1934 until 1954. He also served as president of the Georgia Education Association and the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

Dr. Wells had been interested in planting dogwood trees for many years on the campus and in the city of Statesboro. Most of the older dogwoods on campus were planted by Dr. Wells himself. Every winter for the past three or four years, he has contributed more dogwoods for planting.

Also for the past few years, Dr. Wells has been working with the Peace Corps, visiting colleges as a consultant.

I-75 pageant open to students

Miss Atlanta of 1964-65 has become a contestant in the Miss Georgia I-75 beauty pageant scheduled for August 13 at Lake Park, Ga. She is Lynne Shirley of Powder Springs, an Atlanta suburb. Miss Shirley is a 1965 graduate of the University of Georgia, where she served as Miss Pandora and held a number of other beauty titles. The Miss I-75 pageant will be held in conjunction with the grand opening of The Pure Oil Company's big truck stop-motoring complex at Lake Park, 10 miles south of Valdosta, on the international highway which runs from Florida to Canada. Pure, which is sponsoring the contest, is establishing a chain of the big service facilities on I-75 and is holding similar contests in the five other states through which it passes. State winners will ultimately compete for the title of Miss I-75 U.S.A. and a grand prize of a fully-equipped Mustang in her choice of models, plus a year's supply of gasoline (1,000 gallons) and a weekend for two in Florida. She will have won a set of matched luggage as the state winner. The contest is open to all Georgia residents or students of Georgia colleges who are unmarried and 18 to 22 years of age. All expenses incurred by contestants in the Miss Georgia I-75 contest, as well as the six-state event, will be paid by Pure Oil.

Science institute closes at GSC

A National Science Foundation Summer Institute for teachers of junior and senior high school biology ended last week at Georgia Southern College. Twenty-five teachers representing six southern states, Nebraska, and Illinois, participated in the study.

Job Corps will offer challenge

Teachers and guidance counselors who are anxious to acquire a new experience in education, as well as meeting an unparalleled challenge, have such an opportunity in Job Corps.

This is the major youth program in the President's War on Poverty and is designed to help those young men and women 16 through 21, who come from impoverished homes, who are out of school and out of work. The program is geared to providing basic education and work skills to make these young people employable.

Teachers and guidance counselors are needed to staff the Job Corps conservation centers, which are being set up for 100 to 200 young men in national parks and forests. Eighty-seven such centers already have been announced and most will be in operation by this summer.

Those involved in the education program of these centers will have an unconventional experience, as well as the satisfaction of assisting culturally deprived young people to help themselves.

Conservation center staff members will have the opportunity of developing new methods and materials for students who could not and would not avail themselves of conventional schooling. Job Corps enrollees will be permitted to learn at their own rate, through the use of self-teaching and programmed learning courses. The Corpsmen will be helped to develop self-confidence and proper attitudes toward society.

Salaries for conservation center teachers, guidance counselors and deputy directors for education will be commensurate with experience and training.

Instructors - Teach Basic reading, writing and speaking skills; arithmetic, science and technology; develop curriculum using the most modern methods. Applicants should have a bachelor's degree, training or experience in teaching, some knowledge of new teaching methods and curriculum.

Staff members take up duties

Several staff members began their duties at Georgia Southern College July 1, 1965. They include: Mrs. Becky Bland, Mrs. Anne H. Boswell, and Mrs. Linda Bennett, library; Mrs. Jackie Cooper, office of registrar; Mrs. Jannette Johnson and Mrs. Cleta Murphy, office of comptroller; Mrs. Susan Reynolds, secretary in student personnel; and Mrs. Lorraine Hardy, secretary in the education division.

165 attending GSC on grants

This summer there are approximately 165 people attending Georgia Southern College on grants-in-aids from the Georgia State Department of Education, according to an announcement by Mrs. Sara Divine, consultant for in-service teacher education.

The students are enrolled on a graduate program leading toward a specific certification. In some cases admission to the graduate division may be dependent upon their performance in classes this summer.

Nation's college teacher preparation needs boost

By WINFRED L. GODWIN
Director, Southern
Regional Education Board

The preparation of Southern college teachers is now at about the level which the nation had reached a dozen years ago.

This disheartening fact came out of a recent national study of college teaching faculty which revealed that although the level of preparation of Southern college teachers is higher than ever before—43 percent hold the doctor's degree—this is still about 10 percent less than in other regions.

Another national study—this year's National Education Association survey of college teacher supply and demand—fills in the details on how the staffing of the nation's colleges is progressing.

The NEA study concentrates on "new" college teachers, that is, those who during the previous year were not employed as full-time college teachers. In the last decade there has been little variation in the percent of new teachers with the doctor's degree—around 27 percent.

However, several favorable trends are contributing to the general up-grading of teacher preparation. The percent of new teachers with less than a master's degree is steadily declining, while the percent with just a master's degree has gradually risen to a plateau of about 40 percent during the 60's. The percent with a master's degree plus one year is gradually rising. But most important of all, perhaps, is the fact that so high a proportion of college teachers without doctor's degrees continue their preparation while on the job, which accounts for the fact that over 50 percent of the teaching force, nationally, has doctorates.

Preparation of new teachers varies greatly according to field, ranging from the 61 percent who hold doctorates in psychology to the 11 percent who hold doctorates in English. Engineering is the only field in which substantial improvement at the new teacher level has taken place in recent years; 45 percent of new engineering teachers now have the doctor's degree compared with 14 percent ten years ago. Fields which have fallen include English and foreign languages.

Of doctorates "entering new occupations," almost half go into college teaching. Nevertheless, the demand for qualified teaching personnel is so great that about half the colleges and universities report budgeted teaching positions which remain unfilled. High on the shortage list is mathematics, with 166 institutions in the nation reporting unfilled openings. Next comes physics, with unfilled vacancies at 110 institutions. English, sociology and psychology, chemistry and economics are other fields high either in actual unfilled positions or in terms of increasing shortages anticipated by college administrators.

Among administrators, too, there are severe shortages. The position in which the highest number of institutions reported such shortages is that of head librarian. Other scarce fields include the positions of dean of students, director of development and director of research.

One of the consequences of these shortages is the acceptance of women in large numbers. Fields in which it was reported that women "might be employed in larger numbers" are listed in the following rank order: mathematics, English, chemistry and physics, psychology and sociology. Actually women as a percent of new teachers have remained at about the same level for the last decade and so has the percent of women who have earned a doctor's degree.

Looking at the broad picture, it is obvious that the search for qualified college teachers must continue to press for early recruitment of top flight students at all levels.

World lecturer speaks here

Frank R. Barnett, world lecturer and consulting program manager for the American Bar Association, lectured recently to the sixty United States high school teachers of history in the Georgia Southern College social science institute on the topic, "The Non-Western World."

He told them that democracies have been able to bring themselves to adequate defense, in time — Athens vs. Sparta, Great Britain vs. Hitler, United States vs. Japan. Today, however, said Barnett, our democracy cannot afford an atomic Pearl Harbor or a nuclear Dunkirk. We need an alert education system to bring the public to a clear focus on the magnitude of the task.

He went on to say that the contest between communism and the free world will last 50 years. Barring nuclear warfare, this crisis over a period of five decades, will be waged on the terrain of education. The teacher is nearer the front line than the professional military personnel.
