Weekly Buzz

As you all probably know by now, the University Programming Board and Office of Student Activities are bringing T-Pain to Georgia Southern for a concert. This concert will take place at Hanner Fieldhouse on April 15, and tickets will be for sale at $10 for each student starting today at noon.

“We are excited for this concert because it's our first concert since the Migos concert in 2015, and we have always been wanting to look forward to a new concert and a new venture, and have someone that's known come to campus,” said JaQuaylon Taylor, a UPB member.

Some other activities coming up that Taylor is excited for include the Mr. Georgia Southern Scholarship Competition on April 7 and the Southern Splash event on April 8. More information can be found on their instagram @gsupb or on Eagle Engage.

Discover an oasis in the heart of Georgia Southern's campus

I left my last class of the day in a frenzy as I desperately needed to breathe in fresh air and look at something other than a textbook. A serene environment made up of luscious greenery and calming sounds of birds chirping and water splashing was exactly what I needed, and I found it.

Hulu has been dropping new shows left and right, and "The Dropout" is one of their newer releases all about fraud, with Amanda Seyfried playing Elizabeth Holmes.

Holmes created the biotechnology company, Theranos, but the science just doesn't add up. All eight episodes are out and available to watch on Hulu for you to find out just how she deceived Silicon Valley.
