JOSE MOLINA SET TO APPEAR

Campus Life Enrichment Committee To Sponsor Program

Spanish Flamenco Dancers To Perform Wednesday In McCroan Auditorium

The Jose Molina Dancers, a young group of Spanish Flamenco performers, will present a program of 12 songs and dances Wednesday night in McCroan Auditorium at 8:15 p.m. under the auspices of the Campus Life Enrichment Committee.

Bailes Espanoles made its debut at the Caribe-Hilton Hotel in San Juan, Puerto Rico. The show's North American preiere occurred at the Trinity Theater in Washington, D. C., in 1962.

The group has played from Montreal to Honolulu and from the Mexican border into all five provinces of Canada.

The group, composed of 12 performers, features a dazzling program of songs and dances from Spain. The artists, among the most popular in Spain today, have been described by American critics as being "incredibly youthful, talented and handsome."

Only two members of the troupe speak English. The other members speak through interpreters but are working hard to acquire a basic knowledge of English.

The group uses eighty pair of shoes and boots for every performance. Each performer in the company is personally responsible for the maintenance of his costume.

The dancers use no dressers during the performance to help them change their costumes. They have perfected their changing techniques to the point of being able to change costumes, make-up and hair-dos in a matter of seconds.

Students may pick up tickets free of charge by presenting their I.D. cards in the Office of Student Personnel and in the dining hall during the lunch hour. Admission for the general public will be 75 cents and $1. All seats will be reserved.

NEW REGULATIONS RELEASED

Beginning Monday, no left turn may be made at the intersection of Herty and Circle Drive, the 15 minute parking restriction on the south side of Circle Drive will be lifted and present vehicle regulations referring to auto registration have been changed.

On Jan. 21 the Traffic and Safety Committee met to determine the changes needed to improve the existing regulations. Recommendations from the Student Congress that crosswalks be painted by a service organization was approved with the stipulation that the organization would work under the direction of the campus security.

According to Harold Howell, Director of Campus Security, in the event a student trades vehicles or the decal is lost or destroyed, a fee of $1 will be charged for replacement.

'Affirmation: Vietnam' Program Making Organizational Progress

In two weeks time "Affirmation: Vietnam," statewide student movement supporting the government's commitment to Vietnam, has made swift organizational progress.

Key speakers, including Secretary of State Dean Rusk, have been set for the assembly in Atlanta Stadium Feb. 12., and all other phases of the program are moving rapidly toward completion.

Comedian Bob Hope will emcee a program concerning "Affirmation: Vietnam." The program is entitled "A Generation Speaks" and will be broadcast next week on almost all TV stations in Georgia.

Hope, with Governor Carl E. Sanders and Senator Richard B. Russell, will discuss the student movement and the Vietnam situation. Other TV and radio programs on the movement have been broadcast in recent weeks.

Response from students throughout Georgia has expanded the number of workers participating in the program to 200 in its Emory University offices and to several thousand on the statewide level. Every college in the state has now organized the movement on their campuses.

The Georgia Youth Council has collected an estimated 60,000 affirmation signatures in their opinion poll of Georgians regarding the United States' commitment to South Vietnam. The project will continue for three more weeks.

Annual Exhibit Set for Sunday

The annual senior art exhibit will open Sunday in Rosenwald Gallery with a reception at 3:30 p.m.

Art majors who have completed their degree programs at the college have presented the faculty of the art division with selections from their work covering a four year period.

The faculty has made selections from the work which consists of jewelry, batik, creative stitchery, hooked rugs, ceramics, drawings, sculpture and paintings.

Seniors whose work will be on display are Ruth Gasset, Ken Ivey, Genie Tribble, Linda Holton, Sylvia Hutto, Alicia Johnson, Janet Reiley, Mary Milhollin, Bill Johnson, Hugh Wilson, Judy Wilson, Brenda Sims and Bill Pickens.

Cawley Selected As 1966 UMOG

Bob Cawley, senior industrial arts major from Savannah, was named 1966 Ugly Man on Campus at the homecoming game Saturday night.

Cawley was first among ten men who vied for the title. The contestants collected money from students and friends with each cent counting as one vote.

The winner, sponsored by Iota Alpha Tau, collected $120 of the $260 total that was donated. The proceeds will be added to the Chapel Fund, according to Billy Reichert, president of Alpha Phi Omega which sponsored the contest.

Sandra Fleming Selected To Reign As 'Miss GSC'

Sandra Fleming succeeded last year's queen, Johnnie Lockett, as "Miss GSC, 1966" Friday night at Alpha Rho Tau's twentieth annual Homecoming Beauty Revue.

Gloria Lane, senior home economics major from Statesboro was first runner-up. Maudie Walker second runner-up, is a junior elementary education major from Tifton. Beverly Carlson, third runner-up, is a freshman elementary education major from Dawson.

The 19 contestants appeared first in semi-formal dresses, then in long gowns, against a background of light and dark shadows, in accordance with the theme, "Chiaroscuro."

Ric Mandes, master of ceremonies, gave a brief character sketch of each contestant during the evening gown competition. The "Chancellors," a vocal group from the college, entertained during the intermission and Dr. Jack Broucek, professor of music supplied the background music for the contest.

The new queen is a 20-year-old sophomore from Evans. Her major is elementary education and her hobbies include acrobatics, swimming, reading and music.

Each of the semi-final contestants was asked to define a word as part of the contest. Sandra defined "Loyalty." She said, "Loyalty is the premise upon which everything stands. Everyone needs an ideal or cause upon which to base his life, and he should be loyal to that ideal. Loyalty is one of the greatest opportunities we have for making the world a better place."

Chosen as first runner-up in the 1965 "Miss Georgia Contest," Sandra has also won the titles of "Miss Augusta Posture Queen," "Miss Augusta Yankee Baseball Queen,"

"Miss Columbia County" and "Miss South East Georgia FFA Queen."

Sandra stated that she was "terribly surprised and honored," upon winning the "Miss GSC" title. She also said, "I enjoyed working with ART and being in a contest with girls I already know. This is the greatest honor I've ever had and I'm immensely flattered."

Business Instructor, Students To Attend Emory Conference

Rodger Collons, finance instructor at the college, and three students from the business department will attend the Intercollegiate Business Game and Conference at Emory University March 10-12.

The three students are Lewis Chambless, senior accounting major from Dawson; Sam Schafer, senior finance major from Augusta, and Dale Points, senior management major from Statesboro. The students were picked on the basis of scholastic average and interest in business.

The conference will involve the operation of a multi-firm, one-product industry to help students from eight Georgia colleges learn top-level planning and policy formation.

They will manage a substantial firm in a hypothetical manufacturing industry.

All expenses will be paid by the participating companies.

How close do you think a girl should sit to her date if the car has bucket-seats?

Lynn Davis, Soph., Macon: As close as he'll let you. Without over exciting him.

Jimmy Ivey, Fresh., Milledgeville: Anywhere in my bucket seats that they want to. Even in the driver's seat.

Mary Farr, Ticket-lady in lunch room, Statesboro: She'll just have to sit in the other seat, is all I can say.

Walter Coleman, Soph., Brunswick: In the back seat with the boy. By the way, I have a car with bucket seats. What are you doing tonight?

Maudie Walker, Jr., Tifton: If the boy is stupid enough to buy bucket seats in the first place, he should have to suffer the consequences.

George Watson, Sr., Pleasureville, Ky: I think that a girl should sit on her side of the seat, because if she is sitting next to the boy and he goes to change gears, he might get confused!

HOWELL COMMENDED

Campus Security Director Harold Howell should be commended for the progress the department has made under his direction since he took over last summer.

Under Howell's supervision campus security has obtained a new car, a new office, a secretary, new uniforms, new equipment and an additional officer. The filing and record system is the best its ever been.

The office has more leeway in making decisions than ever before under Howell and the satisfactory results are evidence of its success.

Campus Security is a vital part of the college. Its progress is as important as all other areas of growth. If the office continues to expand as it has during the past seven months under Howell, there can be no limit to the benefits it can bestow upon the college.

VACANT SEATS

There were vacant seats at the homecoming game.

The students had been told that there might be tickets available on the night of the game. They had also been told that the alumni should be entitled to a portion of the tickets. This was agreed upon as a fair solution. Many students then went home for the weekend, honestly believing that they wouldn't be able to get any tickets.

The crowds thronged into the Hanner Gymnasium; but several vacant sections of stands still stood bare.

The alumni got rooked too.

They came back to the campus for homecoming to find that the only reunion dinner was for a few classes which had graduated over 30 years ago. There was nothing for them to do except go to the ball game and then leave. And there weren't enough of them to fill up the stands that had been reserved for them.

We suggest, as a possibility for next year, that alumni and special guests get their tickets by mail in advance. This would insure an accurate tally of the number of student tickets available.

AUDITORIUM NEEDED

The college needs a new auditorium.

McCroan Auditorium has served its purpose for the college. It's about time some plans were made to either improve it or build a new one.

Over the last few years the auditorium has become inadequate for the activities that are scheduled there. A new lighting system is needed. The floors are in poor condition. The rubber carpets on the aisles contain numerous holes and the heating system, when in operation, sounds like someone beating on the bottom of a trash can.

The seating capacity for the student body is quite insufficient. Graduation ceremonies have to be conducted in the W. S. Hanner Building whereas at other colleges the ceremonies are held in the college's auditorium. McCroan is centrally located on the campus but often this proves a problem rather than an asset.

In the middle of a dramatic scene of a Masquers' production a horn will blow or yells can be heard from the Alumni Building where a basketball game is being held.

Renovations are needed. But, instead of spending money for improvements the college needs a new auditorium. One that will be adequate for the needs of GSC.

LITTLE MAN ON CAMPUS

"WELL, MRS. DELANEY, YOU'LL JUST HAVE TO STOP MASHING POTATOES UNTIL THIS RASH CLEARS UP."

Now Is The Appropriate Moment To Get Naked . . . And Conform?

By HUBERT NORTON
Staff Writer

Paul Rather was basically a good joe. He didn't intentionally harm people, and he got along well with most people he knew. And he smiled at those he didn't know.

He had a few idiosyncrasies but most people have their own peculiarities. Sure, he liked to read poetry by Robert Burns while sitting on a toilet, and he liked to get naked and listen to Bob Dylan. But all in all, he was basically a nice guy.

His buddies needled him incessantly about some of his idiosyncrasies, but he took it all with a grin. They kidded him about always wearing a coat and tie and walking through the Hollis Building so that naive freshmen would mistake him for an instructor. "Professor Rather," his buddies called him.

But he didn't mind. He attended all the cultural productions put on by the college. Again the reason was to be seen in a coat and tie and be mistaken for an instructor by naive freshmen. At the cultural functions, he sat and chatted with real, live professors, hoping that the vast majority of the student body would associate him with the professors. Sometimes it worked, sometimes it didn't. But wasn't that life?

Paul's one ambition in life was to be trusted and respected and successful. But isn't that the ambition of every man? He often wondered.

He would look at the vast majority of the student body and deep-down wonder what it would be like to be wealthy and live in a life of conformity.

The people he viewed in the halls didn't appear to be respected or trusted or successful. Some of the people looked older than his dearly beloved professors and were still in school. He was always willing to bet that half of them had never worked before and were living off money from home. Perpetual students, he always called them. Some of the hair styles that the men wore looked to him repulsive. So did some other things, such as a mass of bare, masculine ankles in class.

"Everybody to his own kick," he would console himself. He always consoled himself in moments of depression or anger, because he knew some people always reviled his appearance and his idiosyncrasies.

"Everybody to his own kick." He detested the influx of spy novels into the good libraries of the world, and he was angered by the people who read them and professed to be readers. But then he might just be jealous, he told himself. He couldn't deep-down expect everybody to read Robert Burns.

He never laughed at a good joke like everybody else did because he thought he had more of a sense of humor than an obscene word or an obscene situation could muster. He could appreciate a good anecdote, however.

As each day would pass with a minimum of disgust, Paul Rather would retire to his dormitory. He would study enough to make good grades and then he would relax. He would get naked, listen to Bob Dylan, and read Robert Burns.

"Everybody to his own kick," he would tell himself as he relaxed.

Students Must Realize Value Of Education

By FRANK TILTON
Editor

A college education is an asset of increasing value.

And yet six out of every ten students who enter college leave before graduation—most of them by the end of their sophomore year.

Of the approximate 1.1 million students who entered college last fall, more than 600,000 will drop out before they finish.

It seems odd that such figures arise time and again when the college students, after all, are among the privileged few.

TILTON

Students are privileged because only 50 percent of all high school graduates enter college. They are privileged because they have been accepted as a result of their efforts in high school and their college board scores.

But the students continue to drop out, year after year.

Why should students make an all-out effort to finish college? First of all, it can pay off financially. Secondly, it is an expense that must not be wasted. When students throw away a scholarship it is a shame, and when they quit school after borrowing money for several years, they are in debt and have nothing to show for it.

A college education has roots of value deeper than those expressed in monetary gain or waste. It has value in developing in students a better understanding of themselves and their fellows around them; it has value in helping students adjust to the pressures and complexities of life that they will face when they step out into the world.

Some students drop out because they are lazy; others leave because they cannot take the pressure. These people should either face up to reality or get out. College is no place for irresponsible, weak individuals.

The saddest situation of all is when students drop out because of financial difficulties. This excuse is almost a thing of the past if students really want an education. Loans, scholarships and jobs at the college are plentiful if they are willing to sacrifice a little and bear down.

A good education is a treasure, a wealth that can continue to increase with every passing day of life, if given the proper attention.

Students are facing a time when a four-year education is merely a stepping stone to graduate school. Graduate school is becoming more and more a stepping stone to doctorate work.

Although a four-year education is not much in light of the present push for higher learning, students should stay in college until they graduate if at all possible.

Before students consider giving up, they should remember all that a college education can mean to them—a more financially sound future, a better understanding of the world around them, a preparation to face the complexities of everyday situations, and above all, the deep-down satisfaction that they did not give up, regardless of the pressures and sacrifices that they were faced with.

GSC FRESHMAN RECEIVES HONOR
Nancy Mock Swept Title from Nine Other Finalists

Nancy Mock Captures Title Of '66 Best Dressed Coed

By ANN VAUGHAN
Society Editor

The 1966 Best Dressed Coed is Nancy Mock, a freshman from Savannah who has worn uniforms for eleven of her thirteen years of school.

Having attended a parochial school from kindergarten through the eighth grade and attended a private girls' school in her last three years of high school, Nancy says, "I think uniforms are great. Everyone should have to wear them." She admitted that the style of the uniforms was "awful"—blazers with square padded shoulders. And one can look at Nancy's petite form and realize that she would wear even a potato sack with grace.

Nancy attributes her fashion consciousness and taste in clothes to her mother. Nancy said, "though Mother is kind of conservative and would never wear textured hose herself, she has always been willing to advise me on new fashions objectively."

One of Glamour's attributes of a best dressed coed is that her clothes be suitable and in line with local customs. Nancy sums it up this way, "I like to look attractive and different but not bazarre and freakish."

Nancy does not have a specific clothes budget with which to keep her well-stocked wardrobe replenished. She says, "My mother's mood is my clothes budget."

To keep up to date on the latest fashion news, Nancy depends most on instinct, and she says, "With me it is a feeling. I see garments in a store and I either have a feeling that it is good and it will last or I don't have the feeling." Nancy also gets many of her ideas from current fashion magazines.

As is common with most girls who achieve best dressed status, Nancy has a practical side to her nature.

"I shop sales. After Christmas I buy lots of winter clothes. At the end of the summer I buy summer clothes. I have to try and judge what will still be fashionable next season."

She also tries to coordinate her wardrobe. Each time she buys something she attempts to fit it into a definite color scheme. Nancy admits, "Sometimes I go berserk, then I buy just because I like something."

Except for times when Nancy goes berserk and puts aside her practical nature, she usually doesn't buy clothes just because they are faddish.

Nancy often sets off her short cropped blonde hair with bows. "I have always worn my hair short for convenience and also because long hair doesn't become me. I'm just lucky this year. Short hair finally became stylish."

When asked what famous person she would choose to associate with if given the chance, Nancy replied, "I really like Jacquelyn Kennedy. Though I never really studied her, I think she really has style."

In her spare time Nancy likes to draw, paint and write poems. She plans to major in art and possibly do creative commercial drawing.

When one talks with Nancy, one realizes that she is a deeply sensitive and artistic person, whose feelings, emotions and tastes are reflected in her flair for fashion.

Conformist Scarifices Freedom For Association with 'In Crowd'

By DAN RAHN
Staff Writer

Boots for the girls and long hair for the boys, modern fads that are sweeping the campuses of America, are "in" now at GSC.

The same thing goes for "Wing-tips" and pierced ears. If the truth were known, the general consensus of the Georgia Southern student body would reveal a low regard for religion, morals, and ethics. All of these things are fads on the Sweetheart Campus.

Individual views on religion, ethics, and morality are often sacrificed to avoid being different, for to be different at Georgia Southern is to be like a Negro Civil Rights worker at a Ku Klux Klan rally.

Everyone wants to be popular, and being popular usually means—there are some exceptions, of course—going along with the present general opinions, whatever these opinions might be.

Even those who cling to their religious, moral, and ethical views seek out others with similar ideas, form a consensus to live by, and dare not stray away from the views of their group.

So it continues with one major "in" group and several more or less minority "in" groups until no less than 99 percent of the students today are living as conformists.

What is the alternative? What is a nonconformist? The very word "nonconformist" carries clothes, long, stringy hair, and beards—the beatniks. Beatniks who hang around in coffee shops and beer joints, drinking, smoking cigarettes, reciting their poetry, and conversing with their comrades—these are nonconformists.

But are beatniks nonconformists? As one man in my home town said, "Show me one of these beatniks and I'll show you another one's." That's right, beatniks are not nonconformists, but merely disillusioned souls who band together with similar souls to watch the world go by. A beatnik does not live alone. He follows his crowd and conforms to their ways.

Then what is a nonconformist? It is simple; he is one who formulates his own ideas and standards and lives by them in spite of what the general consensus may be. He may agree with some of the ideas of one "crowd," and yet he can still agree with some of the views of another.

Many people call him a "loner," a word with somewhat unpleasant associations. But a nonconformist could more accurately be called something far different; he is a free man, free to act, think, and say as he pleases, unrestricted by popular opinion.

Georgia Southern is a school of conformity, but it should not be. If the conformist-nonconformist ratio were reversed to be 1 to 99, the students would leave GSC much better prepared for a challenging and happy life.

WINNER FINDS TIME TO RELAX, READ MAGAZINES

Nancy will compete for one of Glamour's top ten regional positions in March. The same qualifications used to select the ten finalists on campus will be employed by a board of Glamour editors to determine national winners.

Three Members Attend Meeting

Three members of the college Business Division Faculty will attend the third Conference on Business Education in Athens Feb. 4-5, at the University of Georgia Center for Continuing Education.

Miss Mary McCall, Mrs. Marjorie Bell and Miss Jane White will represent Georgia Southern at the annual meeting which is sponsored by the Department of Business Education of the University of Georgia.

Miss White, a professor of business education, will present a lecture demonstration at 10:30 a.m. Saturday. Her topic will be "Using Visual Aids in Business Education."

She has written several books, including Teaching Typewriting, Teaching Clerical Practice and Visual Teaching Ideas. In addition, Miss White is editor of the column on "Teaching Aids" in Business Education World.

Students at GSC found themselves enjoying a merry treat last week when snow fell in Statesboro. A determined group of young men fought hard and fast with snow balls aplenty behind Cone and Sanford Halls until campus security officers decided it was time to "march off to bed".

Panama Olympian Cagers To Battle Rugged Southern

The Eagles will host the Panama National Olympic basketball team Saturday night at the W. S. Hanner Gym at 8 p.m. and the Panama team is almost an unknown entity.

The Panamanians are reputed to be a good, small team. They are currently on their first visit to the United States. The 10-man team is composed of six Panama collegiate players and four amateur basketball players. The team's tallest man is 6-5.

A breakdown of the team is: Julio Andrade, a 5-10 forward;

Calixto Malcolm, a 6-3 guard; Norris Webb, a 6-5 center; Julio Osorio, a 6-4 center; Davis Peralta, a 5-8 forward; Eduardo Blades, a 6-2 forward; Prince Small, a 6-4 guard; Luis Mor-West, a 5-11 forward; and Cleveland Geddes, a 6-4 guard.

The team is coached by Mauro Lasso.

"We're looking forward to a good basketball game," said Coach J. B. Searce. "We don't know anything about the Panama team, but they have to be a good team in order to represent their country in an international contest."

Georgia Southern played the Italian National Olympic team in 1964 and won a 84-83 thriller in the closing seconds on a bucket by Fran Florian.

Students will be permitted into the game on their I.D. cards. The game, scheduled after the season began, was originally intended to be a paid admission affair.

Searce is expected to start Mike Rickard and either Jim Seeley or Tommy Dial at forwards, Bill Pickens at center, and Don Adler and Jimmy Rose at guards.

Georgia Southern currently has a 15-4 record.

Pickens Paces Eagles' Attack In 83-71 Victory Over Mercer

Bill Pickens, totaling 23 points and pulling down 24 rebounds, led the Eagles to an 83-71 homecoming victory over the Bears of Mercer University here last Saturday night.

The victory marked the sixth straight win in regulation play and upped the Eagles' record to 14-4.

Backing up Pickens in the Eagle scoring column were Don Adler with 16 and Mike Rickard and Jimmy Rose with 14.

Bob Reeves paced the Mercer scoring attack with 15 points, followed by Naylor and Moody, each with 13.

The Bears hit on 29 of 66 field attempts for 44 percent, and on 13 of 21 from the gratis line for 65 percent.

The Eagles had an off night, scoring on only 39 percent of 79 attempts from the field, and 21 of 31 free throws for 68 percent.

The taller Eagles maintained a wide margin under the backboards, totaling 52 rebounds to Mercer's 39.

The game got off to a slow start with the teams swapping baskets fairly consistently. GSC built up a seven point lead at one point during the first half but was unable to hold the margin. The first period ended GSC 35 Mercer 32.

Scoring was only a little better in the second half and the Bears managed to gain the lead only once, at 38-37.

Mercer's last hope came and went with 10 minutes remaining when a basket by Reeves brought them within one point of the Eagles' 51 point total.

The Eagles blanked out the Bears' scoring efforts for three straight points to lead 83-64 with 1:15 remaining.

In the final minute, the Bears scored seven points to end the game 83-71.

Gymnasts Travel to Citadel; Oertley Sees Burton-led Win

The Eagle Gymnasts meet the Bulldogs of the Citadel Gym Club in Charleston, S. C. tomorrow at 2:30.

According to Ron Oertley, GSC gymnastics coach, the Citadel team is a developing team and is better this year than last. Furman University defeated the Bulldogs earlier this season.

Coach Oertley said, "We are ready for this meet. Our routines are not as efficient or as consistent as they should be but I think we should win this one."

The team has been plagued by problems with men who had to be shifted to events they are not used to working because so many men have been lost, Coach Oertley said. "With the new scoring system," he added, "You have to have at least three men in each event."

Coach Oertley said that Kip Burton, team captain, is back to full capacity after a week and a half lay-off for injuries. Burton will perform in all events instead of just three this week.

TENNIS TRYOUTS

Those going out for the tennis varsity team this year are expected to attend the introduction meeting on Wednesday at 7:15 p.m. in room seven of the Hollis Building.
