Auto Safety Critic

To Lecture April 28

Ralph Nader, lawyer and outspoken critic of auto-safety legislation will lecture in McCroan Auditorium, April 28.

Nader has been instrumental in bringing about many of the changes in the automobile industry to produce safer cars and reduce highway deaths. He has worked on legal problems and policies, both legislative and judicial, of highway safety and automobile design and has served as a consultant and contributor to many legal publications.

Nader believes that unsafe autos pose a profound professional challenge to the legal, medical, and engineering professions, who have the responsibility not just to apply their optimum skill to the problems but to work for the elimination of those very problems whenever possible. His best-seller, "Unsafe at Any Speed," illustrates his thinking on this subject.

Ralph Nader received his A.B. from Princeton University in 1955 and his L.L.B. in 1958 from Harvard Law School. He served as a Research Assistant in Harvard Law School, from 1958-59, and after serving in the U.S. Army, he established a law practice. His articles in automobile safety have appeared in the Atlantic Monthly, The Nation, New Republic, Christian Science Monitor.

OEO Head Decries Poverty Conditions

By ALAN BOND

The dynamic young head of the Regional Office of Economic Opportunity certainly knows how to appeal to the college student. Tuesday, April 22, William W. Suttle visited the campus and Statesboro to convey his message about the war on poverty.

Speaking to a crowd of 300 students, the regional director explained that his program in six southeastern states does not evolve from committees, but from the individual. Since March 11, 1968, Suttle has moved the anti-poverty program forward through such agencies as Community Action, VISTA and Job Corps. His army reaches 90 percent of the population with emphasis placed on the individual.

Leadership qualifications of William Suttle include former presidency of the United States Jaycees, Sargent Shriver's special assistant and law graduate of the University of North Carolina. Suttle, previously a banker, gave up his finance career to become a man that takes action rather than talking about it. He joined the OEO program at the request of Sargent Shriver and is now proud of his decision to look poverty in the eye.

After his lecture in Foy, Suttle had lunch in the Landrum Center, before embarking on his tour of "Black Bottom," a ghetto area of Statesboro. He has seen poverty before, but during his Statesboro tour he commented, "We are so caught up in our middle class values, that we have become alienated from the situations existing in our deprived areas."

The average student considers poverty a problem, but does not realize its intensity. One example of real poverty here in Statesboro is a converted night club that is now the dwelling of four families. One quarter of the "home" is occupied by six persons, a mother and five children. The paste-board ceiling covers the three rooms that have only one bed and an open-air hole for a toilet.

This is poverty; it is in Statesboro, and William Suttle business to combat the is the man that makes it his problem that affects all men.

On the "Right" side

With the trials and tribulations of college comes the question, why can't the students of this campus find anything good and right with it?

If one tries, he can find much that is good and right with Georgia Southern. First, the nature and beauty of the campus surpasses the landscape of many campuses. In comparison with the University of Georgia's campus, this one does not extend for miles and miles. The buildings are closely located which makes class changing easier and eliminates hustling and bustling to the next class.

Second, the problem of parking seems to be high on the agenda for criticism. Time and time again, the George-Anne has printed the idea of no Freshmen cars or the parking problem. However, the source of the problem could be many students are lazy. Would it be too much to walk a block to class? One does not need to park right at the door of the building. The parking problem is not as acute as it seems; the students simply do not want to use their legs for exercise or travel.

Third, the administration and faculty of this college may not be tops with everyone; however, they are. Academically, G.S.C. ranks high in administration, faculty and other phases of college life. On this campus, one finds small classes, professors who (in most cases) are really concerned.

The fourth point settles on the ultimate in what is right with this college—the students. No where can one find a friendlier group of people.

To answer the question lead to much detail; however, it is relatively simple. All one must remember is that on each and every college campus, students complain one must remember that he alone chose Georgia Southern College.

It's Spring Swing

The long awaited Spring Swing week has finally arrived. And along with it comes all the fun and activities needed to occupy some of that spare time and to absorb some of that excess energy brought on by the coming of spring and a year of hard work on the part of the student.

Spring Swing was begun in 1965 as a result of a series of raids held on the women's dormitories and other mob action on the part of students in the preceding year. The sophomore class began the now annual event with hopes that the activities would help release pent-up emotions.

This year students may view the talents of others at the outdoor band concert to be held by the lake, dance to the music of the Melody Makers in the gym or present their own talents at the annual Lamar Harris Talent show in McCroan. This gives students who think their talents are many and varied a chance to let others decide whether or not they feel the same way.

The high spirited, adventurous minded student exhaust his energies by participating in the scavenger hunt. He or she will probably prowl the campus looking for such items as a Hubert Humphrey bumper sticker, an outdated skate board, a wooden yoyo or a Micky Mouse watch.

Comedian David Frye and the Happenings will appear on Friday night. Saturday there will be a campus-wide field day. The week will conclude with a dance featuring the Pieces of Eight sponsored by the Interfraternity Council.

You are the ones who gripe about having nothing to do. Now is your chance as a member of the student body to participate in the campus activities. You can make them or break them by not participating.

War on Poverty

The poor are with us always. But sometimes we don't realize just how close they really are. William W.

Suttle, Southeastern Director of the Office of Economic Opportunity (OEO) came to Statesboro Tuesday and lectured to a group of college students and faculty. In his lecture, Suttle explained how prevalent poverty is, especially in the southeastern states.

At one point of his speech, Suttle related a story of a young child in a poverty stricken family who was gnawed to death by rodents while he slept in the family's shambled dwelling. Admittedly, instances such as this are rare, but the mere fact that it happened in a prosperous country like the United States should evoke a sense of guilt and shame in persons.

Suttle toured "Black Bottom," the ghetto area of Statesboro, Tuesday afternoon.

This writer was one of several persons who visited the area with him; the conditions seen there are too unbelievable to describe in a written text or to even be confirmed by a photo.

One can be termed a "liberal," "conservative," "racist," or an "equalist," but one trip through the less fortunate sections of the "tourist city" would convince even a hard-core opponent that there is reason for people having to live as many of the families in "Black Bottom." The unequal distribution of wealth and the deplorable living conditions are unjustifiable by anyone's standards.

William Suttle and the OEO are doing their part to fight a war on poverty in the South; they are helping laborers who work for a miserly sum of $18.00 for 51 hours to try to find a better way of living; they are aiding a family of six which in a 3 room, cardboard-lined shack with no toilet or running water to try and find a better house with at least semi-modern facilities.

These people are doing their part to help the poor, but they cannot be successful without our help. They need us...

Nixon Calm But Forceful

The "Flying Pueblo" incident has now dropped from the frontpage headlines. It is to President Nixon's credit that he met this crisis with cool calmness rather than the indecisive and pathetic stand taken by the previous administration.

Harber

Some may argue that the President's stand should have been stronger. However, in considering this issue, what better course of action could have the President taken? Let us examine some of the choices: He could have ordered several of our SAC bombers to drop nuclear bombs on the North Koreans; however, we all know the obvious consequences of this action. Perhaps we could have landed troops on the shore and established an offensive, but this didn't seem to work too well during the Harry Truman administration. Or he could have, as President Johnson did during the Pueblo crisis, done nothing at all.

The President's actions were calm but they were also firm. An article in the "Times" of London stating that North Korea feels war eminent bears this out. North Korea will certainly be giving second consideration to attacking U.S. planes and ships in the future.

Speculating on the entire rash of recent incidents by the Koreans, one cannot help but believe that the Chinese Communist are in the background pulling strings. Perhaps Chairman Mao feels that the United States will soon pull out of South Vietnam and he certainly would not have us left without a war to fight.

After all, the Communist plan in Vietnam is wonderfully clever. South Vietnam continues to have an unstable government, North Vietnam is realiving itself of any overpopulation problem it might have, and the U.S. is being drained of much of its manpower and resources.

In the opinion of this writer, President Nixon has clearly avoided another land war with an Asian mini-power and there by has, for at least a short while, thwarted the Red's plan.

Bennett, Payne Appointments

Two faculty members, Mrs. Sarah N. Bennett and G. Frederick Payne, have recently received appointments for pre-doctoral work at the University of Georgia.

Mrs. Bennett, instructor of biology, received one of four predoctoral participancies awarded by the Department of Microbiology at the University. These awards are made by the National Science Foundation in support of the summer Research Participation for College Teachers Program. The study will begin June 16 and end August 22.

Payne, who is presently an instructor in geography, has been named a recipient of a predoctoral assistantship from the University of Georgia for 1969-70. Awarded by the Institute of Higher Education at the University, the appointment will provide Payne with financial aid for one academic year. To be eligible for the assistantship, Payne had to be nominated by the president of the college and he admitted to a doctoral program at the University. The institute chooses only a limited number of candidates.

Student Teachers Total 235

Two hundred and thirty-five education majors are student teaching during spring quarter, according to Dr. Donald S. Hawk, director of student teaching in the School of Education.

Students have been assigned to primary, elementary, junior high, and senior high schools in twenty-five school systems across the state's coastal empire section. Those county systems involved this quarter are: Bryan, Bulloch, Burke, Candler, Chatham, Coffee, Effingham, Emanuel, Evans, Glynn, Jeff Davis, Jenkins, Johnson, Laurens, Liberty, Pierce, Richmond, Screven, Tattnall, Treutlen, Toombs, Ware, Waycross, Wayne, and Wheeler Counties.

Student teaching serves as the final procedure in the professional education sequence and is required before official teacher certification can be granted by the State Department of Education. The college has sent out a total of 502 student teachers during the 1968-69 fall, winter, and spring quarters.

The sisters of Sigma Alpha Iota, international professional fraternity for women in the field of music, assisted as hostesses at a reception at the home of President and Mrs. John O. Eidson Monday evening, April 7. The reception was held in honor of the Columbia College Choir after their concert in the Foy Recital Hall.

On April 3, Sigma Alpha Iota held formal initiation services for their winter quarter pledges. The new sisters are: Mitzi Anderson, piano major; Susan Beck, piano major; Alice Parker, voice major; Cynthia Farr, theory and composition major; Amelia Donahoo, voice major; Diana Henderson, piano major; Claudia Stanford, trumpet major; and Mary Sue Hodge, voice major.

Each of these girls were required to audition and attain a 3.0 average in music before being initiated.

Among numerous Sigma Alpha Iota's spring projects was a music therapy program being held at the Statesboro Nursing Home. On March 27, sisters entertained the residents at the home with various musical activities. This was the first in a series of monthly visits to the home. On April 24, the sisters plan a musical featuring vocal and instrumental soloists, and audience participation.

Future plans for programs include making of rhythm instruments for use in audience participation projects, and original skits.

Masquers Play Begins May 14

Death is never very pretty to contemplate though the circumstances surrounding the death may serve to soften the blow or make it more tragic.

In the case of Willy Loman, it is difficult to determine whether death is tragic, or a blessing in disguise. Willy lived in a dream world. A world of the past which included his happiest moments and saddest heartbreaks. Consider that Willy has, at age sixty, lost his job. The son on whom he had lavished most of his love has rejected Willy completely. Willy feels that life has already eluded him in every way except for the actuality of death itself. He also feels that in dying he will regain the stature he once enjoyed. Thus Willy Loman takes his own life.

Consider also that Willy's wife, Linda, has not been able to make Willy realize that he is loved, wanted, and needed. The day of the funeral for Willy Loman, Linda makes the last payment on the house which meant so much to him. There will be no one to share that home with Linda now.

Was the death of Willy Loman a tragedy? See "Death of a Salesman" May 14, 15, 16, and 17 in McCroan Auditorium.

Travel Hints Save Funds

As spring quarter reaches its half-way mark, many Georgia Southern students are "grinning and bearing" it through their series of smallpox, cholera, typhoid, tetanus and maybe an extra hayfever shot in preparation of their trip abroad this summer. Many of these students are experienced travelers and have no qualms planning their trip. But there are even more unexperienced travelers and these novices I would like to help with a few hints concerning transportation, money, tipping, luggage, wardrobe and personal health. Seasoned travelers might also learn something new.

To begin with, your mode of transatlantic transportation is an important decision, but not a major one; after all, you have only two alternatives. Travel by plane is faster, but more hectic. However, you can take advantage of the many charter flights and group fares and save money on your plane fare to use later. To be eligible for group fares, the student must belong to the organization or institution sponsoring the flight. Icelandic Airlines offers the lowest air fares to Northern Europe—$205 one-way and $389.50 round-trip to Luxembourg during the summer season; $167.80 one-way and $319.00 round-trip to Luxembourg during the off season.

If leisure is your guide to travel, you should travel by ship. The Council on Student Travel (777 U.N. Plaza, New York, N.Y. 10017) offers low-cost ship transportation to students traveling independently or in groups. The minimum rate for tourist accommodations on commercial liners is approximately $230 to $250 one way, during the summer season. These rates are the same on almost any ship line sailing regularly to Northern Europe.

Once on land, the alternatives for transportation increase. You may choose to ride trains, which speed to any part of Europe at cut-rate fares with your Eurailpass. This pass is an open railway ticket entitling the traveler to unlimited first-class travel in 13 European countries. The passes range from $99.00 to $200.00. The cost for a 21 day pass is $99, for one month $130, for two months $175 and $205 for three months. The Eurailpass must be bought in the United States prior to departure. Motor coaches and buses are also available. But if trains and buses either bore or frustrate you, a car is your best choice.

If you plan to tour Europe in car, contact a car agency in the United States and plan to purchase or rent a car before your departure. When renting a car, plans should be determined by length of time and distance to be traveled. Small cars such as the Citroen can be leased for three months with unlimited mileage at $360. Car rentals can also be made by the day or the week. Inexpensive new cars may be purchased at retail rates and resold at the end of 3 months for a net cost of approximately

By SILVA FUERNISS
Feature Editor

$330. Information on these rates is furnished by the U.S. National Student Association. The use of a car does provide the traveler more freedom to tour without a schedule and to discover his own Shangra-la. But remember that gasoline is expensive in Europe, the roads are often narrow and hazardous and the road signs are more than often confusing, even to the native European. However, it is your trip and the choice is entirely yours.

No matter which mode of travel suits your fancy, your financial state remains the deciding factor. Money is undoubtedly an asset when traveling. But just how much should you take? According to Traveler's Aid Association of America, take more than you need and carry it in traveler's checks, except for small change for meals and tipping. The use of traveler's checks and credit cards reduces large and inconvenient bulks of cash and decrease chances of theft. Proper identification to help cash the checks is also needed. If you need to carry a large amount of cash, keep it in different places—not all in your wallet to be seen every time you open it.

Tipping

Although you have decided on a safe place to keep your change, chances are that you won't keep it too long. Most of your small change will be used for tipping, a practice readily accepted and widespread in Europe. The usual amount to tip is fifteen to twenty percent which is given as a "light reward for services someone performed for you"—not because you consider it an obligation. If you are in doubt as to how much to tip, overtip slightly. Try always to tip in local currency. If tipping in American money, you may overtip and also cause the recipient difficulties in getting the money changed. If you are in doubt as to whom to tip, let local custom guide you. However, do not tip immigration or customs men and other governmental officials.

Luggage

Since a greater part of your change is spent on tips, learn to economize. The solution is simply. Learn to carry your own luggage and pack accordingly. Two suitcases should be sufficient and easy enough for you to carry; after all, forty pounds is the maximum weight allowed per person on any flight. I am assuming that you are flying, of course.

Wardrobe

Packing for light-weight luggage could present a problem. But careful planning, based on your needs and preferences, the climate and location of your vacation area and a little know-how of color and style coordination, should result in a lightweight and versatile wardrobe.

The nature of your trip and the activities planned will dictate your wardrobe to a great degree. An itinerary of visiting cities will require sophisticated, but simple styles. When touring the casual towns and countrysides, your clothes should harmonize with the atmosphere.

Health

So now you have chosen your destination, you have enough money (so far anyway), you won't "muff" the tipping etiquette, and your wardrobe is just perfect. Your plans sound complete—except for one thing—your health. It deserves some consideration too when traveling abroad. You shpack a few simple remedies for upset stomach, motion sickness and insomnia—the usual unpleasant trivialities that a traveler may face in his new environment.

Speakers, Activities

Keynote Address

By FRANCES EVANS
Staff Writer

The Religious Activities Committee (REACT) may well have reached a turning point in its program last week when it initiated Religious Trust in the stead of Religious Emphasis Week. By providing various speakers and activities, the Committee attempted to involve the student more and to obtain idea exchange and reaction. More innovative than the RELigious Emphasis Weeks of the past, the Thrust may improve on their value.

To start Thrust off, Dr. Vinson Synan of Emmanuel College spoke at a reception during College Life Sunday night. Showing some slides taken during a recent trip to Chile, Dr. Synan discussed Pentecostalism, the fastest-growing religious movement in South America and an apparently important combatant of communism in these countries. While refreshments were served, Dr. Synan talked with students and played his guitar.

Dr. Synan and Rabbi Harold Gelfman of Beth Israel Temple in Macon were present at a luncheon in Landrum Center Monday. Both made visits to history classes during the day. Rabbi Gelfman mentioned the disproportionate Jewish contribution to science and education and cited the Jewish emphasis on family for this achievement. The availability of books in Jewish homes, a good atmosphere in the home for asking questions and seeking answers to them, and the involvement of the whole family in religious activities are very important factors.

Dr. Synan discussed three twentieth century developments in religious thought: the replacement of the Protestant, Anglo-Saxon immigrant by the southern European immigrant, who was predominantly Jewish and Catholic, between 1890 and the 1920's, the attempt of some groups to meet the intellectual challenge to religion with the "social gospel," and the rise in the early twentieth century of Pentecostalism and Holiness groups, whose rapid spread is due in part to the vitality and enthusiasm of their faith and witness.

Dorm discussions, in which Rabbi Gelfman, faculty members, and campus ministers participated, were carried on at night. At one such discussion in Cone Hall Thursday night, problems about registration, fee hikes, and the church's influence today were brought up. It was decided that God's influence in a person's life can give

The Freshman Council recently established several committees. The committees are as follows: By Laws, Susan Elkins, Mike Norton, and Carol Herndon; Financial Committee, Tommy Smith, Wayne Buffington, Freddie Dubberly; Freshman Orientation, Kay Musselwhite, Mike Norton, and Patricia Burkett; Spring Swing, Lillie Ng, Tomy McElheny, and Helen Gunn.

These committees are composed of two council members and an executive officer. Members of the freshman class at large will be appointed to these committees later.

Chaplains Ronald Wilkins and Chappell Wilson led a discussion Tuesday night on religion and mental health and talked about human problems which religion can help.

Composed of Dr. Justine Mann, Dr. Patrick Spurgeon, Dr. Norman Wells, Martha Must, and Max Buffington, and having Jack McGuire as moderator, a student-faculty panel discussed student-faculty rights and responsibilities Wednesday night. Dr. Spurgeon said responsibility should be shown before rights were given. He saw a lack of responsibility on the parts of both students and faculty. Dr. Mann felt that our educational methods are not working because we do not realize that we may have as little as 15 years instead of unlimited time to solve our problems or see mankind destroyed. She felt the lecture method, used when there was a lack of books, is outdated; she felt was need to be innovative. Max Buffington felt that the education provided at Georgia Southern is not relevant to the needs of the student and society. Martha Must suggested a student-faculty forum, in which faculty and students could discuss their problems.

Fred Payne, chairman of the Religious Activities Committee, has this to say: "...I feel that the Committee has made a giant step forward...I feel that the Thrust we have just completed should illustrate the variety of activities which might be undertaken and should suggest other opportunities which are open to us. Religious ideas can help to make better men of good students and can provide a purposeful challenge in the lives of all men."

Nitpicking Impedes Progress

The present constitution does not express the ruling of an occurrence when a class officer changes

PIERCE

Thomas should be weighted with his dedication. A person who is an undergraduate student; however, should not be subjected to such a rule if it should be passed.

The SAGC constitution is only one year old and must be given a chance to straighten itself out. Working on major problems such as Housing would slow the effectiveness of the constitution as well as demost rating maturity of government members. Nitpicking by dissident members only impedes the governmental processes and does nothing to help the students.

Association of Governing Council meeting experienced such descent, as well as confusion, when four members of the organization walked out.

It was the intentions of those who walked out to upset the quorum for voting that evening. The action however, had been fermenting for quite some time.

In the constitution of the SAGC it is stated a member of SAGC will be dismissed from office if that member should neglect to attend two consecutive meetings or a total of three in the quarter. Last fall an SAGC member failed to attend two consecutive meetings and he was consequently dismissed. The ability of the SAGC to dismiss a class officer is stated in its constitution. It's interpretation; however, was the major reason for the walkout.

Rod Thomas, senior class president, interpreted the constitution to mean that a class officer would still remain in his class office even though he were dismissed from his SAGC representation. To do so, however, would actually mean no representation to that class. A class officer functions effectively for his class in his membership of the SAGC.

The walkout created a disipation in the quorum voting. The progress of the meeting was impeded until another member came in to restore quorum. Some of the articles were then voted upon and they were either tabled or voted affirmative. A meeting was then called for the following Monday for the purpose of discussing (1) the legality of Rod Thomas as president of senior class since he is supposedly a graduate student, and (2) challenge the position of Ron Cail and Max Buffington to their newly elected positions of junior class president and senior class vice president, respectively.

It is reported that there was a misrepresentation in the election of Cail and Buffington. Only 12 people attended the nomination and election of Cail. A similar number attended the senior class meeting which had little publicity. The opportunity to vote was neglected and a number such as 12 is a gross misrepresentation. In all fairness to Buffington and Cail were acting faithfully and were ready to serve their classes.

A motion was carried that the junior president and senior class vice president elections be invalidated. A meeting would now be needed to nominate someone for those offices and a one week notice is in order.

The legality of Rod Thomas as the senior class president representative was the second concern of the April 21 meeting. A referendum must be presented, as well as the SAGC affirmation of this article, that a graduate student cannot hold any class office position.

Yale Removes ROTC Credit

NEW HAVEN, Conn.-(I.P.)-The Yale College faculty recently voted to remove academic credit from the Army and Navy Reserve Officers Training Corps program and proposed that ROTC be given the status of extra-curricular activities.

The two ROTC commanding officers at Yale, Colonel Richard R. Irving, of the Army unit, and Captain Williams E. Simmons, of the Navy, have expressed concern about the future of ROTC enrollment possibly to a point where the Department of Defense would not consider it worthwhile to continue units in Yale.

Another issue is whether ROTC can continue legally without academic credits. Federal regulations call for "appropriate academic credit" from the colleges and universities where ROTC units are based.

Many feel, however, that a compromise can be worked out.

ATHLETES FACE IMAGE PROBLEM

A perennial problems confronts collegiate athletes, particularly those on scholarship to a given college. The problem is that of image.

The question of the importance of image, and the differing interpretations that athletes on the one hand and coaches and other athletes department officials on the other, variously put on image is the cause of increasing friction between what should be two complementary parts.

(I wish here to say that, at the moment anyway, I am discussing this topic in only the most general terms and that the views I will try to present do not refer specifically to Georgia Southern. In fact it might be noted that Georgia Southern is so far pretty well free of the conflicts which I know the differing interpretations on image is bringing about in the other colleges and universities I have visited between Louisiana and Virginia.)

Let us examine the image that the coach - and the general public also - has of the athlete. To both the coach and the public, the athlete has to be an escetic, giving up all the joys and pleasures that a normal individual relishes in. The athlete typically must dress conservatively (light gray trousers, a dark blazer, white shirt and modest tie are almost uniform). The athlete must wear his hair close-cropped with a definite preference for crew-cuts. His sideburns must be lopped meticulously at the cheekbone and, of course, beards are quite out of the question.

Any major divergence from this straight and narrow path brings down upon the offender the wrath of coach of athletic department and leaves the man in the street a confused observer.

But today we are coming into a new age of thinking - probably, we have already arrived and, if Georgia is somewhat behind the times, the change is no less inevitable.

The athlete today is no longer prepared to conform to a stylised pattern of dress or behaviour. To get to the top in a major sport, he now has to give years of his life and his endeavours with often little or no fiscal reward. This develops in him a recklessness in regard to what people think of him and a consequent drive to "do his own thing."

Herein the conflict is born.

The coach, who is usually much older than the athlete and therefore less amenable and appreciable of change, expects the athlete to conform to the same pattern or image to which he (the coach) is accustomed. The athlete places no value on the coach's demand that the athlete conform to an accepted image. The athlete attempts to go his own way, "do his own thing." The coach disapproves. The friction begins.

Particularly is this true of the American college today where black athletes are being caught up in the rising tide of black nationalism. Black athletes have a cause, and there aren't too many of those left. The black athlete is hardly amenable to orders to modify his distinctive dress or to get his hair cut, particularly when the overwhelming majority of the coaches are white and are thus the very basis of the cause.

But the white athlete, too, has his cause - certainly not as vital a cause nor hardly as righteous, but a cause nevertheless. He is looking for personal identity, which is the modern-day trend. Today's thinking exalts the individual, pushes the group into the background.

A thinking person today, no less an athlete, has a burning drive to register himself to other people as an individual where his father considered it necessary to be part of a group with a group image.

Today's athlete no longer accepts that he should conform to the image people entertain of athletes. He is interested only in his own personal image. The supplication that "it's bad for the school image to compete with your hair like that or attend meets wearing clothes like that" no longer holds any water for him.

He is proud of his individuality. If his school is not proud of him, then the school can go to pot but no change will be inflicted upon his individuality merely for the sake of averting the danger of the school's image being impaired.

This is the conflict that exists in the more liberal schools of American, is almost inevitable in the ones that are lagging and, in the fullness of time, may even reach Georgia Southern.

The conflict might well be titled "The Athlete's Revolution" and, as might be expected, is being headed by individuals for whom sport is a profession.

It is in the nature of things that ultimately the athlete will acquire the new individuality image he is presently beginning to pursue so determinedly. The transformation period will be a difficult one for the old guard, however.

VARIED SUCCESSES IN GSC BASEBALL

The three games the Eagles baseball team played last week, all against Eastern Kentucky, resulted in a mediocre 1-2 record for the week and brought the season record so far up to 17-11. But it would be wrong to think that last week was anything but a memorable one for the baseball fans at Georgia Southern.

What made it so good, despite the fact that the team lost more games than it won, was Richard Chard's superb grand slam home run in the first loss to Eastern Kentucky.

The Eagles were down 5-1 at the time and looked as if they were out of the game when Chard, the pitcher, stepped up after two men had been put out and the bases were loaded and belted it over the fence.

This brought the Eagles up to a tie but they still lost 6-5.

It is worth nothing that both those plays which baseballers dream of, the grand to East Ky.

On the Tuesday (April 12), the Eagles lost to Eastern Kentucky 6-4, the second loss in two days.

Eastern Kentucky got two early runs, but Monty Tillman and Jim Vertzer knocked in Rod Michele and Tom Arden to tie the score at 2-2 after three innings.

Eastern Kentucky picked up four late runs and led 6-2 going into the bottom of the ninth.

Rod Michele and Monty Tillman scored in the ninth, but John Lynch popped up to end the rally.

Tom Arden took the loss and the Eagles' record fell to 16 wins and 11 losses.

Herbie Hutson pitched the Eagles to a 2-1 win on the Wednesday night at Eagle Field.

Hutson hurled five scoreless innings before allowing Eastern Kentucky their first and only run in the sixth.

He allowed three hits in the shaky inning, but held them to the single run.

Southern picked up two runs in the bottom of the sixth frame on Monty Tillman's base hit and Tom Brown's walk.

Hutson fanned nine batters and made the weak score of 2-1 hold up for the remainder of the game.

The win ran the Eagles' record to 17-11 for the season.

Richard Chard hit a grand slam homer in the 6-5 loss to Eastern Kentucky last Monday night.

Eastern Kentucky grabbed a 5-1 lead early in the game and held it for 8½ innings, but the ninth was a historical frame in G.S.C. baseball.

Jim Wilks led the ninth with a single and Ron Dawthorn made an out.

Pete Whitfield then got a walk to put two Eagles on the sacks.

Carey Shea hit a line drive to left field to load the bases.

The Eagle fans went wild and gave him a standing ovation as he crossed the plate for the tying run.

The Eagles eventually lost the game in the 13th inning, but the game will long be

Miss Boom-Boom Richardson of Sigma Pi Fraternity was selected as Miss Spring Blossom winner at last week's contest.

How A Rally Really Works

EDITOR'S NOTE

Recently several groups and clubs in the Statesboro district have planned or held car rallies. To familiarize students with the meaning of a "rally", Mr. Hew Joiner of the History Department has written this article for the George-Anne.

"What is a rally, anyway? A race?"

This simply has to be the question the rally enthusiast hears most often from members of the general public, and said member of the public always looks very confused when the answer he gets is, "No," picture which goes something like this: small car, with a name sounding like Folleza or Cacciattori, with numbers on the side, careening wildly down a dusty road; driver, who looks rather like Gilbert Roland, gritting his teeth in fierce concentration; in the other seat, a navigator, who also looks like Gilbert Roland, but not quite so much, leaning out the window, beating on the side of the car, and shouting things like "Ole" and "Avanti!"

To this extent has the public mind been corrupted by Hollywood.

REAL IDEA

In Europe, where there are no speed limits on open highways, rallies are rather like that sometimes.

But had you seen Mrs. Connie Schafer of Statesboro wending her way to a trophy in the Spring Rally held by the Ogeechee Sports and Touring Car Club last rallying in trophy in the Spring Rally held by the Ogeechee Sports and Touring Car Club last Sunday, you would have got a much better impression of what rallying in Mrs. Schafer drove a red Volkswagen bus; her navigator was here nine-year old daughter, Lee.

Neither Lee nor her mother wore a fancy driving suit or a crash helmet; such things aren't needed on a rally.

Connie and Lee Schafer won their trophies by doing well the things one is

Connie and Lee Schafer won their trophies by doing well the things one is Speeding and driving on the ragged edge of tire adhesion were definitely not necessary or even desirable.

GIVEN DISTANCE

General opinion to the contrary, a rally is different in its fundamental concept from a race.

A race involves covering a given distance in the shortest possible time, over a known route.

The rallyist does not know when he starts just where he will be going; an important part of the rally involves following correctly the route instructions provided by the rally organizers, in order to stay on the proper course.

At the same time the rallyist must try to maintain a certain average speed at all times; this speed is always well within legal limits.

If the route planned by the organizers is 75 miles in length, the ideal would find the rallyist at the end of the event with precisely 75 miles recorded on his car's odometer.

If a greater distance is recorded, it shows that the crew has not been able to stay on the arranged course without deviating.

AVERAGE SPEED

But at the same time rallyists have to try to hold an average speed given them by the organizers of the event.

At some point, unknown to the participants, the rally officials will stop the rally cars and note their times of arrival.

This time allows the officials to compute the average speed of the cars at that point.

If the required average was 30 miles per hour, then a driver who has averaged 29 miles per hour will score higher than one who has averaged 35 miles per hour.

A rally sets no premium on outright speed, and usually a driver who has gone above the set average is penalized more heavily than one who is below it.

Thus rallying is not a sport in which fiery temperament and a heavy foot can be considered virtues.

Instead it is the calm, the cool, and the observant who do well.

Because they exhibited these characteristics in exemplary fashion, Connie and Lee Schafer went home with trophies on Sunday.

The trophies in the men's division went to Hew Joiner and Aurelien Theriault, both professors at GSC, in an Austin-Healey Sprite.

EXCITING

In spite of the absence of pure speed as a factor, rallying is both exciting and highly competitive.

The seasoned rallyist has had to learn the importance of small details, like avoiding any spinning of the driving wheels, which throws off the odometer reading.

Since the scoring is frequently very close, attention to such small points can be important.

For any who feel they might like to try the sport of rally driving, the Ogeechee Sports and Touring Car Club has two events planned for May.

The first will be a daytime rally to be held on Sunday, May 18.

The second is to be the club's first annual Walpur gisnachtsrallye—a night event—which will be held on Friday, May 23.

Any type of car is welcome, no special equipment required, and all licensed drivers are cordially invited to participate.

NEW FITNESS CLUB FORMED AT GSC

A joggers' club, to be known as the GSC Hundred-Mile Club, is shortly to be instituted at Georgia Southern.

Started with the approval and blessing of the Athletic Department and the Intramurals Association, the club will be organized on a strictly informal basis by members of the track team with the aim of giving tangible incentive to all sections of the college community to get out and jog for better health and fitness.

Fifty-Mile run Scheduled.....

The club is the brainchild of Joe Williams, a member of last fall's winning cross-country team.

Williams' idea is for a club that will "promote jogging and running as a means to greater fitness among all sections of the college community at Georgia Southern."

It is expected that the cross-country and track teams might possibly benefit from an increase in membership as an indirect result of the scheme but this is only a secondary consideration.

INDEPENDENT

The organization is visualized as being an independent club within Georgia Southern and open to anyone—faculty and staff included—interested in joining.

The way the club will be organized will be along strictly informal lines.

It is proposed that each member will be issued a membership card and a list of selected courses, ranging from one to 10 miles for variety, on the payment of the membership subscription of $1.

The money will go towards the defraying of stationery expenses and towards the provision of the various incentive awards and certificates which are planned.

Members, in their own time, will run over the selected, measured courses and will subsequently turn in a weekly "Mileage Report" stating what courses they ran on what days of the preceding week.

Members will then be credited with the number of miles attributable to the respective courses and will be given a progress report each month as the weekly totals are tallied.

The members' signature appended to the weekly report will be taken as proof of the members' having covered the distance.

AWARDS

A system of awards and certificates as an incentive has been devised.

Awards will be made to the first member in each of the sections listed below who is the first to cover distances of 100 miles, 250 miles, etc. (hence the name of the club).

Each member who, after a time, covers any of the designated distances will be presented with a certificate of achievement at the completion of each.

For variety's sake, a large number of courses will be mapped out.

There are seven sections presently proposed.

They are: men under 30; men over 30; women; fraternity men; sorority women; non-fraternity men; non-sorority women.

Thus, one particular runner might be eligible for more than one award.

INFORMALITY

It is expected that the club should hold considerable attraction to those who would prefer to run on their own or in small groups as there will be no specific time at which a 50-odd miles in about seven hours—if he makes it at all.

The run is being organized under the auspices of the GSC Athletic Department which will provide the college station wagon to accompany de Lacy on the run and meet other expenses.

Like the Hundred-Mile Club itself, the run is the idea of Joe Williams, and sophomore physical education major from Taylorsville, Georgia, and a member of Phi Epsilon Kappa.

Williams is the organizer of the run and he will receive assistance in this office from person will be required to run.

Further, there will be no demand on members to attend meetings of any description and all expenses are expected to be met with the $1 annual subscription.

The club is expected to be put into operation about the second week of May when a protracted drive for membership is planned.

A 50-mile run, from Statesboro to Savannah, is planned as part of the publicity campaign for the new GSC Hundred-Mile Club.

Hugh de Lacy, a New Zealander studying at Georgia Southern and the number one runner on the fall cross-country team, will attempt the run on Saturday, May 17.

He expects to cover the the GSC athletic trainer Mickey Cobb who is expected to be along on the run.

An endurance effort of this sort will be something completely new to de Lacy. He once ran 32 miles in one day but that was accidental, not a premeditated attempt.

His main credential is the marathon-style training he did as a build-up to the present track season.

It was on the strength of this, and the fact that he will probably have only two races this track season instead of the large number he anticipated, that he was persuaded to the run.

POWERFUL FOREHAND

GSC's Tommy MacDougall lets loose with a powerful forehand smash in a recent home game.

Win Over Auburn Bolsters Record of Tennis Teams

By J. BEN WILLIAMS

A recent win against powerful Auburn has bolstered the tennis season record so far to 6-5.

Other wins have come against St. Leo, Tampa, William and Mary, Valdosta and Appalachian State.

Two of the five losses were close ones to Jacksonville

University and Columbus College.

If it had not been for rain and bad weather the record would probably be 9-5 with wins over Emory, Oglethorpe and Columbus.

These matches had to be cancelled because of bad weather or otherwise would almost certainly have been registered as wins.

The doubles, which, with the exception of the Resi brothers Bob and Jim, had been the team's weak point before, now seems to be coming right.

The doubles pairings, except for the Resis, have been successfully rearranged.

The number two doubles combination is now made up of Phil Sapp, from Brunswick, and Monte Humphrey from Williamsburg, Va.

Rounding out the team as the third doubles combination are Eddie Russell from Statesboro and Tom MacDougall from Bainbridge, Ga.

The last report in the George-Anne incorrectly attributed two extra losses to the team.

These losses to Wingate Junior College were, in fact, sustained by the B team while the Varsity was dispatching William and Mary.

The next tennis match is against Columbus next Tuesday (April 29).

In addition to this, the Resi brothers will be in the Georgia Intercollegiate Championship at Athens this weekend.

Hanner Annex Site For Sports Camp

One of the first major uses to which the new annex to the Hanner Gym will be put will be in holding the first-ever Southeast Sports Camp here, for boys aged 11 through 18, from June 8 through 28.

The camp will cover activities in four sports: basketball, baseball, gymnastics and tennis.

The gymnastic room in the Hanner Annex will be the site of the activities in this sport throughout the three weeks and all the boys attending will have the use of the new Olympic-size swimming pool in the annex.

The gymnastic room in the new annex is 90' x 65' with complete rubberized flooring and equipped with two complete sets of apparatus.

Crash pads and overhead rigging are extra features of the gymnastic room.

Georgia Southern staff will conduct all the activities with the help of a number of visiting high school and college coaches.

Coach J. E. Rowe will conduct the basketball, Coach Bill Spieth the baseball, Coach Ron Oertley the gymnastics (along with GSC assistant coaches Hutch Dvorak and Paul Mayer) and Dr. Frank Ramsey will be in charge of the tennis.

The participants will be able to live on the GSC campus throughout or may attend as day students.
