Black students marched to the steps of the administration building where they discussed with President Dale Lick, among other things, shortage of black teachers at GSC and implementation of a celebration of

Dr. Martin Luther King's birthday. Lick told Billy Hightower, Black Student Association president, that a celebration would take place next year. Lick called King "braver than any of us would have been."

Blacks list grievances in 'King's Day' rally

By MIKE KILPATRICK

A group of concerned black students met with President Dale Lick on the steps of the campus Administration Building Tuesday, Jan. 15, to discuss issues of importance to the black student body.

Approximately 50 students met with Lick to discuss the lack of Black faculty members, the implementation of a celebration of Dr. Martin Luther King's birthday, and the shortage of Black study aids in the library and on campus.

According to Lick, the school has tried to hire Black leaders.

"The reason is no Black teachers are at GSC is because of a racial issue in Statesboro. The prospective teachers can't find adequate housing," said Billy Hightower, president of the Black Student Association.

"The school is working with the community to help them accept these new teachers and make them feel comfortable in the town," said Lick.

"This will take a long period of time; it will not happen over a few years," said Lick.

Lick told the students that they can help by identifying any Black community leaders that would be of service to the college.

"We're trying to get the word to as many people as possible that we need help," said Lick.

The students also voiced the concern over the recognition of Dr. Martin Luther King's birthday.

Hightower, after meeting with Lick, said that next year a celebration marking

Dr. King's birthday will go into effect.

"I would like to see a celebration every year on campus," said Lick. "He is the greatest man we have seen. He was braver than any one of us would have been."

According to Hightower, the college has received an endowment to be used to equip the school library with Black visual aids.

Students' cars burglarized; Statesboro man in custody

By KEN BUCHANAN

A Statesboro man has been charged with five counts of entering an automobile to commit a theft after being arrested by GSC Campus Security, according to Chief of Security Harold Howell.

GBI agents not registered here

By TAL WRIGHT and KEN BUCHANAN

Two GBI agents who conducted the 3½ month investigation which culminated in the arrest of 11 GSC students last week were not officially registered in the school, according to President Dale Lick.

GBI Agent Tom McGreevy confirmed Friday that the agents only posed as students and were never actually enrolled here. McGreevy had earlier stated that the agents "attended classes, got good grades, and completed the quarter," but explained Friday that he had been "badly misinformed" by his own people.

Lick also admitted that he himself decided "some time in spring or very early summer quarter of last year" to call in GBI agents for the purpose of "investigating to learn the depth of the problem here," after discussing the matter with Campus Security Chief Harold Howell and an undisclosed school official "in a position of leadership in the student affairs department."

Dean of Students John Nolen said of Lick's statement, "Of course, Mr. Waller was in that position last year," referring to Ben Waller, retired dean of students. Waller, however, would not confirm that he had discussed the investigation with the president, saying that Lick would have to reveal that information if he decided to do so.

Nolen reaffirmed that he knew nothing of the investigation until the week before the raid when Campus Security informed him of it.

The dean of students added that "in order to really understand the whole thing, it is necessary to take it out of the context of a drug raid and look at it as a violation of the law.

"When there is a serious violation of any kind, I think that I have a responsibility to the student body as a whole to do something about it," he said.

Lick claimed that there was no evidence of a major drug problem on campus but that "I would be blind to say that no problem exists."

Mathis favors registration

"I do not feel at this time that reinstating the draft is necessary," said Dawson Mathis, U.S. representative from Georgia's second district, during a lecture here on Jan. 16.

Considering the situation in Iran and Afghanistan, Mathis said he did, however, favor some system of registration for the draft.

"I sincerely hope reinstating the draft does not happen," said Mathis, "but it may be necessary to do so in the future."

The energy crisis in America is "real," claimed Mathis, who is running for Talmadge's seat in the 1980 senate race. "The times of cheap energy, in terms of fossil fuel, are behind us," he added.

"I think the President is wrong in the decontrol of gas prices," commented Mathis. He said America has two choices: to leave the oil in the ground or to allow a government takeover of the oil.

"There is absolutely no competition," Mathis said. "If there was, it could mean lower taxes and a better allocation of the supply."

Mathis said for the U.S. to continue with the same energy policy would be "stupid." He said two alternatives would be "to maximize every productive capability we have in the U.S. and to develop alternate energy sources."

It is not going to be easy to achieve a more efficient economy, according to Mathis. He also said he was not satisfied with the amount of information distributed by the Department of Energy.

"There is not an agency in Washington that does not have fat on it," said Mathis. He said the only way to decrease the budget deficit of $30 million a year is to "raise taxes or quit spending."

He added, "We have a national debt of $840 billion. If anyone should be excited and up-in-arms about it, it is you, college students. You are going to inherit the debt."

On the 1980 presidential election, Mathis said, "Jimmy Carter is the candidate I am supporting. Kennedy has a strong following, but I think after the primaries, the Democratic party will coalesce behind Carter."

Mathis ended his speech by encouraging students to offer support to the candidate of their choice. He urged students to get involved in the system.

Mis-impressions

In all the excitement of the past week, one very significant point seems to have been, for the most part, ignored. The drug raid was not a GSC event, it was a Bulloch County raid. Unfortunately, the fact that the agents posed as students at the college has left most bystanders with the impression that the investigation was campus-oriented rather than a country-wide probe.

The facts, however, clearly dispute that impression. Only 11 arrests, less than one-third of the total, were GSC students. And these arrests were made after an extensive three-months investigation by two, we assume, competent professionals.

The 11 arrests on a campus of more than 6,500 do not a den of iniquity make.

No room for spies

The alarming report that two undercover agents were allowed by school officials to register for classes at GSC has happily proven erroneous.

President Dale Lick informed the George-Anne Wednesday of last week that the agents in fact did not register officially here. Also, Agent Tom McGreevy of the Atlanta office of the FBI called the G-A to apologize for his misinformation and to confirm that the agents did not register for classes, but simply posed as students.

The George-Anne, while recognizing the necessity of detecting and arresting violators of any law, at the same time would not find it easy to condone the admission of two students for any purpose other than that of gaining an education.

After all, the parking lots and classrooms are crowded enough already.

Bad timing

The bill to raise the legal drinking age in Georgia from 18 to 21 is poorly timed.

At the same time that legislators are debating this bill, war clouds are gathering and it seems inevitable that the compulsory draft laws will soon be reinstated. When the law was changed just a few years ago, a popular battle-cry was "If you're old enough to fight, you're old enough to drink."

We agree and feel that a perfect solution to the problem would be to tie the legal drinking age permanently to the draft age. Then, if legislators feel that the drinking age should be 21, we would agree completely.

If 18-year-olds are too young to drink, they are certainly too young to die in battle.

No winners in acts of Russian aggression

The recent Russian invasion of Afghanistan coupled with the events in Iran have turned a rather lackluster world picture into a calamity of increasingly dangerous proportions.

For three months now, the international community has moved blindly along the stepping stones toward a war with no logical causes. The fanaticism displayed in Iran and the exploitation of the situation by the Soviets seems to be railroading United States into a conflict in which there can be no winners.

It seems pretty clear by their actions that the Soviets have placed very little significance on whether the Senate ratifies the SALT II treaty. Their present policies imply that the treaty would have had little impact on their arms buildup and that a warm water port on the Persian Gulf would be of much more benefit to them. It is this type of treacherous dealings that has characterized the Russians since the post World War II era.

In light of the recent Soviet intervention in Afghanistan, the Russians seem oblivious to the fact that they could plunge this planet into a possibly fatal world war. Suddenly, mothers are worried about their sons going to war halfway across the world again, and proms, graduation and Sunday dinners aren't as important anymore...Of course, it's not that bad yet, but it could be.

Throughout these developments, the United Nations has shown a helplessness and an inability that wasn't existent during the Korean War years. Although this conflict was officially termed a "police action" the U.N. at that time displayed a common willingness to combat outlaw actions by any belligerent, regardless of size. The modern day U.N. has fallen short of international expectations jam. Here's the plot: a peanut farmer from Sumter global pirates while Ivan the Bear tries to gobble up another helpless victim somewhere in the desert. Fantasy Island it's not.

Whatever happens in Afghanistan, let us not forget the outrageous seizure of American citizens in Teheran. This outright disregard of international law has been perpetrated by a rabble of religious fanatics whose leader is a figure directly out of the

"The modern day U.N. has fallen short of international expectations..."

by its hesitancy to react to the Iranian crises and to Russian interference in Afghanistan. This inadequacy should not go unnoticed if the present situation is successfully alleviated. The United Nations should be more than just a building painted on souvenir ashtrays.

A bright spot in all of this madness has been the role of Jimmy Carter in his dealings with unpredictable Iranians and the rest of the present world traffic

Dark Ages. When the Iranian situation is finally settled, hopefully with the safe release of the hostages, proper measures should be taken to insure that such an act can never occur again, whether in Iran or any other country.

The deadly chess game continues on a daily basis. Undoubtedly, the stalemate will be broken, but due to what costly move and at what price, that phase of the game remains to be played. Good night Frank.

More about space heaters

DEAR EDITOR:

Not having an electric space heater, and not being "the administration," I nevertheless respond to Steve Harris' letter on those wasteful professors using all those millions of kilowatt hours. Why does Mr. Harris assume that those heaters were being used when it was already 68 degrees?

In Newton it is never 68 degrees except for those fleeting moments of violent temperature swings as it heads down to 50 degrees and up to 80 and beyond. Mr. Harris harbors the quaint notion that we set our thermostats on 68 degrees and our heating system produces 68 degrees. Hah! There is no causal connection between our thermostats and inside heat, nor is there a connection between our system running or not running with outside temperatures. Our heating system does not "come on," it is "turned on."

We ran a typical cycle this week. On Monday it was cold outside and evermore cold inside. Of course it was. The heating system had not been turned on. No problem. By the time classes were over Monday afternoon the heat was on. Boy, was it on! It would have comfortably seen us through another glacial age. By Tuesday the weather was warming. It grew warmer and warmer outside, and hotter and hotter inside. The heat ran on. That's right, Mr. Harris, how many of those evil little electric heaters would it take to equal this kind of energy waste? By Wednesday, even warmer outside, it's not 68 in Newton, it's close to 80—and the heat ran on. It's Thursday now, it's past 80 degrees in here, we have the windows open, but no one's cut off the heating system. But it will work out like it always does. Our heat will be cut off—just in time for the next cold spell. Nothing new, that's the way it's always worked.

Now, don't give me that cheap shot talk, I think he's earned it fair and square. To Mr. Harris, the Ward Award for Worst Analogy of the Year for his ability to see similarity between sitting at a desk and working in a lumber yard. It's good to see higher education in action.

Can rule be enforced

DEAR EDITOR:

Thank you for "Tow Away Zone." But, with all due respect to security, how can a rule be enforced when signs are removed?

As a resident of Sanford Hall, I have seen security enforce this rule vehemently for a week. One car was almost towed away and two or three were ticketed.

Then, after a week of a well-done job someone came in and removed the restriction sign. After a full week this sign has not been replaced.

I'm sure security has come through Sanford parking lot at least once this week, or they should have.

Please, as one who is unable to drive due to a handicap (visual) of my own, believe me, every little bit of help given to handicapped people is appreciated.

Gripping about food - again

DEAR EDITOR:

I'm really angry. I've just finished eating what barely passes for food down at Sarah's Place in the student center. I did so because the Landrum Center was unapproachable at 5 p.m. and again at 6. The lines for dinner were out the doors by the bookstore.

Therefore, I was forced to eat at Sarah's or nowhere because—surprise!—the Williams Dining Hall is closed.

This is my first quarter back at GSC and one of the reasons I returned was because I thought I could eat somewhere a little less impersonal than Landrum.

And eat something cooked. Maybe something besides stale meat and crackers. But no.

It seems our choice of dining halls has been limited on short notice and with little prior indication that this limitation would take place.

I certainly wasn't informed Williams was to be closed next either before or as I bought my meal plan. In fact, the Winter Quarter dining schedule I saw for Williams Center led me to believe that it would be operating.

I and others I've talked to wouldn't have bought a meal plan at all if we'd known about the closing. Chalk one up to shrewd business practices. Very clever, Food Services.

Is it possible that the renovation of the old snack bar has cost us the use of the Williams Dining Hall? I'm sure a lot of those gummy sandwiches will have to be sold to pay for it. If we have been squeezed out of Williams and into Sarah's, it's a poor exchange.

It's been rumored that lack of student working help was a major factor leading to the Williams closing. But by forcing one to Landrum or (ugh!!) Sarah's, the Food Services has created a situation that makes the staff of both those places inadequate to handle properly the increase in students using them.

Landrum looks unsanitary, and Sarah's isn't able to keep the shelves stocked. Thanks a lot, Bill May. It's our own nasty little Catch

But what is even more disgusting than trying to digest Sarah's "food" is the fact that we've been robbed of the right to choose by the "powers that be." May they be doomed as we have to an eternity in line at Landrum or, even worse, force-feeding at Sarah's.

Homecoming:

A female to reign at GSC once again

By PAT OLIVER

The 1980 homecoming celebration will feature class reunions, an alumni awards luncheon, a student parade, a concert, and a basketball game, all of which will bring GSC alumni back to the campus for Friday, Jan. 25 and Saturday, Jan. 26.

The parade, which will feature floats, animated characters, clowns, and crazy cars, will begin at 10 a.m. Saturday at the Hanner parking lot and will follow a route through the heart of downtown Statesboro. All entries in the parade are made by various campus organizations.

Other student activities include the crowning of the homecoming queen at half-time of the GSC-Murray State (Ky) basketball game Saturday afternoon and a Thursday night concert featuring Glenn Phillips.

The Art League will sponsor an art exhibit at the Alumni House beginning at 10 a.m. Saturday. Exhibits will be for sale.

Also, Kappa Alpha Psi Fraternity will sponsor a dance Friday night, and Delta Sigma Theta Sorority will host a Greek show Saturday.

Class reunions will highlight alumni activities on Friday. The 1922-1935 and 1936-1942 reunions will be held at the Forest Heights Country Club. The 1946-1960 class reunion will be at Mrs. Bryant's Kitchen, and the 1961-1979 reunion will be at the Alumni House.

Other key events for alumni include the annual alumni meeting and breakfast, the awards luncheon, and the Letterman's Dinner and Business Meeting, all scheduled for Saturday. A special reception for the 1906 society will also be held.

Homecoming festivities will conclude on Saturday night with a dance featuring Charlie Brown's Disco Band.

"We are planning a full weekend for our alumni and students," explained Sam Dipolito, director of Alumni Affairs. "We know the weekend will be an enjoyable one, and we hope graduates of GSC will plan on being with us."

Arrest

Blackburn reported that he found White hiding in the floorboard of the auto and observed several tape players and radios laying in the floorboard.

"Officer Blackburn was really on the ball," Howell said.

The Security chief went on to say that Sgt. Julian Bowen; Sgt. Henry Anderson, criminal investigator; and Det. Richard Malone of the Statesboro Police Department were called into the case and that further investigations revealed that five cars had been broken into during the night.

Sgt. Anderson said that some of the tape players and radios found in White's car were identified by those students whose cars had been burglarized, and that radio knobs found in the suspects' sock were also identified by students.

Anderson said that students have reported a total of 18 cars broken into since the beginning of fall quarter, but that he had no reason to suspect that White was involved in any other thefts.

Fetter to return for homecoming

By WAYNE ESTES

Pat Fetter, crowned GSC's first male homecoming queen a year ago, is making his plans for participation in this year's celebration, which is already under way. The only problem is that GSC has not planned for Fetter as much as he has, and he said he is rather disappointed.

"The CCC and SUB have flat ignored me," said Fetter. "They've made up a lot of new rules about returning homecoming queens. I've been looking forward to riding in the parade, but now I've been told that they aren't going to let me."

Fetter will be introduced at Saturday's basketball game, but Dee Gottman, chairman of the homecoming for the SUB, said that is all. "It's tradition. The queen, be it he or she, has always been invited to participate in the halftime activities."

Gottman warns, however, "We've already heard rumors that some people are getting their egg-throwing arms warmed up."

Fetter was showered with debris, including eggs, at his crowning last year.

Donna Leggett, SUB chairman, said the board's decision not to allow Fetter in the morning parade was unanimous, "after we discussed it."

Gary Morgan, SUB advisor said, "We considered that someone might go to the extreme and throw a Coke bottle (at Fetter's car) and hit someone on the other side of the street. Mostly, though, it was a case that no organization was sponsoring an entry for the former queen."

Bohler to receive award

Dr. Charles Emory Bohler, Georgia's Family Physician of the Year in 1979, is GSC's Distinguished Biology Alumnus of 1980, to be honored by his alma mater during homecoming weekend Jan. 25 and 26.

Bohler will receive the biology department's Distinguished Alumnus Award during luncheon ceremonies at Mrs. Bryant's Kitchen, 1 p.m., Jan. 25, following a noon address to GSC students and faculty at the biology lecture hall.

Bohler will speak on "The Anatomy, Physiology, and Treatment of Coronary Artery Disease." The awards ceremony and the lecture are open to the public.

Bohler will also be among GSC's distinguished alumni recognized at the Alumni Society's 26th Annual Awards Luncheon at the Williams Center, Jan. 26.

The awards luncheon is also open to the public with tickets available for $4.75 at the GSC Alumni House or by calling 681-5691.

Bulloch County born and educated, Bohler graduated from GSC with the class of 1950 and pursued his medical degree at the Medical College of Georgia, completing his internship at Columbia Hospital in Columbia, SC. He opened his Brooklet medical practice in 1955.

He has served nationally as the state's delegate to the American Medical Association.

A work of art pictured for the GSC Eagle's Roost, was donated to the college through the GSC Foundation by Jerry Gibson of Metter. The tapestry, which captures GSC's symbolic eagle descending to its

Platt receives new post

Dr. Larry A. Platt, who has earned 22 grants and awards for his own research projects, has been appointed associate director of research services at GSC, according to GSC Vice President Charles Austin.

An associate professor of sociology at GSC since 1970, Platt has been recognized as an outstanding teacher as well as an active researcher.

During the decade he has been voted an "Outstanding Professor" by student election and has published 10 articles and 16 book reviews, presented 26 professional papers, and served as editor of officer in numerous professional organizations since coming to GSC.

He is the president-elect of the Georgia Sociological Association and editor of Network, the official newsletter of state sociological associations.

In his new position as associate director of research, Platt will work with both the graduate school and school of arts and sciences in the planning, development, coordination, and implementation of research activities and associated grant support for the 16 departments of the college's liberal arts school.

Platt's assignment also includes developing a school-wide grants and research policy and coordinating it with all levels of the college administration.

A native of Jacksonville, Fla., Platt's education includes an AB degree in sociology from Presbyterian College in Clinton, SC, and masters and Ph.D. degrees in sociology from the University of Georgia.

Platt has been a consultant to more than two dozen state and private agencies involved in human services, particularly in the areas of aging, staff development, and education.

Platt is perhaps best known, however, for his work with "death and dying" seminars and for helping families of terminal patients and the health professionals who work with them, to understand the reality of death.

Platt is currently director of the Title XX project of the Department of Human Resources.

Title XX is a series of statewide workshops helping human service workers to deal with stress and to work with clients who are often in dire circumstances.

WVGS-FM to sponsor a parade entry. Jennings was station manager when WVGS sponsored Fetter's entry into the 1979 queen competition. Jennings withdrew his request after a plea from Leggett last week.

"Parades have been cancelled in the past," Leggett said, "because of students getting drunk and rowdy, and we don't want to risk having the parade confined to campus because of an incident this year."

Fetter said, "I don't think there will be any eggs this year."

An ensign in the Naval Reserve, Fetter is nearing the end of primary flight training at the Naval Air Station Whiting Field in Milton, Fla. By the middle of February he should be through with primary and he's looking forward to flying jets, multi-engine prop planes, or helicopters.

He's seeking a special liberty for this weekend and said he hopes to be here for tonight's Glenn Phillips concert. Fetter said he has not decided if he will wear his Navy uniform to Saturday's game. "I have several tasteful outfits that I might wear."

Is his reign as GSC's queen classified information?

"There's a GSC homecoming queen plaque proudly displayed on the wall of my room in the Bachelors Officers' Quarters," he said.

A couple of Marine drill instructors at Aviation Officers Candidate School (a sort of boot camp for officers) found out, Fetter said, "and they thought it was hilarious. It was all good-natured."

"There's been no flak at all."

Validity of requirements examined

By SALLY SCHERER

The sophomore housing requirements are being examined for their validity by a new committee this quarter.

The purpose of the committee is to "investigate the validity of the sophomore requirements," said Barbara Morrison, CCC.

The Eagle Eye student handbook states that "...students must complete six quarters of residence in college-owned residence."

It also says that "students required to live in college residence halls must purchase dining hall meal tickets."

The committee consists of Ben Dixon, head of auxiliary; Larry Davis, director of housing; and Barbara Morrison.

"Larry Davis is looking into the historical aspect of the requirements," Morrison said, "and I am finding out about requirements of other schools in the University System of Georgia."

Rock posters shown here

By DAVID McKNIGHT

They say a picture paints a thousand words, well what about a poster? An exhibit of rock concert posters, works of some of the most successful west coast artists of the '60s will be shown in the Student Union Art Gallery, located in the Williams Center, on Jan. 24-31 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

"The 50 posters demonstrate illustrative techniques which were a landslide trend during an enlightened era," said Gary Beasley, SUB special event coordinator, who received the collection from V.E. Feller of Sunshine Promotions.

Beasley stated that "college-day" works of such op art greats as Rick Griffin, Wes Wilson, Kelly Mouse and others will be shown.

"Historical debut performances of Steve Miller, Richie Havens, Ginger Baker, Grace Slick, The Grateful Dead, Canned Heat and many more are in this collection," said Beasley.

Commenting on the meaning behind posters Beasley said that philosophical ideas, increased awareness, political interest, and musical ingenuity were most often incorporated into the artwork.

"Philosophical trends are best symbolized in posters displaying Richard Alpert, Allen Ginsberg, and Timothy Leary who lectured on social and political topics and were promoted with San Francisco rock groups," stated Beasley.

"The collection," said Beasley, "offers a distinct sign of the dramatic transition which had begun in the '60s. Music, a product of the sentiments during those times, touched a vast majority of the people in many ways."

Beasley stated that the most noteworthy op art was created by university students. "Rick Griffin, especially acknowledged for his concert poster work, is now renowned for his work in special interest comic books. Another success story is Kelly Mouse, who went on to establish Mouse Studios."

"Both Griffin and Mouse introduced to posters techniques of color association and devices of optical illusion during the trend for the bizarre and psychedelic," said Beasley.

Puppet shop here

By SUSAN THORNHILL

Puppets! Does the word bring to mind pictures of Kukla, Fran, and Ollie, the marionette show in "The Sound of Music," Jim Henson's Muppets?

GSC has an active puppetry program that provides the college and the community with an opportunity to acquaint themselves with the magic of puppets.

Much of the puppet theatre itself is portable, enabling many programs to travel outside its location downstairs in the Hollis

Building to nursing homes, schools, campus classrooms, and the Statesboro Recreation Department, according to Dan Evatt, student supervisor of the puppet theatre.

"Basically my theory and Dr. Johnson's (puppetry faculty advisor) is that the best way to learn how to do something is to do it," Evatt said.

Approximately 35 students a quarter are involved in making puppets and working with them. Many of the puppeteers are Speech 252 students, Survey of Speech students, and persons working toward credit in puppetry practicum.

Shelves of hand puppets and marionettes from past shows and the array of materials in the workshop reveal the hard work of the students involved with the puppetry program.

Varied views on draft explored

By DAVID McKNIGHT

Sex. That three-letter word can really get your attention. But did you know what gender you are may determine your willingness to serve your country militarily?

LeGrand Gardner, a graduate student of sociology here and station manager of WVGS, feels that what sex you are and whether you are in college or not play a large role in the way an individual views military service.

Gardner's paper, entitled "The Reinstatement of the Draft: The Effects of Sex Education on Support for Compulsory Military Service," has won first place honors from the Georgia Sociological Association in Memphis.

"And I just found out a few days ago that the paper was accepted to compete at the Southern Sociological Association," said Gardner.

The sociologist stated that when he first wrote the paper for a class it would have been lucky to get a B, "but with the encouragement of Dr. Charlene Black and working eight months on the study, I knew it was good enough to compete."

Surveys for the paper were taken by questionnaires and interviews.

"I selected certain characteristics for the stratified random sample and used those characteristics to select those individuals I used in my study," Gardner said.

The paper is broken down into four groups: males in college, males out of college, females in college, and females out of college.

"The non-college population held the more traditional values in relation to the draft," observed Gardner. "Females who weren't in college were against their being drafted and opposed to female participation in military service. Whereas the non-college male was much more supportive of the draft and totally against female participation."

Gardner said that the most interesting findings came from the college segment of his study.

"Individuals in college are generally more liberal. This in turn has a great influence on their attitudes," commented Gardner, saying that college females deviate the most from traditional roles and values.

"Many coeds were in favor of female participation in compulsory military service, and quite a few women would serve in the armed forces if drafted," said Gardner.

"College males were generally undecided against the draft," said Gardner, "but there was a tendency to be more opposed to the reinstatement of the draft than to be for it."

An important finding in the college sample was that there was a slight tendency for role reversal.

"College males tended to move away from the traditional roles. Which means that they are more negative in their attitudes on compulsory military service while college females were far more positive," said Gardner.

The Glenn Phillips Band will be appearing in the Williams Center tonight at 8:00 p.m. Tickets will be $1 at the door.

Stallings named as finalist

GSC Baseball Coach Jack Stallings recently added two more distinctions to his growing list of accomplishments.

Earlier this month, he was installed as the president of the American Association of College Baseball Coaches at the organizations annual meeting in New Orleans.

Upon returning to Statesboro from those meetings, he was informed he has been named finalist in the State of Georgia Hall of Fame College Coach of the Year competition.

In addition to the veteran Eagle mentor, the Coach of the Year Finalists are Middle Georgia Coach Robert Sapp, Southern Tech Basketball Coach George Perides and Georgia Tennis Coach Dan McGill.

Stallings has served as vice president of the AACBC for the last three years.

"Baseball at the college level is enjoying some of its finest years. Our game is more exciting than ever. Our public awareness continues to grow and we are beginning to gain greater recognition from the national media," said Stallings.

Stallings feels the two greatest challenges for AACBC during the next year will be to develop a "stronger marketing program to let people know we have an excellent, exciting game," and to provide more services for the members of the organization.

A native of North Carolina, Stallings is currently in his fifth season as Georgia Southern's head baseball coach after serving in similar capacities at Wake Forest and Florida State.

In 1979 he led the Eagles to a 46-15 record and to a ninth place ranking in the country.

In addition to his work with AACBC Stallings is well known for his work with international baseball, and has taken teams and conducted clinics throughout the world.

JACK STALLINGS

Pitcher Willis inks contract

Eagle Pitcher Alan Willis has signed a professional baseball contract with the Cleveland Indians organization, recently, according to an announcement by GSC Baseball Coach Jack Stallings.

"We're very happy for Alan to get this opportunity to play pro ball," said Stallings. "We feel a pro career is the goal of most all our players and encourage them to seek that end. We'll certainly miss Alan on this year's staff but wouldn't do anything to stand in his way as long as he receives an offer he is satisfied with."

Willis was one of the premier pitchers for Georgia Southern last season, leading the team with an 11-2 record, including wins over Georgia, Florida State, South Carolina and Lehigh. Willis pitched 11 innings in 15 games with a stingy 2.83 ERA. He also struck out 85 during the season.

It was reported that he signed with a AA contract and will report to spring training with the Indians.

Fencing club to compete at Breneau

This weekend the GSC Fencing Club is traveling to Breneau College in Gainesville, to participate in a men's epee, women's foil, and an under-20 tournament.

During the Christmas break, two GSC fencers stood out in separate competition.

Tami Vaught, a junior, won third place in women's epee in Columbia S. C., and Allan Mulford, a sophomore, was awarded the best novice in a men's open foil tournament in Atlanta.

The schedule for the rest of the quarter is:

Jan. 26—Breneau College Open, Gainesville.

Feb. 2—Men's Novice Foil—Atlanta.

Feb. 16-17—8th Annual Geoff Elder Tournament, Geoff Elder Open, GSC.

Mar. 1-2—Pink and Blue Tournament, Charleston, S. C.

Mar. 8-9—August Open, Augusta.

The Geoff Elder Open is an annual event held at GSC to commemorate the Fencing Club's first teacher/coach, who is presently the Canadian Foil Champion.

The Elder is the state's second largest fencing tournament and brings fencers from four to five states together for competition.

This year's tournament will be held in the old gym and everyone is welcome to watch.

Anyone interested in participating in the club's activities should contact Steve Poloney at LB 12322 or at 764-5387.

Steve Taylor suspended

GSC basketball player Steve Taylor has been suspended "indefinitely" from the team following an incident during the Jan. 12 UNC-Wilmington game.

The suspension of the sophomore center was announced Monday, Jan. 14 by Head Coach J.B. Searce, who stated that the decision was reached due to "uncalled for behavior" at the halftime of the game.

John Fowler poured in 25 points against the UNC-Wilmington

Seahawks but the Eagles fell short 62-60.

Lady Eagles capture record 14th victory

GSC's women's basketball team is the only squad still unbeaten in GAIWA Division I play, but the Lady Eagles are not about to get overconfident.

"It's a nice feeling to be out front," said Lady Eagle Coach Ellen Evans, "but we know we have our work cut out for us. The toughest part of our schedule still is in front of us."

The Lady Eagles are 13-3 following last weekend's 96-54 thrashing of Paine College in Augusta. Sunday night they came back to defeat a combined service team from Ft. Stewart-Hunter Air Field, 97-31 in Hinesville, in an exhibition game.

This Thursday night the Lady Eagles host a talented Georgia State team and that game marks the first of a series of seven games, six of which are against GAIWA Division I foes.

The GSC squad is 5-0 in GAIWA play, but will play Mercer (home and away), Albany State (home), Georgia State (home and away) and Georgia (home) between Jan. 17 and Feb. 4.

Those games will go a long way deciding the make-up of the state tournament.

"We are playing better all the time," said Evans, "but we are certainly not in the driver's seat. Each one of those teams will be pointing toward us. We are going to have to play well to survive."

The Lady Eagles set a new school record with a 53-52 win over Georgia State.

Southern continues to show a balance scoring attack with four players between 11.3 and 12.6 points per game.

Vuzeda Merriweather leads the team with a 12.6 mark, followed by Debra Linebarger (12.2) Diane Fuller (11.9) and Renarda Baker (11.3). Fuller is the leading rebounder with a 13.3 average.

GSC swimmers notch wins against Buccaneers

By BILLY VAUGHN

About 75 spectators came to the Hanner Pool Saturday to witness a fiercely competitive swim meet between the College of Charleston and GSC.

The swim meet consisted of 27 events which included medley relays, free style swimming, and diving competitions from both the high and low boards.

Both teams displayed a great amount of physical skill and endurance; however, the GSC swimmers seemed to dominate the meet and took first place in 16 different events.

Saturday was especially rewarding for top swimmer Jennifer Georg who walked away with first place in the 200-yard medley relay with a time of 2:17.28, the 50-yard breast stroke with a time of 34.46, the 100-yard intermediate with a time of 1:08.43, and the 100-yard breast stroke with a time of 1:19.95.

Equally impressive was the performance given by Chris Walker who won the 50-yard free style with a time of 22.6, the 100-yard free-style with a time of 50.58, and the 400-yard free relay with a time of 3:28.93.

C. L. Wyatt had no trouble impressing the crowd with his diving ability. He walked away with first place in both the low and high board competitions. He scored 208.00 on the low board and 214.50 on the high board.

Other winners were Greg Kolnick, who won the 400-yard medley relay with a time of 4:23.62; Jeff Arbuckle, the 500-yard free-style event with a 5:11.47; Suzie Jones, the 100-yard free-style race with a 58.25; Lynn Robinson, the 50-yard free-style with a 26.83; Katherine Miller, the 50-yard fly competition with a 30.58; and Donna Hedrick, winner of the 200-yard free-style relay with a time of 1:48.70.

The win lifted the GSC swimming squad to a 3-1 record for the year.

The Eagle swim teams will face their next opposition on February 1 with a matchup against the University of South Florida here in Statesboro.

Eagles drop heart breaker

By ALAN LOPER

The GSC Eagles' record dropped to 3-10 on Jan. 12 as UNC-Wilmington defeated the cagers, 62-60.

Senior John Fowler led the way in scoring with 25, while 6'8" freshman Duane Wilcox had his best game of the year, according to head coach J. B. Searce.

Senior Caesar Williams also performed well in the loss, which saw the Eagles tie the game with one minute left on a Fowler steal. The Seahawks then played for the last shot sinking the clincher with only four seconds remaining.

"We lost the game at the foul line, we had more field goals than they did, but they made up the difference at the foul line," said Searce.

The Eagles then traveled to the Macon Coliseum to face a tough Mercer team. The Bears dominated and won easily, 92-70.

Searce attributed the loss to the early part of the game, saying, "We didn't play very well the first ten minutes. After that we played fairly well."

Sophomore guard Tim James dropped in 18 points, while Williams had another fine game, adding 17 in a losing cause. John Fowler, who averages nearly 17 points a game, was held in check with seven points.

The Eagles will be trying to avenge an earlier loss this season as they host the Murray State Racers this Saturday. The special tip-off time for the Homecoming game is 3 p.m. at the W. S. Hanner Fieldhouse.

Homecoming activities will take place at the halftime of that game
