The U.S. Small Business Administration's (SBA) Georgia District Office has awarded Jeremy Horstman the 2017 Veteran Small Business Champion in the 2017 National Small Business Week awards for Georgia.

Horstman is the director of the Veterans Business Outreach Center (VBOC) at Georgia Southern University's City Campus in downtown Statesboro. The Center is one of 20 VBOCs nationwide.

"The Veterans Business Outreach Center team is excited to receive this award as an advocate for 'vetrepreneurs,'" said Horstman. "As an SBA resource partner, we strive to empower veterans in the small business arena and when they are successful, we are successful. As veterans ourselves, we enjoy helping transitioning veterans on the path to business ownership."

Horstman was nominated by the Georgia District SBA Public Affairs Officer, Lindsay Williams. To be nominated for Veteran Small Business Champion of the Year, an individual must have fulfilled a commitment to the advancement of small business opportunities for veterans of the U.S. armed forces.

"These awards aren't just about recognizing business success, they also recognize the efforts of small business advocates that empower entrepreneurs," said Terri Denison, head of the U.S. Small Business Administration's Georgia District Office. "We believe that small businesses are the economic engine driving our economy and people like these award winners are the spark plugs powering that engine."

Criteria for the award includes: active support for legislative or regulatory action designed to help small businesses; evidence of increased business opportunities for veterans as a result of the nominee's actions; and advisory activities to improve awareness of small business opportunities among veterans' groups, among other things.

The winners will be honored at a luncheon, hosted by the Georgia Lenders Quality Circle, scheduled for May 2, at Villa Christina in Atlanta. To learn more about National Small Business Week in Georgia go to https:// www.sba.gov/ga
