Student-organized political rally set

By Cathy McNamara
News Editor

A student-organized political rally is scheduled to blitz Landrum today from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. in response to growing apathy among student-voters.

Organized by GSC students Gary Wain, Dave Harris, and Mitch Turner, and instituted by SGA President Benjy Thompson, today's rally is expected to gather representatives from the offices of Lindsey Thomas and Wyche Fowler, several professors, international students, representatives from greek organizations, and interested students.

"This is a non-partisan political rally; if you want to endorse a candidate that's fine," stated Wain, a delegate to the Democratic National Convention, who also stressed the importance of student participation in the political process.

Speakers include Michael Aanhams, Dr. Hew Joiner of the History Department, Dr. David Speak of the Political Science Department, Dr. Schumaker of the Foreign Language Department.

International exchange students Louis White and Amy Hendrix are also scheduled to speak. White, an exchange student from Scotland sponsored by the Rotary Club, will share views on the differences between living in the United States and Scotland. Hendrix will speak on the American political process from a woman's perspective.

Other interested speakers are also invited. "It's an open forum for anyone who is endorsing a candidate or would just like to talk; this is a chance for equal time for everyone," said Wain, who is also the Campus

Coordinator for democratic presidential candidate Paul Simon.

In addition to speakers, the SGA will provide a van every hour on the hour to take students to the Bulloch County Courthouse where they can register to vote on the third floor in a matter of three minutes.

"The SGA stands 100% behind student activism in the political process," added Wain.

Hundreds of rolls of toilet paper streamed down onto the Hanner Field House floor, halting play for eight minutes between the GSC Eagles and UALR Trojans Thursday night. The Eagles went on to win the game 57-48 behind strong defense and aggressive rebounding. See story, page 5. (Photo: Matt Stanley)

Anti-Depression Week program takes shape

By Boffie Ann Johnson
Staff Writer

The 8th Annual Anti-Depression Week, held from February 8-14, will be full of special lectures and presentations around the campus.

"This program was designed to help students cope with depression," stated Audrey Campbell, a GSC counselor. "It seems that most students get depressed during winter quarter."

The program was designed to show students that depression is normal and that there are ways on campus to cope with depression.

In addition to lectures, campus dorms are sponsoring various activities. Organizations around campus will be giving out helium balloons to spread happiness and show their support.

"The nursing program has presented the idea to have a campus-wide 'hug day,'" added Campbell.

The week events begin on Monday, February 8, when Frieda Brown emphasizes "good nutrition as a way

Coeds crash but shall return

By Ryan Blake

GSC freshmen Marina Samaltanos and Monica Brock had no idea what they were in for as they drove onto a street which they mistook for the highway.

Samaltanos and Brock were travelling to central Florida from Statesboro on Martin Luther King's holiday to visit relatives and friends when the car was broadsided on driver Samaltanos' side after running a stop sign.

"I thought I was on the highway which would not have a stop sign," explained Samaltanos, the driver of the car. "I did not realize we had been hit until I woke up."

Samaltanos fractured her pelvis, broke her nose, and received 50 stitches across her forehead, nose, cheek, inside and outside her lip.

According to police reports, if Samaltanos had been wearing a seatbelt, the damages would have been more severe. The seat belt would have pinned her against the car, stated Samaltanos.

"My friends are helping me out a great deal but I think I will tape my story and play it each time someone asks of my injuries," said Samaltanos.

Brock, who suffered contusions to both legs and one eye, was treated

SOAR seeks new leaders

By Boffie Ann Johnson
Staff Writer

Southern's Orientation, Advisement, and Registration Leadership Team is looking for students with good leadership and communication skills, who are dependable, and carry at least a 2.5 GPA to join the team.

SOAR helps thousands of rising freshmen and transfer students at summer orientations every year, Program Coordinator Audrey Campbell said.

Anyone can apply to be a SOAR leader. Interested students should attend one of the two organizational meetings scheduled for February 9 at 1 p.m. and February 10 at 4 p.m. Both meetings will be held in the Herty Building, room 105. "At these meetings, a job description will be presented along with important dates and information," Campbell said.

All uniforms will be provided for the 15 leaders that will be selected in early March. Campbell added that a salary of $800-1000 has been set for the summer.

Some travel will also be part of the SOAR program. "The team will attend a leadership convention sometime during April in Mississippi," Campbell said. There is also a retreat planned for the leaders.

"The SOAR program is a good experience and lots of fun," Campbell concluded.

Ski Trip Survival

What You Need To Know
For Your First Ski Trip

By Bill McAllister

Special to the George-Anne

Well, I must've done something right; I'm still alive! And why shouldn't I be? I'm no different than any other college student who is faced with the traumatic experience of conquering Mount Everest (29,028 feet) for the first time. OK, it was the Bunny slope (8 feet, about the same height as the Blue Building).

I went to Boone, North Carolina, last weekend for what I thought was going to be a relaxing two days of skiing. (It was really three because I skipped classes on Friday. If any of my professors are reading this, my doctor's appointment was in the Appalachians.)

Take it from a beginner, if it's your first time on a pair of skis, the word "relax" does not exist. But the words "Oh, *?@!!!" will be with you all the way down the mountain.

Since I am back from my first ski trip, I feel that I am now qualified to give helpful tips to all of you virgins-to-the-slopes. We will call these the Do's and Don'ts for the first time skier. Or, simply put, slope know-how.

Do's

1. When skiing, make sure to keep your body covered warmly. Ski instructors love to point the snow blowers at beginners.
2. Stuff about four throw pillows in your pants. The ski instructors love to stop and start, stop and start the ski lift. The pillows will soften the impact when you hit the glacier below.

3. The most important thing to learn as a beginner is the snow plow. This is when you point the front tips of your skis inward to slow down. Don't let the ski instructors see you doing this. A beginner's afternoon is a living hell if caught.

Don'ts

1. Don't rent skis from a guy named Smiley. I could have bought out Donald Trump for the same price.
2. Don't assume that every blonde-haired, blue-eyed, 6'2" male is named Franz or Sven. He's probably from "Bubbville" just like you and me.
3. Don't wear an all-white ski outfit. You might as well play in a meteor shower; the results are the same.
4. Now, this is the most important Don't of all. Guys, don't expect to find the St. Paulis Girl as your waitress at the local pub. The pub that I frequented had only one qualification to be a waitress, and that was you had to look like Sasquatch!

Well, I hope these helpful hints will make your first ski trip a safe and pleasant experience. Just remember, I survived and so will you.

Oh yeah, one more thing, take Highway 321 to the mountains. The State Patrolmen only give out warning citations.

Calling all J. Studs...

The George-Anne has often been described as a newspaper FOR students BY students. The first part of this description is easy enough to see.

The paper comes out (usually) every Thursday. Most of you pick up a copy on your way to class, from one of the multitude of receptacles located around campus, to give you something to read in the few minutes before the professor begins his lecture on "The 206 bones of the human skeleton and why you have to know them all by Friday."

Everything the typical college student could ever want is between its 6, 8 or sometimes even ten pages, from Mike Mills' comprehensive coverage of Eagle sports, to Cathy McNamara's up-to-the-minute news to Mike Klug's thought inspiring editorial page. The personals, puzzles and comics give everyone something to read.

The second part of the description is a bit more ambiguous: "BY students." What exactly does that mean?

It's pretty simple. Students do everything. Reporting, writing, copy editing, selling ads, constructing layouts—you name the job and some energetic student is doing it to give you the best paper possible.

You would think that all of this specialized news stuff is probably handled by GSC's best journalism students. Wrong! This is the exception rather than the rule.

Of the nine people currently on the news and editorial staff, only three are actually journalism students. Why is this? WHO KNOWS!

According to GSC journalism instructor Tom Carter, there are approximately 65 students currently enrolled in the school's journalism program. It doesn't take a math major to see that there is a discrepancy here.

What are the other 62 of you doing? Not a lot of writing, to say the least. Admittedly some are writing for another paper, but that's a different story. This still leaves a lot of journalism students slogging through college with no experience for applying for things such as internships or even—God forbid—real jobs.

The G-A can work for you. It's as easy as picking up the phone, calling the office (681-5246), and saying you want to write. And, yes, you will get paid.

So get off of your butts and do something with your life.

Parenthood planning woes?

Finally a clinic has been established in the Savannah area to take care of the sexual problems that students at GSC may encounter, without the threat of embarrassment, ridicule and the horrors of going to the Infirmary. A Planned Parenthood Clinic has been established in Savannah to serve the contraceptive, counseling, pregnancy testing and sexually transmitted disease testing needs of the Southern student body and the Savannah area at large. The clinic is located in the Ellis Building at 44-B Lee Boulevard at Abercorn. The phone number to make appointments is 351-0116.

The clinic offers many other services including birth control supplies, annual examinations and counseling. All services rendered are CONFIDENTIAL and very affordable due to the student discounts offered.

Planned Parenthood is a quality institution dedicated to offering economical, complete service and is sensitive to the particular needs of college-age students. This clinic was designed to aid the student and the non-student alike with some of the more difficult times of their lives. The people at Planned Parenthood are sympathetic and understanding, and no form of harassment or pressure is exerted on the patient at any time.

This clinic does not offer pregnancy terminations, but referrals for all options to other clinics and Planned Parenthood of East Central Georgia in Augusta are available. Remember, these services are offered confidentially and no one but yourself need ever know. According to Georgia law, contraceptive information is available to all citizens of any age without the need of parental consent.

If you are in trouble or just want information, call Planned Parenthood today at (912) 351-0116.

Welcome aboard

The George-Anne would like to welcome Miss. Terra Terwilliger to our staff. She will be taking over our features section and should bring a fresh new spirit to our pages. Welcome aboard!

On rain, weirdness and God

Rain: can't live with it, can't shoot it.

Something happens here at Southern every time it rains. Sure, I know it makes the grass grow and yes, it does provide the freshmen with puddles to play in, but that's not what we're talking about here. I'm talking about the sudden mood swings that inexorably come with any change in the weather.

Completely normal and well-adjusted people who, on any other day would be full of energy and enthusiasm, seem to fall into manic depression at the first sign of gray skies. Look around, you know who they are. They are the ones slouched in the corner of the chair with the half-open eyes and the string of drool running down their faces. Their bodies live but their brains have withdrawn into some warm crevice until the sun reappears.

From the editor's desk...

You can try and cheer them up. "Come on, let's go work out!" Their eyes stare off into some void beyond the peanut butter sandwich in front of them. "Let's go see a movie!" More drool. "Your cat just took a dump in my shoes!" Their eyes finally close with such a leaden thump that you turn to see who's knocking at the door.

They sit and complain about how bad the weather is until you are sure that their jaws must be getting cramped. They sleep on anything that will stand still and support their weight. They are the epitome of sloth.

Rain is magic. It puts people to sleep better than a quart of whiskey and doesn't cost half as much. It brings with it an aura that prevents homework from being done. Papers are not written, tests are not graded, the world grinds to a muddy, wet halt.

Rain brings out all the weirdness in us. Why do people always stand at the entrances of buildings when it rains? Do they think that, by standing there and looking at the sky, they can focus their cosmic power and make the rain stop long enough to let them get to their next class spot-free? Perhaps they simply enjoy watching others get wet. "Hey

Bob, look at that one! Looks like someone dunked her in a swimming pool and forgot to wring her out."

I, for one, enjoy watching the freshmen carefully pick their ways across campus. They dodge every puddle and cling behind every ledge as if their image would be ruined if they arrived to class wet on a day when it was actually raining.

It has been said that rain is the way God refreshes the world and that we should be grateful for it. I just can't help thinking, though, as I ride my bike through the silty road water, across muddy fields, and into wandering students, that this is all some sort of joke. I think God makes it rain to remind us that we all look like fools when we're wet and to give us all a good chance of catching a cold. God has a strange sense of humor.

Tale of the dung dungeon

He took the stairs to the third floor because the elevator was once again, out of order. He knew it was going to be a long wait so he took a copy of the Sunday paper along.

Just around the second flight of stairs, he felt mother nature a little hasty as his whole body clinched and tightened. The paper was wound tightly between his white knuckles as he safely made it into the third story mens bathroom of the GSC's Henderson Library.

"It was a routine drop-off," he said as his head bowed to the ground, "I didn't think it could happen to me."

This Senior marketing student entered the vacant bathroom to find that he would have no trouble in finding a clean and comfortable stall. He committed to the middle stall on account of the good lighting. It was 2:15 in the afternoon.

"I was alone, comfortable and after the first 10 minutes it was all downhill," the Marketing major replied. (No pun intended.)

But the 15 minute mark crept by and the solitude was broken when a surprising "creek" of the door to the empty stall next to him warned him that it was occupied.

Although he became uncomfortable the business section of the paper kept him preoccupied and he stayed another 20 minutes. He was calm, maybe too calm, as he noticed that his neighbors pants were not gathered at the ankles. Neither did he hear his favorite pitch of the porcelain dropping. In fact, he did not realize anything.

"It is a weak point but it will never happen to me again," he warned.

3:00 p.m.

It was the well lit stall that saved him because as he was cleaning up, contemplating on whether or not he should steal the toilet paper for the game against UALR, he noticed a glimmer of light coming from his feet. He noticed a large, hairy masculine palm holding a small compact mirror turning and fidgeting as if it was focusing on him.

His eyes lit up and his pants went up as he left the celestial pit and, like a bat out of hell, headed home leaving his bike at the library.

A small warning to students everywhere: one might be safer in a crowded bathroom. Isolated dungeons such as this can be dangerous.

Be safe carry a weapon or use the buddy-system, even natural napalm.

Congrats to Monica Brock and Marina Samaltanos for returning to school despite the injuries after the "Speed Racer" crash during the MLK break. One can really enjoy the pain pills when their away from nagging parents.

Letters to the editor . . .

DEAR EDITOR

The year 1988 could well be a turning point in American history. Since World War II, America has been the world's greatest economic power, as well as the world's greatest military power. It has stood tall in scientific and medical fields and has brought about a new standard of living to our planet.

This nation is sorely in need of a change. I have looked at the current crop of presidential contenders and have determined that there is only one man who has the vision, the courage, and the thoughtfulness to lead this nation to the next highest plateau. The man is Gary Hart.

Some of the other candidates are of high caliber, yet Hart's depth and knowledge of the subjects that influence American life make him stand apart from his rivals. Hart is a man that comes along once in a generation. He has both the executive experience and the new ideas to be a great president.

Perhaps the greatest of Hart's new ideas concerns the restoration of industrial vitality. As president, Hart would launch a national strategy for industrial revitalization where agreements would be made by both the government and industry to set precise directions and year-by-year targets. Hart also favors easing regulations on private financial institutions and strengthening the activity of development centers in the states.

Hart has always been a loner. Throughout his political career he has had a disdain for "politics as usual" and preferred to take his message straight to the people. For all their national exposure, the political experts have only one vote apiece. It is the people who will, in the end, decide what direction to take their country.

I am proud to say I am a Hart volunteer. As a presidential candidate, he gives me something to be FOR instead of something to be AGAINST. I hope to become a Hart delegate to the National Democratic Convention in Atlanta this summer. Anyone interested in joining the Hart campaign, please feel free to call me between 7 and 9 p.m.

Eagles break Trojans, fix Bulldogs to take TAAC lead

By Mike Mills
Sports Editor

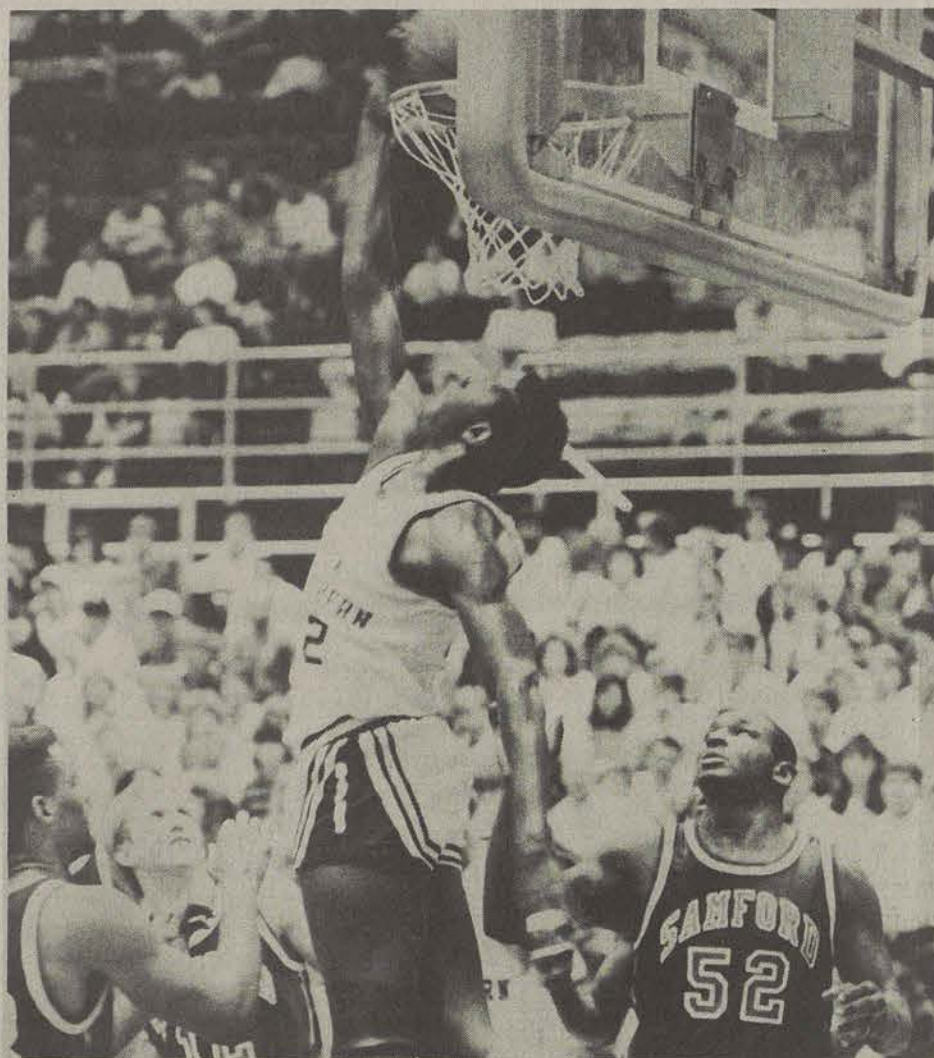

There was an explosion in Statesboro last Thursday night, and only the Georgia Southern Eagles escaped unscathed as they handily defeated the Trojans of Arkansas-Little Rock University 57-48 in a game for the lead in the Trans-American Athletic Conference.

All of 4,961 screaming, toilet-paper-tossing fans jammed Hanner gymnasium to watch Frank Kern's Eagles defeat the Trojans whose two previous losses had been to #1 ranked Arizona and #2 ranked Purdue. The boisterous crowd was a new Hanner Gymnasium record for attendance that both Coach Kerns and UALR Coach Mike "Drago" Newell considered to be the difference in the contest.

"The crowd was a major factor; they really helped us. I think any time you come in to play in that kind of an atmosphere, you are really at a disadvantage," said Kerns. Coach Newell spoke of it being a "great college atmosphere" and reluctantly admitted that his team had been affected by the volume and frenzy of the fans.

With the win over UALR, Southern is now tied with the Trojans at 7-1 in the conference. Overall, the Eagles are 13-3, and UALR falls to 14-3 on the season.

Once again, it was the Southern defense that was a major story in the game. The Trojans who have been averaging over 77 points, were held to just 48 points. Southern's defense, ranked fourth in the nation in scoring defense (56.6 ppg.) consistently denied the high-scoring Trojans shots and took away the rebounding advantage that UALR had enjoyed all season to the tune of 37-27 boards (UALR was ranked first in the nation in rebounding margin by 12.7 boards per game).

Center Jeff Sanders has scored 20 or more points in five of his last eight games. (Photo: Matt Stanley)

Kern's Eagles, whose zone defense has been described as everything from a two-three matchup zone to a diamond-and-one, shut down the Trojans' big men and created the Trojans' 13 turnovers. The Eagles led 27-24 at halftime, due mostly to the 10 points by center Jeff Sanders. Sanders went on to score 23 points in the game and collect 10 rebounds. He was almost unstoppable inside, shooting 10-21, but remarkably seven of his 10 boards were on the offensive end.

If Sanders was hot, the rest of the Eagles were ice-cold, and the Eagles won the game shooting just 38.8% from the field. Guard Anthony Forrest had just nine points to finish second, and point guard Michael Stokes had eight more. Fortunately for the Eagles, the Trojans shot just 41.7% from the field and a measly 16.7% from the three-point line.

The most dramatic play of the game and the turning point to a close contest came when Michael Curry stuffed an errant GSC shot and the partisan crowd exploded, breaking the relative silence stemming from a six-minute GSC scoring drought to open the second half. Coach Kerns felt that Curry's dunk was the difference in the game.

"Curry really ignited the team. The crowd really went wild and stayed that way through the rest of the game. After we got the lead back, we only had one turnover and our kids played intelligently. Rebounding was the key to the game...There is a lot of satisfaction in this win. It was close."

But the glib and offhand manner of Coach Newell was not affected by the loss. "This was probably the lowest offensive output for the year from our team. Southern is probably not one of the best defensive teams in the nation...not with the type of offense they play. I just want everyone to remember that the schedule says that Southern has to come to Little-Rock to play us pretty soon. The conference race is not over by a long shot." Keep talking Coach Newell.

By Mike Mills
Sports Editor

Traditionally after a big game against a conference opponent like UALR, coaches have come to fear the possibility of a let down when playing a lesser opponent, but such was not the case as the Eagles fresh from their victory over the Trojans smashed the Bulldogs of Samford 76-59.

With the victory over the Bulldogs coupled with Little-Rock losing to Stetson, Southern (14-3 and 8-1 in TAAC) leads the Trans-American Athletic Conference by one game. The Eagles have now won 8 straight and are undefeated at home.

The cry of "Defense!" seems to come up every time the Eagles hit the floor these days and last Saturday was no exception as GSC held Samford to just 15 points by half and 59 overall. Samford shot just 37.5% from the field and had 18 turnovers due to GSC's undecipherable sort of zone defense. The Eagles had 10 steals in the game, five from Anthony Forrest who also scored 15 points and had 9 rebounds.

Once again, center Jeff Sanders was over the 20-point mark with 23 and had 6 rebounds. Forward Mike Curry contributed just seven points but had 11 of Southern's 38 rebounds. Michael Stokes, GSC's premier point guard, scored in double figures for the first time since his recent injury; he had 14 and dished out 6 assists.

The game started out unevenly as the Bulldogs had taken a slim four point lead. Then it happened. The Eagles went on a 28-1 run that left both the crowd and Samford gasping. From there on, it was all downhill for the Bulldogs as Southern repeatedly stopped any inkling of a Samford comeback.

In the second half, the Eagles opened lackadaisically and were outscored 7-0 and cut the lead to 12 points. But they would get no closer and GSC coach Frank Kerns cheerfully emptied the bench with 7:00 to go in the game. All the Southern players saw action in the blowout and the Southern attack featured 8 different players adding to the winning total.

For the game, the Eagles shot a respectable 53.8% (28-52) from the field even with a miserable 16.7% (2-12) from the three point line. Samford forward Rembert Martin was the only Bulldog in double figures with 11 points.

Over 2,500 fans attended the game and an even larger crowd is expected as the Eagles attempt to avenge their only conference loss against Texas at San Antonio today at Hanner Gymnasium at 7:30 p.m. The home standing Eagles will be in action again this Saturday against Hardin Simmons also at 7:30. Come cheer on the TAAC leading Eagles this weekend and don't forget your toilet paper.

GSC women snakebit

By Ryan Blake
Managing Editor

The Lady Eagles went down to Tallahassee, Florida to play the Rattlers of Florida A&M with a perfect 4-0 record against the NSWC and came away with a last-second heart-breaking loss 77-76.

Even with the blemish to A&M, Southern still leads the conference by themselves but fall to 11-7 overall. Once again it was center Regina Days leading the Eagles with 28 points on 11-18 shooting. GSC's offense that surpassed the 75 point mark for the 12th time this season had four different players in double figures including guard Antoinette Brown with 21, Phyllette Blake 11 and Monica Evans with 10 points. The rest of the Southern team scored just six points.

Lady Eagle coach Drema Greer was philosophical about the GSC loss, "It was a real physical game and we were on the road... you never know what it's going to be like when you're out there. It was a tough loss, we had them down by 10 points a few times but we let them come back. We still lead the conference and that is the most important thing."

The Eagles now leave on a road trip that will take them to Mercer in Macon, Georgia today at 7:00 p.m. and to Augusta to face Augusta College on Monday February 8th. They will return to Hanner on Feb. 13th against Florida A&M at 7:30 p.m.

Swimmers drown GSU

By Mike Mills
Sports Editor

The Georgia State Crimson Panthers came into last Friday's dual aqua-Meet with the GSC swimming team in anticipation of a close contest and left reeling back to Atlanta suffering a 132-69 loss to the men and a 125-71 beating by the Eagle women.

From the onset, it wasn't much of a contest as GSC took first places in the first four events and a blue ribbon for 20 of the 26 events. Georgia State was thin in depth at many events and could not even field contestants for the men's three meter diving and the women's 200 yd butterfly. The other events including the relays, were poorly staffed with Panther swimmers and the Eagles were able to take full advantage.

With the win over GSU, the Eagle women are now 6-1 with the six victories coming in a row. The Southern men evened up their season record to 2-2 and both teams now look to today's contest against Florida State 3:00 p.m. here at Hanner Pool. Also, Saturday the 6th, both Eagle squads will be in action against Emory at 2:00p.m.

An interesting note is that Tracy Horn who won the women's 200 yd. individual medley and 500 yd. free is undefeated in any individual race this year. Head Coach Scott Farmer, obviously impressed with his women's performance this year, simply stated, "Our women showed why we are 6-1 right now."
