New Housing Policy

Campus Housing Changes Effective Fall

JULIE WILSON
News Writer

Some students who might have been required to live in campus housing next fall will find themselves free to move off campus due to a change in the housing policy.

The new policy will go into effect beginning the Fall Quarter of 1986. The new policy will release students from campus housing if they meet one of the following requirements:

1. Have lived in college housing at least 4 quarters by September, 1986.
2. Were born before June 15, 1966.
3. Have earned at least 45 hours of college credit prior to Spring 1986.

This new policy is the result of an "unexpectedly high number of applications from incoming freshman," according to Pat Burkett, Director of Housing.

Burkett went on to say that trends in enrollment had indicated that many colleges would experience a decline, but this apparently was not true of GSC. "The numbers indicate that we will not experience a decline," Burkett said.

This new policy is the result of an "unexpectedly high number of applications from incoming freshmen."

Pat Burkett
Director of Housing

According to Burkett, the new policy will release "some of the students who are marginal in the requirement of living on campus." It will not release the entire sophomore class, as the changed policy did in 1982, when the college again received a huge flood of housing applications from incoming freshman.

"In 1982, we were in a similar situation and released the sophomores," Burkett said. This action proved to be a mistake, as many of the expected freshmen never enrolled at GSC.

The Housing Department had developed a long range plan to deal with the growing number of students requiring housing. This plan may include releasing all sophomores from housing beginning in the fall of 1987. "We were making plans. The record enrollment will firm those plans. In the future, the only students required to live on campus will be incoming freshmen," Burkett said.

Regardless of the increase in incoming freshmen, there are no plans to construct new dorms. "The Board of Regents feels that the community will provide housing for the students," said Louise Screws.

The community may soon be housing sophomores as well as juniors and seniors. Burkett does not see this as a problem for the community and does not see a great deal of competition for available housing due to the change in the policy. "There have been so many new developments off campus. Others are ready to build," said Screws.

The new policy has not resulted in many cancellations of campus housing contracts. Though some 861 current residents would be eligible to live off campus because of the change in the housing requirement, only some 20 cancellations have been received so far.

Students who are not sure of how the new policy affects them should contact the housing office. "We welcome students to come by and talk with us or call us and get a clarification of their particular case. We know this can be a confusing time for students," Burkett said.

GSC Spring Quarter Enrollment Shows Significant Increase

By PAULA BARNETT
News Writer

Spring quarter enrollment at GSC has shown an increase over last year's figure, rivaling high numbers in the spring of 1982.

This year's enrollment, at 6,311, shows a rise of 292 students since spring of 1985.

"We're really pleased with this figure," noted GSC's Assistant Registrar Jacquelyn Cooper, adding that it was only 25 students less than spring 1982's 6,336.

Current student count is based on figures available as of April 25, she said.

"There could be a few more," Cooper added, "but I don't anticipate a drastic change."

This quarter's total enrollment includes 214 new students, mainly transfers, as well as 55 freshmen, she explained.

The bulk of incoming students usually come in fall quarter, Cooper said, when enrollment is traditionally highest.

For example, fall quarter 1985's figure of new students was 6,935, but, Cooper added, "We lose students throughout the academic year for various reasons."

Criminal Justice Seminar Held

JULIE WILSON
News Writer

Top law enforcement officials from all over Georgia attended a spring workshop held May 14 at GSC Conference Center.

The program, Law Enforcement and Corrections in the 80's, was a day-long event sponsored by the Criminal Justice Club.

This was the third year that the Criminal Justice Club sponsored the event. According to Criminal Justice Professor Lana Wachniak, the program has grown every year.

"We are getting more feedback from practitioners. Over 50 police officers and others have registered. We expect over 100 students to attend," Wachniak said.

The program was organized by students and continues to be student run. It was stated "to give the students a chance to meet and associate with practitioners in the criminal justice field" said Lori Head, President of the GSC Criminal Justice Club.

"It offers the real world. Students have been studying theory. This is the bridge between theory and what is actually happening out there," said Judge Dorothy T. Beasley of the Georgia Court of Appeals. Beasley was one of the noted speakers who attended the workshop.

The workshop featured several law enforcement officials representing many different careers. Included among the speakers were an anti-terrorist agent, a juvenile justice specialist, and the state commissioner of corrections.

Essay Winners Announced

President-elect Arthur Sparks of the Honor Society of Phi Kappa Phi is pleased to announce the winners of its annual Junior Essay Competition in which juniors who have a G.P.A. of 3.5 or better were invited to write an essay. The winner, as judged by three readers, will receive $200 toward next year's college expenses; the first runner-up will receive $100 toward expenses; three honorable mentions will receive $50 toward tuition.

All will receive certificates, be featured in the George-Anne and other papers, and will have their essays bound in a book which will be kept on permanent display in the library. Honors go this year to the following:

First Place: Leigh Vazquez

First Runner-Up: Lee Davis

Honorable Mentions:

Debra Thompson

Brenda Roberts

Bekki Shriver

The Phi Kappa Phi Scholarship Committee consists of Donna Jones, Eleanor James, Elizabeth Hardy, and Virginia Spell.

'Think Pink' — 'The Pigs' Return

By CHRIS PIKE
News Writer

Statesboro's finest, The Pigs, return to Georgia Southern College once again this Friday at Anton's: the theme of the show will be "Think Pink," and their music has often been compared to that of Elvis Costello.

"They are a talented group of musicians who use harmonistic vocals with hum-along melodies and proverbial meaning in their lyrics," says Gary Mills, Statesboro area promoter of The Pigs.

Many people in the music industry are very positive when asked of The Pigs future. Two of their biggest admirers are Don Dixon of R.E.M. album-producing fame and Mitch Easter, the mastermind behind the band Let's Active. Recently the band visited Don Dixon's recording studio,

The Drive-In, in North Carolina and made a tape of new songs not found on their "P is for Pig" debut vinyl recording.

The group also has their own video, which was made at 668, an Atlanta new music club.

In the last few months, the quartet has played the Atlanta/Athens music scene at clubs such as 668, Moonshadow, 40 Watt Club, and The Uptown. They have also played at Georgia Tech and Chapel Hill, North Carolina.

The group hopes to be back in the studio in the near future to record some of their new material.

"We have over 30 songs completed with about 20 near completion," stated Gary Fordham, lead vocalist and rhythm guitarist for the band.

Three of the band's new members are originally from Statesboro and attended Georgia Southern College. They are Tommy Akins, lead guitarist and vocals, Chris Lanier, bass and vocals and Fordham. The fourth member, Stuart Bird, drummer and percussionist for the bands hairs from Atlanta.

Friday's show is to consist of three sets of original music not yet recorded and a fourth set with a variety of their recorded tunes.

Also Friday from 1 to 3 p.m., The Pigs will be interviewed on WVGS 91.9 FM. Guest passes will be given away during the show, so listen in; you might be a lucky winner.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

GSC Football Team Not Appreciative of Fans?

Editor:

I am very proud to be attending Georgia Southern College, the home of the National Champions, Georgia Southern Eagles. I can scarcely imagine the pride that wells up inside each player of the Championship team. The title was won by incredible effort by the coaches and players and in no small part, the support of the fans, many of whom are GSC students.

Although I am very appreciative of the superhuman achievement of the team, there seems to be little if any appreciation of the support from the fans by the players. Many of the players have their heads so high in the clouds they seem oblivious to the existence of us lowly non-athletes. Case in point: I was fairly certain one of the students in my classes was a football player, but to be sure before I asked him a question about the team, I asked if he was on the team. He sardonically replied, "No, man, I'm on the tennis team—a 265 lb. tennis player." This embarrassed me to no end. I was going to ask him when the Blue-White game was so I could lend my support, but after that incident I chose to stay away. This over-aloof air is not personified by all of the players. Of course, the one player who has every reason to feel like Superman, Tracy Ham, is one of the nicest people on campus. The true superstars don't have to put on any airs, and the real Giant of our football program is as personable and down to earth as anyone you could meet. If Erk knew how a huge number of his players acted, I know some heads would roll and some butts could ache.

Come on, Eagles, we are on the same team, all performing vital functions to maintain a championship program. We exalt in your victories and suffer through your losses, because your wins and losses are ours, too.

Please withhold my name and Landrum Box because I have a good many friends on the team and I do not want them to bear me any ill will or hurt me in any way. (I don't know if I'm kidding or not.)

On Different Cultures

From Sweden to Georgia is a gigantic step in many ways, but I never hesitated when I found out that I had received a Rotary scholarship to study at Georgia Southern College for one year. Sixty students from all over the world are chosen to experience a year in an American college.

I have now been here for almost three quarters and caught at least a little glimpse of what America and the South is all about. Needless to say, there were a lot of new things to get adjusted to. We don't exactly eat fried chicken and grits at home, and the number of hamburgers and Cocolas the Americans can squeeze into their bodies is incredible.

After watching football for the first time in my life I was very confused. Eagles? Erk? Touchdown? Slowly, the confusion cleared up and was replaced by a slight liking of the game. WHO would have imagined that?

The climate is another thing that was totally different. Sweden is not really known for having an average temperature of 65-70. We more or less hibernate during the cold winter months and don't wake up until spring. To be able to walk around in shorts in February was a warming experience.

Americans. Yes, they most definitely are a special kind of people. The first thing that struck me was how little they know about other countries and especially Sweden. "Is Denmark the capital of Sweden?", "Do you speak English in Sweden with a Swedish accent?" and "What is it like to live in a communist country?" might show what I'm trying to say. "If it is not in the county, it doesn't concern me" seems to be the average opinion. They are also more friendly and open to strangers, which cuts both ways since that can give the impression of being superficial and fake.

The Nordic type of personality is more like a bottle of ketchup. You hit it and hit it to try to get something out of it, but it's persistent and keeps it all inside. But, all of a sudden, everything comes out when you're least prepared for it.

Besides the college life, the Rotary students have had a lot of get-togethers, and it has been exciting to get to know people from 22 different countries. All of us with different backgrounds — but it's amazing how many more similarities than differences there are between us.

Finally, on behalf of the three person strong Swedish Viking-tribe, Anna, Ulla and myself, I would like to thank y'all who have made this year such a great one — students, teachers, families — and of course there is an open invitation to the country that raised Bjorn Borg and Ingemar Stenmark.

But remember, once and for all, Sweden is NOT Switzerland!

G-A Thanks Retirees

The staff of the George-Anne would like to thank for their help and guidance over the years the ten distinguished professors who will be retiring from GSC at the end of either spring or summer quarter. We would also like to wish them much luck and happiness in their retirements. These professors are Dr. Sterling Cameron Adams, professor of music; Ms. Charlotte A. Ford, associate professor of history; Dr. Betty Lane, professor of home economics and chairman of the division of home economics; Dr. Justine S. Mann, professor of political science and public administration; Dr. Robert David Ward, professor of history; Ms. Grace Ryan Lambie, assistant professor of elementary education; Dr. James Monroe Hood, assistant professor of educational psychology; Dr. John Robert Lindsey, professor of education; Dr. Herbert Douglas Leavitt, professor and dean of the School of Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Nursing; and Dr. John S. Martin, professor of building construction technology, industrial technology.

Animal Rights Respected at Humane Society

By PATSY COLLINS
Staff Writer

It's hard to resist the cute, lovable face of a fuzzy kitten or puppy. Something about their innocent playfulness steals the hearts of a lot of GSC students, enough to make them want to take one home.

However, that adorable little bundle is going to grow into a fully mature animal — in size and reproductive capacity.

Sometimes when students leave campus to go home, the pets are unwelcome in their parents' homes. So the animals are left to fend for themselves.

Is there anything cute about a half-starved cat or dog, or companionable about the instincts which produce fear of being shot at or beaten?

Any domesticated animal requires care and feeding, but it also requires inoculations to prevent disease, some control to avoid accidents or injuries — whether to them or by them, and most importantly, some type of birth control to keep down the unwanted numbers of neglected offspring.

The Bulloch County Humane Society deals with the rejects of owners every day. It was formed about six years ago by concerned citizens and is governed by a board of 15 community members. Barbara Bitter, head of developmental studies at GSC, is president of the society. She stated that it as a non-profit agency of the United Way, but works on a budget and must solicit funds from the public to keep operating.

A membership drive is being held this month to increase its ranks; dues are $15 annually.

The society operates the animal shelter on Highway 301, north of Statesboro. The city has only one animal-control officer and no city pound, so it partially supports the shelter along with the county. Although the land for the shelter was donated by the county, the society is working to pay for the building and equipment.

Overcrowding is almost always a problem. If animals are unadoptable after 30 days, they are subject to euthanasia. There are about 40 animals housed there at this time. Volunteers to work with the animals and monetary donations are always needed, but so are mops, brooms, big metal buckets and bowls, Clorox and dog food.

The shelter has only one full-time employee whose duties entail feeding, cleaning, supervision of volunteers, and working with a veterinarian. She is Peggy Lowe, a former licensed practical nurse who changed jobs because of her love for animals.

The society asks for a donation from every person who seeks to adopt a pet or leave one. They ask that an agreement be signed to have the pet spayed or neutered, and offer reduced fees for these procedures as an incentive.

Animals are often put out on the grounds of the shelter by people who cannot or will not donate to the society. Mrs. Lowe asked that anyone who must do so — please put the animal in one of the four pens outside the building, and close the door so the animal will not wander onto the highway.

Mrs. Lowe said one of the problems with student adopters is that they lie about their residences in order to get a pet. The shelter often checks, but sometimes cannot research every record. She said, "everybody who calls wants male kittens or puppies." Some of the same issues for adopting children apply to animals — nobody wants the older ones.

If you think you want a pet — think maturely, responsibly, and unselfishly. Go out to the animal shelter and put in some time as a volunteer to find out what pet ownership involves. It will give you a new perspective on animal rights, and a new respect for their loyalty and intelligence.

GSC Afro-American Choir Praises God

DONALD WATSON
Staff Writer

Throughout history, black student gospel groups have traditionally been found on predominantly black college campuses with a few notable exceptions.

Some, like the Fisk Singers of Fisk University in Tennessee, became popular enough during the post-Reconstruction era to go on tours around the country.

Today, black gospel music has spread to predominantly white colleges where it is being appreciated by many. An example is the Afro-American Club Choir here at GSC.

The group was formed about 15 years ago when a number of students belonging to the Afro-American Club "...got together and wanted to sing," according to its director, Dr. Charles W. Bonds.

"Our main purpose is to praise the Lord, our savior Jesus Christ through song," he added.

Today, the choir, with its 25 members, entertains often with concerts here at GSC and at various churches around the Southeast.

Appearances have also been made at several college campuses, including West Georgia and the University of Florida.

The choir's next concert at GSC will be on May 25, at six o'clock p.m. in the Conference Center auditorium.

The music will include selections from their soon-to-be released album entitled "Joy Will Come in the Morning," which was composed and arranged mainly by choir member Alton Hart, Jr.

The concert will also feature solo performances by several of the members.

Membership in the AACC is open to all GSC students. New students usually join during fall quarter.

Forum Begins

Terrorism, nuclear arms, voting, and students rights are all topics of discussion that involve each and every one of us in varying degrees.

If you are one of those students who is always yelling about what's wrong, but no one seems to listen, now someone will!

This Thursday, May 25, will be the first meeting of the 1986 Georgia Southern College Forum. This club is opened to all GSC students and faculty who are interested in discussing the current issues of today.

This group was recently started in Greg Mullin's Spring quarter Discussion class by interested students, who want to listen to experts talk on various issues of today. It's a time for students and faculty both to voice the opinions and views on hot topics of the eighties.

"We want to bring issues that are important to the student out in the open, and get their opinions," said Beau Baxter, newly elected president of the GSC Forum.

Other executive board members are: Lynn Russel, Vice-President; Michelle Patrick, Secretary; and Cheryl Childes, Parliamentarian.

The group will sponsor their first guest speaker Thursday, May 22 in Hollis Room 118 at 1:00 p.m. Marybeth Marren, a local travel agent, will speak on traveling this summer. She will advise students "safe" places to travel, according to the industry, and precautions to take when traveling.

Also, soon to speak will be Dr. Hashmi of the Political Science Department. He will voice his views on "Terrorism and its Effects."

So look around campus for posters on who the next interesting speaker will be and what "hot issue" will be discussed at the new GSC Forum!!!!

Registration starts Friday, June 13, at theatres everywhere.

Old South Inn Attracts Visitors to the 'Boro

By BO JOYNER
Editor

In the southeastern Georgia city of Statesboro, nestled beneath the cool shade of the dogwood and magnolia trees that line Main Street, there sits a two-story wood structure that offers some of the most elegant lodging in this part of the state.

The aged structure is the Statesboro Inn, a renovated old house that cradles a delicate balance between the romance and hospitality of the old South and the conveniences of the modern world.

Built in 1904 by W.G. Raines, a Statesboro hardware and furniture store owner, the Inn was rebuilt in 1985 by Bill Frondorf and his wife, Bonnie, and now has the distinction of being the town's only bed and breakfast inn.

Today, the Inn's downstairs appearance is almost identical to the floor plans Raines' wife designed around the turn of the century.

"During restoration W.G. Raines Jr. (the original owner's son) came by and told me a lot about the house — how each room was used and how the furniture was positioned," Frondorf explained.

Raines Jr. was actually born in the house in a room that today bears his name.

Like the Raines Room, each of the other eight guest rooms has been given a name, usually reflecting the type of furniture or architectural period represented.

"Each room has its own personality," Frondorf noted, explaining that each is individually decorated with period antiques selected by his wife and his mother, Dorothy Miller, an interior designer from Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

While antique furniture, high ceilings with paddle fans and brick fireplaces with pine mantles are the rule of the Inn, modern conveniences such as central heat and air, remote control television, soundproofed walls, private baths and whirlpools await guests.

Added to these luxuries is a personal touch not found at most hotels. A complimentary continental breakfast served on a linen tablecloth with real china and a newspaper offer a leisurely way to start the day. And at night, visitors will find turned-down covers and a bedtime treat.

In addition to the nine guest rooms, the Inn features a parlor and dining room, each with stunning coffered ceilings of dark pine beams and recessed pine board panels, a spacious front porch and a cozy, shady courtyard.

Although today it's a bed and breakfast inn, in the past the 84-year-old neoclassic structure has been home to numerous people and businesses.

After it was sold by Raines in the 1930's, it was transformed into Statesboro's first beauty shop, an apartment building, a doctor's office, and finally an alcohol rehabilitation center. Also of historical significance, it is rumored that rock singer Gregg Allman penned his hit song "Statesboro Blues" while occupying a small shack behind the house that was at one time the residence of the Raines' cook.

The building was left vacant for several years before Frondorf purchased it in 1983. He described the condition of the house at the time as "structurally sound but in need of a lot of work." With the part-time help of several Georgia Southern College students and some local contractors, Frondorf finished the restoration in eight weeks.

In addition to extensive landscaping, new plumbing, wiring, heating and air conditioning systems were installed and interior walls were replastered.

"All existing trim, doors, fireplaces (seven in all), mantles and windows were painstakingly salvaged and refinished to their original condition," Frondorf said.

According to the owner, the most often requested room is the Bulloch Room which features a whirlpool bath and a private porch.

The Toombs Room, so named because the hand-carved antique double bed that dominates it originally belonged to the family for which Toombs County was named, boasts a fireplace and an elegant antique walnut desk.

The Wicker Room, the least expensive at $45, offers two wicker beds and wicker furniture.

The most expensive room, at $95, is the W.G. Raines Room which is also the largest. It features two queen-sized beds, a kitchenette, a fireplace and a whirlpool bath.

Football Eagles to Practice in "First Class"

MIKE MILLS
Sports Writer

Since the return of football to GSC in 1981, the team has had to practice on an area that's more like a battleground than a football field. The uneven surface and pothole-marked turf has been a constant hindrance.

"When Coach Russell first arrived here at GSC, the best we could do for him was to throw down some chalk and mow the grass beside the soccer field and call it a practice area," Frank Hook, a member of the Southern Boosters said.

But, finally, all that is changing. "We are now in a position to offer the football team two first class practice facilities," Hook, who is also director of the newly-formed Capital Fund Drive, said.

Immediately after the spring game, construction of twin fields that will correspond exactly to the specifications and appearance of Paulson Stadium began. The construction of these fields is somewhat different from normal collegiate facilities in that the project is being almost solely funded from neighboring communities and citizens.

Companies and individuals have given cash donations, as well as gifts of soil, grass seed, dump trucks, piping, and almost everything else necessary to complete the facility.

"We have worked up a plan where by a small company doesn't have to give a cash donation," Hook said, "but can pledge a load of sand or the use of a tractor to help meet this dream of ours."

The total cash outlay is budgeted at $108,871, and the private donations of money, equipment, labor and materials will account for all but 5,500 of the amount. The rest will come from funds collected through previous athletic drives.

The proposed fields are scheduled to be completed in time for Fall practice, but Hook conceded that it will be a day-by-day thing.

Besides the practice fields, the facility will include a field house/training room building. In the past, injured players were tended to right on the field, often lying under a tree in the blazing heat. The new building will sport an air-conditioned, fully-stocked training room and a storage shed for equipment that before had to be carried back to Hanner Fieldhouse.

The Capital Fund Drive is set up to meet nine specific goals that—besides the practice fields—will include: completion of Paulson Stadium; building of coaches offices, a weight-room, and an athletic administrative building; beautification of Clements Field; and the funding for 25 scholarships. The official kick-off of the Capital Fund Drive will be June 3 at the Paulson Challenge banquet.

INTRAMURALS

The Campus Recreation/Intramurals would like to thank everyone who took part in last week's Frisbee golf tournament on Sweetheart Circle. A great time was had by all, and after all the Frisbees were through flying, it was David Buckley who came out on top with an 18 hole total of 62 (4 under par). Patrick Hilke and Horace Neal tied for second place honors with both bringing in a score of 70.

Frisbees will be flying again on the afternoon of Tuesday, May 27, when the intramural department hosts its annual "Frisbee fun" event. This event will get underway at 4:00 p.m. in the area between the tennis courts and the racquetball courts. Participants will compete in events measuring accuracy, distance, and maximum time aloft. Participants can either come by the intramural office to sign up or sign up between 3:30-4:00 p.m. at the site of the event on the day of the event. For more information come by the Intramural office located in Hanner 126 or call 681-5436.

Dantzler, Scott Win Student Athlete Awards

MIKE MILLS
Sports Writer

Marion Dantzler and Janet Scott were named the GSC male and female Student-Athletes of the Year last Thursday at the annual sports banquet. This award is given each year to the man and woman who best epitomize the criteria set for a student-athlete. Scott, a senior softball pitcher, and Dantzler, a senior golf team member, excelled in their prospective sports and were real leaders to their fellow players.

"This was one of the best years ever in Southern's Sports history," Dr. Dale Lick said. "We won the national championship in football, but the Board of Regents was most impressed with the number of seniors who are graduating at the end of the year. . . good sports make great academics."

Dantzler was a member of the all-conference team, low stroke leader for the team, and has been nominated for academic All-American. He felt that receiving the award was a great honor and he had accomplished most of his goals, which was, "...to play golf to the best of my ability, to earn my scholarship and to make the best grades possible."

Scott was really shocked by the award presented to her. "There were some excellent girls up this year," she said. "I feel lucky."

Last year, Scott was slow pitching for the Lady Eagles, but this year with the introduction of fast-pitch softball to GSC, the girls had to start from scratch.

"I was a little disappointed," the big first baseman said. "It's been quite a while since I've gone four games without a homer, but it's just a personal thing. I set a goal of 25 home runs before the season and I reached that, so I'm happy with my numbers."

NOTE: Cooper has been selected as a member of the USA team, which will tour Canada and Amsterdam as well as the United States this summer.

Dedication Pays Off for Cooper

CHRIS NAIL
Sports Editor

When Craig Cooper signed with the GSC Eagles four years ago, there were no moans and groans from GSC opponents nor jubilation among Eagle fans, as the Mendham, NJ native wasn't heavily recruited. But you can bet there'll be smiles on opponents' faces and tears in the eyes of the GSC people when the 6-foot, 200-pound slugger leaves.

After three seasons of hard work and dedication, Cooper has established himself as one of the top players in the nation. This season he hit 26 home runs, had 94 RBIs, and a .446 batting average. The home run total was one behind the GSC record set in 1984 by Ben Abner (who had 278 at bats to 213 for Cooper), while the RBIs eclipsed Mark Strucher's mark of 85 set in 1979.

Also, Cooper's batting average was the second highest-ever for a GSC player — behind Derrell Baker's .462 in 1981—and he tied Abner's record of 78 runs scored in a season.

"Craig Cooper is the best hitter we've seen this year. He's strong and has lots of power and loves to hit, which makes him even more dangerous with a bat."

—Clemson Head Coach
Bill Wilhelm

In the latest NCAA statistics, Cooper led the nation in RBIs, was second in home runs, sixth in runs scored, and eighth in hits.

So how has a player who hit only .231 with 3 homers and 12 RBIs in 108 at bats his freshman year reached such heights?

CRAIG COOPER

"My first two years I spent hours and hours in the (batting) cage," Cooper said. "I've worked out my swing and grooved it, which is half the battle. It's taken a while and a lot of hard work, but my play has steadily improved, and I hope to continue to progress."

Progress is something Coach Jack Stallings has seen Cooper make a lot of during his GSC career.

"Craig has advanced tremendously as a player and a hitter," Stallings said. "He has excellent work habits, and works year round. He has worked hard on becoming a patient hitter. He's not just a slugger, but also a good, pure hitter. He hits for average as well as home runs, which is what I've been trying to tell the (major league) scouts."

Some opposing coaches were also impressed with Cooper's play this year.

"I don't think anyone has hit the ball harder against us this year," said Jim Morris, Georgia Tech head coach, after a series in Statesboro.

Adds Clemson head coach Bill Wilhelm "Craig Cooper is the best hitter we've seen this year. He's strong and has lots of power and loves to hit, which makes him even more dangerous with a bat."

Cooper has been scouted closely by Kansas City, Montreal, and California, and is expected to be drafted by one of those teams in June.

"If I sign a contract, my next goal is to make the majors and stay there as long as I can," he said.

The future looks rosy for Cooper, but how does he feel about falling short of the home run record after having 26 with four games left?

See RECORDS, p. 11

Girls Needed for 1987 GSC Softball Team

Coach Bill Speith encourages any GSC females interested in playing softball for the Eagles during the 1987 season to contact him before the end of this quarter. Speith says no prior fast-pitch experience is necessary. Either call 681-5266, or come by Hanner 140.

Sports Beat

By CHRIS NAIL
Sports Editor

Three years ago the Atlanta Braves, who went into a terrible slump in the second half of the season, tried to change their fortunes by reconstructing Chief Noc-a-homa's teepee—which they had taken down earlier in the season to make room for more seats. Unfortunately, circumstances haven't changed much since then (except both the Chief and his teepee are gone now) as the Braves are still in a tailspin, so the front office has decided to make an astronomical move — change uniforms. The new uniforms, which "America's Team" will exhibit in '87, reportedly are very similar to the ones the Braves wore when they were "Milwaukee's Team." The dominant color will be red with flashes of gold. The shirts will be the button-down model, with a tomahawk across the front and an American Indian face in full headdress on the sleeves. The pants will have a belt, and black shoes will round out the sparkling display. Although the change probably won't put any more numbers in the win column for Atlanta, it may at least allow them to change their title: The Atlanta Braves — "America's Best-Dressed Team."

Although American League teams are better known for hitting, they've been making a lot of headlines lately with record-breaking pitching performances. The first example is Boston Red Sox right-hander Roger Clemens. We've all heard the names Nolan Ryan, Tom Seaver, and Steve Carlton — the three all-time great strikeout-artists — but they have to move aside now because Clemens is the new single-game "K"-king. Clemens eclipsed the above mentioned threesome's record of 19 strikeouts by blowing away 20 Seattle Mariner batters on April 29. He also tied Ryan's AL record for consecutive whiffs with 8. Although Clemens was considered to be a potential superstar when the Red Sox drafted him out of the University of Texas in 1983, injuries had threatened his chances to be even an average pitcher. After his performance against Seattle, you can bet the superstar label will reappear whenever the name Clemens is mentioned in baseball circles.

The other example also involves a strikeout record, as well as Seattle. The Mariners (18) and Oakland A's (12) combined to whiff an amazing 30 times in their game on April 19. Six pitchers participated in the game — four for Seattle and two for Oakland — and every starting player on each team, except for the Mariners' Alvin Davis, struck out at least once. The previous record for two teams was 28, set by Cincinnati (15) and San Diego (13) in 1972. Also, the A's Jose Rijo set a team record with 16 K's in eight innings.

The AL is often criticized for rules that supposedly pander to batters (the designated hitter controversy, etc.), but now it appears some of their pitchers are on a personal mission to refute such criticism. It remains to be seen whether or not their campaign will be successful, but one thing's for sure — they didn't pick a bad way to begin it.
