Journal of Curriculum and Instruction (JoCI)

Rationale - Access

- Concern about commercialization and limited access of scholarly information.
- Amount of research and scholarly information increasing yet libraries have reductions in journal subscriptions, limiting the broad dissemination of research (Beach et al., 2007).

Journal of Curriculum and Instruction (JoCI)

Rationale - Costs

- Increasing journal prices and merging of publishing companies.
- Major publishers “bundling” subscriptions, resulting in higher prices and more limited choice in terms of journal subscriptions (Beach et al.).

Journal of Curriculum and Instruction (JoCI)

Solution: New methods of online dissemination and access

- Resources such as the ERIC database, Google Scholar, and Google Books.
- Non-traditional formats such as open-access journals provide more consumers with immediate, free access to scholarly information on a global scale.

Journal of Curriculum and Instruction (JoCI)

JoCI's Purpose

To provide a forum for researchers to publish in a peer-reviewed open-access journal in order to make research more accessible to the public, thereby maximizing the impact of research on a global scale.

Open Journal Systems

"Scholars need the means to launch a new generation of journals committed to open access, and to help existing journals that elect to make the transition to open access..."
Budapest Open Access Initiative, 2002

Open Journal Systems (OJS) is a journal management and publishing system that has been developed by the Public Knowledge Project through its federally funded efforts to expand and improve access to research.

OJS Features

1. OJS is installed locally and locally controlled.
2. Editors configure requirements, sections, review process, etc.
