News Briefs

Writer of year reads from works

GSC News Service

An acclaimed writer, Sandra Worsham, will be reading excerpts from her novel in progress as well as her published short stories on April 21 at 8 p.m. in the Foy Recital Hall.

Worsham, the 1982 Georgia Teacher of the Year, has conducted numerous writing workshops from California to Georgia. The Rain Dance Review, a literary art magazine she developed with Baldwin High School students, received a superior rating for two years in the National Council of Teachers of English competition. Currently, Worsham is an Artists-Initiated Grant recipient from the Georgia Council for the Arts.

The event is free and open to the public and is sponsoring by the Campus Life Enrichment Committee and the Milledgeville-Baldwin County Allied Arts, with additional support from the Georgia Council for the Arts.

Author to speak

GSC News Service

This year's Georgia Author of the Year, Barbara Lebow, will read from her selected works on April 20 at 7:00 p.m. in the Southern Center.

Lebow, an Atlanta playwright, received great acclaim in the last New York Theater season with her play, A Shavna Maidel.

Lebow, born in New York, currently lives in Atlanta, where she is playwright-in-residence at the Academy Theater. She is the author of twenty plays, two of which have been cited in the "Best Plays" yearbook.

The program is free and open to the public and is sponsored by the GSC Department of English and the Campus Life Enrichment Committee.

Rural health focus

GSC News Service

Dr. Kevin Fickenscher, a past president of the National Rural and Health Association, will give lectures in the Southern Conference Center on April 24 at 1 p.m. in room 213 and at 6 p.m. in room 116.

Fickenscher will discuss his assessment of the impact of the Bush administration on health care in rural areas, Medicaid payments and the uninsured, the general impact of rural hospital financial failure and the reimbursement differential between rural and urban areas.

Directed to the health professional, both lectures are free and open to the public. They are sponsored by the Campus Life Enrichment Committee and the GSC Center for Rural Health.

Kerr to lecture

Bob Kerr from "The Georgia Conservancy," will be giving a lecture and slide presentation in the Conference Center auditorium at 8 p.m. on April 25.

His topic of discussion will be "Endangered species and efforts to save them." Kerr will take a close look at our state and its environmental changes.

All lectures are free and open to the public and are sponsored by the GSC Department of Biology and the Campus Life Enrichment Committee.

Residence Hall Week

Festivities mark celebration for on-campus residents

GSC News Service

Residence Hall Week, as proclaimed by GSC President Nicholas Henry, will be celebrated April 24-28 to focus attention on the role played by on-campus housing in the collegiate experience.

"The purpose is to focus attention on the residence halls and on the learning opportunities they provide," said Anna Lush, coordinator of the week's activities. "The Residence Life Program is committed to providing social, educational, cultural, and recreational outlets for our students," she said.

Special events are being arranged for residents such as a residence hall cleanup day, as a community service project for each hall. Clothing and other items collected by students will be donated to local charitable organizations.

Events making the week begin April 24 with a One Mile Fun Walk/Run at 6 p.m. at Sweetheart Circle, and Bowling Night from 9-11 p.m. at Statesboro Bowling Center, with prizes to be given away during the evening. There will be a one dollar charge for shoe rentals.

Residence Hall Open House will be from 2-4 p.m. April 25. All faculty and staff at the college are invited to tour the residence hall of their choice. Putt-Putt golf at Puttin' A-Round will be offered from 6-10 p.m. for residents.

Guadalcanal Diary and Fetchin' Bones will provide a free concert sponsored by CAB in Hanner Fieldhouse the evening of April 26, while skating at Statesboro Skate Inn will be free for residents from 6-8 p.m. There will be a seventy-five cents charge for skates. The hall with the most residents in attendance will win a free vacuum cleaner, and door prizes will be given away.

April 27 is Residence Assistant Appreciation Day. A kickball tournament will be held from 3-6 p.m. at Oxford Field. Sign-up information is available from residents assistants. A kite-flying contest is set for Oxford field at 5 p.m.

Daily winners of events will win a prize for their hall. The final day of the week points will be totaled for each residence hall and the winners of overall prizes announced. All events are free to any residence hall student with a valid RSA card and a GSC I.D.

SGA voting Thursday for '89-90 officers

By Clint Rushing
News Editor

The GSC Student Government Association elections are scheduled for this Thursday, April 20. Voting is to take place in the Williams Center lobby and the Landrum Center between the hours of 10:00 a.m. and 7:00 p.m.

This year's candidates include: for Senator; Constance Folsom, Susanmarie Harden, Vickie Davis, Ty Dunaway, William Smith Jr., Tommy Sears, April Hahn, Keith

Wilson, Eric Sharrod Fulcher, Joe Molmar, Robert Sigler, Phil Calandra, Veronica Lovett, and Cindy DiPaulo.

Running for the position of Vice-President of Financial Affairs are: Allen Sanders, Amee Adkins, Jennifer Russo Alesi, and Clay Huckaby.

In contention for the position of Vice President of Academic Affairs are: Sean Glaze and Scott Hickman. For the position of Vice President of Auxiliary Affairs GSC students have to pick from Delicia Ballard and Scott Czerney.

'Tai and Joe' wrap up year

By Dal Cannady
Staff Writer

April 20, 1989 will be the beginning of the end. As students vote for new Student Government Association officers, they will be saying goodbye to the Federico-Hayes administration.

Known more commonly as Tai and Joe, these two officers are almost finished with what they feel was "a very good year." According to Tai, "this administration had three objectives: to increase student involvement, to increase student representation of campus committees, and to increase the amount released to the students from this office."

In retrospect, Federico and Hayes feel successful in all of these objectives, to a point; however, both officers wished they could have achieved even greater success in these areas. "We weren't as successful as we would like to have been. But it is not due to a lack of trying," said Hayes. Federico feels that some of their success will be seen on election day. Both officers are expecting a 100 percent increase in ballots over last year's 717.

"We feel that a lot of our work will help in laying a foundation for future administration," added Federico.

British entomologist delivers LeConte lecture

GSC News Service

The 1989 LeConte Scholar's lecture tonight will feature zoologist Sir T. Richard E. Southwood, Linacre Professor at Oxford University, delivering two addresses, one at noon and one at 8 p.m. on the GSC campus.

Southwood is a British entomologist world renowned for his expertise in ecology and environmental problems.

The first lecture, directed primarily to the interest of biologists, will be in room 218 of the Biology building, and is entitled "Population Dynamics of the Viburnum Whitefly—a 25 year study."

"Diseases and the Natural Environment—an Evolutionary Viewpoint" will be of interest to the general public, and will be at 8 p.m. in the auditorium of the Southern Center for Continuing Education.

"Professor Southwood has conducted field and laboratory research on a wide array of problems and is a world authority on ecology and entomology," said GSC entomologist Dr. James Oliver, "especially in the areas of ecological methods, insect-plant interactions, and environmental problems."

Southwood has earned doctoral degrees from the University of England and Oxford University and has five honorary degrees from England, Canada, Sweden, and Australia. He is a member of 14 learned societies, some of which he has served as president, and is a member of the Royal Society, the Norwegian Academy of Arts and Letters, the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, and the U.S. National Academy of Sciences.

The professor has been awarded the Forbes Medal, the Huxley Medal, the Scientific Medal of London Zoological Society, and the Linnean Society Gold Medal. He was appointed Knight Bachelor in 1984.

Currently the head of Oxford's Department of Zoology, Pro-Vice-Chancellor, and Vice-Chancellor-Elect, his publications include four books, editorship of two others, reports of World Health Organization scientific groups and of royal commissions on environmental pollution, and numerous research papers.

Visitation Day scheduled Saturday

GSC News Service

College bound high school and transfer students who are narrowing their choice of campuses will take a closer look at GSC during spring visitation day on April 22.

GSC's admissions officials expect "another big turnout" of some 1,000 students and parents for the Saturday open house on campus, a quarterly event which drew more than 2,000 visitors during the fall and winter quarters.

College representatives from housing, admissions, financial aid and academic departments will be available to meet with the students and answer questions. The day opens at Hanner Fieldhouse at 9:30 a.m. with an orientation and remarks by GSC President Nicholas Henry and other officials.

Tours start at 12:45 in front of Hanner. The Landrum Dining Hall will be open until 2 p.m. for visitors to have lunch on their own.

Further information is available by calling Kay Stough at the admissions office, 681-5531.

To aid in her "losing" effort, the owner picks some of the worst players in the league who are either past their prime or untested in the majors. Included in this bunch are Tom Berenger (Betrayed) playing Joe Taylor, a washed-out former all-star catcher with bad knees and Charlie Sheen (Wall Street) as Rick Vaughn, an untried rocket-armed pitcher fresh from the "California Penal League" for car theft. One bothersome aspect of this flick is the character played by Berenger as an utter copy of the part that Kevin Costner played in Bull Durham. The characterization, the wisecracks and the situations are the same, but not as effective as Costner's brilliant character of Crash Davis. Also thrown in for good measure is a love interest for Berenger with his estranged ex-wife that tends to distract rather than heighten the action of the movie. But, problems aside, the hilarious aspects of this movie overshadow everything else and make this flick well worth the $4.75 (besides popcorn) I paid.

AI's Insights

By AI Allnoch
Sports Editor

Like a lot of other college students (and Americans in general), I enjoy playing golf. And also like many of these people, I have discovered that golf is an incredibly difficult game to play well.

I fell in love with the game the first time I played (or attempted to play) two years ago. The endless challenges and possibilities, in some ways, made the sport more interesting than my life-long favorites, baseball and basketball. I even began watching televised golf tournaments, which, to me, were previously akin to watching truck and tractor pulling on ESPN or country music videos on The Nashville Network.

Golf is frustrating, however. There are so many variables and so many things to think about that I sometimes wonder how anyone can pull off a successful golf swing.

But it is possible, and when I cannot do it and I send a ball shanking off to the right or skull one 20 yards in front of me, I want to cry. Hackers, I believe they call us. The frustration occasionally even leads me to toss a club or two down the old fairway. Good sportsmanship? Of course not, but who thinks of sportsmanship in the wake of a topped 5-iron?

In the May issue of Inside Sports, actor Robert Conrad's words of his young relationship with golf provide a bit of comfort. "The hardest thing is getting used to being this bad at something," he says. "My whole life I've generally excelled at anything I've attempted in sports."

"I thought I'd be better at this game than I am. I see guys who weigh 130 pounds and look uncoordinated step up and whack the ball off the tee straight down the fairway. I try the same thing and it trickles off sideways into tree. Boy, that's humbling."

Boy, you're right, Robert. I will not give up the game though. No matter how many shots I miss and no matter how many times I say "That's enough, I quit," the beauty of golf and the lure of success won't allow me to quit.

I see potential in my game. I've experienced 250-plus yard drives and I've birdied holes before; I just cannot do these things consistently for 18 holes. But a perfectly struck golf shot, as any golfer will tell you, is one of the greatest feelings in any sport. I've seen my crisp 9-iron shot rise high into the air, suspend itself against the blue sky, then drop softly onto the green, and I want to see it again and again.

I plan to continue playing golf and I'm going to do my best to control my anger, improve my game and enjoy it. In an interview with Golf Digest, PGA star Mark Calcavecchia said something that reminded me of what many people often forget about sports. "The important thing is to have good time. It's a game. Why play it if you don't enjoy it?"

Judging from the often crowded fairways at our infamous Meadow Lakes course and Claxton's delightful Evans Heights layout, a lot of you enjoy golf. There are many complaints in the golfing world of course overcrowding and slow play. The better golfers get irritated when the lesser-talented of us get out there and spray balls all over the course.

But if you are having fun, don't be discouraged. Play as fast as possible, follow the rules and don't get angry. And if you are not swinging well, the game can still be fun!

The Scottish character Agatha McNaughton, in Michael Murphy's book Golf in the Kingdom, speaks of the game: "Golf is for smellin' heather and cut grass and walkin' fast across the countryside and feelin' the wind and watchin' the sun go down and seein' yer friends hit good shots and hittin' some yerself. It's love and it's feelin' the splendor o' this good world." And those words should be enough to keep anyone who is frustrated with golf from giving it up.

GSC football team faces key losses

By Sandy Hanberry
Sports Writer

Coach Erk Russell has entered spring football practice with two clear-cut objectives in mind: to replace the graduated seniors and to form a stronger fundamental base from which to build.

The twenty day ritual of spring football promises a shakeup in the GSC squad this year, as the Eagles will return only two-thirds of its starting lineup for the 1989 season.

This year's squad also represents a changing of the guard, or perhaps more appropriately, a changing of the center on the offensive line. The majority of the changes should come in the offensive scheme, which loses five starters to graduation. Primary positions of concerns for Coach Russell are center and wide receiver.

With the graduation of "outstanding center" Dennis Franklin and his backup Jay Marshall, Coach Russell expects to have to choose his starting center "from a group of redshirt freshman none of whom have ever played a snap."

With starting wide receivers Tony Belser and Ross Worsham lost to graduation, Coach Russell anticipates that Donnie Allen and Daryl Belser will step forward into the positions.

The GSC defense should be strong, with nine starters returning. Russell likes the looks of the defense, but he always knows there is room for improvement.

Russell plans to give every player an opportunity to win a starting job. He knows that he must, for the most part, know his opening day lineup by May 6, the date of the spring game ending spring practice. Yet he hopes to see players rise above the crowd, establish themselves and challenge for starting positions.

Coach Russell also hopes that his crop of 19 signees and numerous walk-ons will provide stiff competition for starting positions and help produce a strong squad for next year.

Russell believes that "the team is on the right track." But he knows that in the remaining weeks of spring practice and the 19 days of preparation in the fall before the season, "the team has to keep moving forward fast or somebody will run over us. There is no time to think about anything except our first game of next season, Valdosta State."

Quarterback Raymond Gross (15) and slotback Earnest Thompson (12) will lead the Eagles offense next fall. (File photo)

Ask Joe Sport

Hey all you loyal followers of sport! Do you like to know what's going on behind the scenes in the college and professional ranks? Or do you simply yearn to learn obscure, inane and worthless bits of trivia? Well either way, Joe Sport is here to help and entertain you.

I will field any questions you may have concerning sports (whether I really know the answer or not) as well as occasionally offering my own meager opinions and serving up fascinating (?) morsels of sports knowledge and trivia. Additionally, you will have the chance to answer a trivia question and win a surprise sports gift! The first correct answer randomly drawn from a hat wins. Send your questions and answers to Joe Sport, the George-Anne, LB 8001.

Dear Joe Sport,

I heard star guard Jay Edwards was leaving Indiana University for the NBA. Is this true? Clyde Parrish, Atlanta

JS: Yes. And rumors say that he's doing it because he got his girlfriend pregnant, and that IU students have turned against him and are posting signs reading "Jay Edwards goes pro to support illegitimate child." Evidently, he took Nike's slogan of "Just Do It" literally.

Dear Mr. Sport,

How many PGA tour events has Jodie Mudd won? Stu Miller, Statesboro

JS: The former GSC star won his first and only event to date last August when he defeated Nick Price and Peter Jacobsen by a stroke in the Federal Express St. Jude Classic.

Dear Joe Sport,

Why do baseball players use so many clichés on the field, like "you're the man," "chin music" and "took him downtown"? Dwight Remy, Logan Pass, Montana

JS: Because they are encouraging, colorful, fun to say and you simply wouldn't be a baseball player if you didn't use them. For a complete list of baseball clichés, write Joe Sport, LB 8001.

TRIVIA QUESTION: What two former winners of the PGA Championship are also former champions of the Chris Schenkel tournament?

Fitzpatrick having a career year for Eagles

By Matt Willis
Sports Writer

Baseball catchers are not usually known for their blazing speed on the basepaths, or anywhere else for that matter. But don't tell that to GSC's junior catcher Rob Fitzpatrick. With four stolen bases in the past week, Fitzpatrick leads the Eagles with 23 steals.

However, stealing bases is not Rob's only talent. The 5-11, 185 lb. New Jersey native is currently leading the team in four other major offensive categories as well as being one of the top fielding catchers in the country.

In addition to boasting 23 steals, Rob leads the team with a .344 batting average, 34 RBIs, 43 hits and eight home runs.

What is the secret to all this offensive firepower? Fitzpatrick credits it to nothing more than experience and hard work.

"I'm not really doing anything different from the past two years," he said.

"I've just had two years of experience and I feel good at the plate right now. Plus, I feel like I'm looked to for leadership so that pushes me to excel."

The veteran catcher also claims that his participation in a summer league has helped. "I really feel that you have to play in the summer to stay on top of your game. Then during the season you have to put in a lot of time in the batting cage."

For his success stealing bases, Rob says that he can thank coach Jack Stallings and coach Scott Baker. "They told us that we needed to run more aggressively this year. I knew that I had the speed to steal bases. I just needed to work on my technique," he said. "Both coaches really helped me with the mechanics of base stealing."

Fitzpatrick has been so successful, in fact, that he needs only eight more

GSC catcher Rob Fitzpatrick.

Eagles split with Baptist, lose to Stetson

George-Anne staff reports

DELAND, FLA.-In the first game of a crucial three-game series this weekend, Stetson broke GSC pitcher Scott Ryder's spell on TAAC opponents, touching him for 11 hits and five runs. Ryder struck out two and walked seven as he went the distance. A doubleheader scheduled for Saturday was rained out.

The Hatters did the major damage in the bottom of the second, scoring four runs on three hits, a walk, an error and a fielder's choice. They added their final run in the sixth on an RBI double by Tim Farrand.

The Eagles scored in the top of the eighth to avoid being shut out. Brett Hendley singled home Jeff Coughlin, who had doubled and moved to third on a single by Chris Abner.

Pitcher George Tsamis recorded the win, going seven innings and striking out eight GSC batters, who managed only four hits off the Stetson hurler. Ryder fell to 5-3 on the season. The Eagles, who dropped to 19-20 overall, 8-5 in the TAAC, host Augusta College tonight at 7 p. m.

GSC vs. BAPTIST- The Eagles used three pitchers to shut out Baptist College 5-0 and salvage the second game of a doubleheader last Wednesday at J.I. Clements Stadium. Baptist downed GSC 3-2 in the opener. The split gave the Eagles a 19-19 record overall.

Pitchers Kevin Thompson, Peter Bouma and Jay Berkner combined for eight strikeouts, while only allowing two hits and two walks in the shutout.

Thompson (2-4) picked up the win. Doug Eder, Darin Van Tassel, Rob Fitzpatrick, Jerry Shepard and Thad Clayton had hits for the Eagles, and Fitzpatrick stole four bases in the contest.

Baptist used a suicide squeeze in the top of the seventh of game two to break a 2-2 tie and score the winning run. Shepard led the Eagles at the plate with three hits in three tries. Joey Hamilton (2-6), pitching in relief of Russell Hendricks, absorbed the loss.

Intramural Corner

By Tiffany Gardner
Sports Writer

Did your team get turned away at Intramurals? You probably did not make it to the office in time to beat the 125-maximum team limit. Did you try to join a team and could not because of the "twenty people to a team" rule? There are reasons for these limitations.

125 teams, including independent men, independent women, dormitories, sororities and fraternities compete for the title of Intramural Softball champions. Eight more teams were rejected by the intramural office and they will be notified if a team drops out.

"We thought about using the Fair Road Recreation Center, but we decided to just limit the teams," Janell Hendrix, coordinator of intramural games, said. On campus, only three games are played at a time, but if games were being played at the recreation center, five games could take place at a time and teams would not have to be limited to 125, she said.

Softball is not the only popular intramural sport. Only 70 teams were expected to compete in intramural basketball. Instead, over 120 teams signed up. Four teams played at a time and no games were played on nights of varsity basketball games.

"The teams have been limited because of the amount of time and the lack of facilities," said Mike Hogan supervisor of intramurals. Hogan predicts 130 to 140 basketball teams will enter next year. He said if growth of interest in intramural sports continues, the number of teams will be limited every year.

INTRAMURAL NOTES: A singles racquetball tournament begins May 1 with entries due April 28. Other

Press rights stripped from student paper

Censorship... it is an ugly word that carries with it images of revoked civil rights and the aberration of our own freedom guaranteed by the first amendment. It has come to our attention that the dreaded hulking form of censorship has invaded our sleepy little collegiate community and reared its ugly head to snuff the free flow of information.

Webster's dictionary defines censorship as: a censor stopping the transmission or publication of matter considered objectionable. The key to that definition lies in who is the censor and what right he has to decide what is objectionable and what isn't.

Because GSC is a state college, it is subject to state and federal constitutional laws including freedom of the press. The George-Anne is therefore legally protected from censorship. The Eagle, apparently, is not. The Eagle editors were apparently restricted last week by their corporate and administrative owners, the Statesboro Herald and Morris Newspaper Corporation, from informing the GSC student body of a controversial sports story.

It is a shame that any newspaper trying to serve the best interests of the GSC student body can be liable to any type of control and censorship. We understand the Morris Newspaper Corporation's and the Herald's position--their business is business, privately owned--but they are apparently infringing upon the rights of these journalists and preventing the public from receiving information they have a right to know.

With the existence of such restraint, student newspapers owned and operated under private ownership cannot hope to be truly an "independent voice."

It is a disturbing statement of the entire journalistic community that this sort of situation was condoned, celebrated and encouraged. At the same time, The Eagle's efforts to break away from this type of restraint are encouraging and noble.

The real danger in this situation is that censorship is like a cancer that if left unchecked will eat away at the integrity and effectiveness of the journalistic community until all that is left is the raw sewage of propaganda to be fed to an uninformed public.

It is for this restraint that The George-Anne is coming forth in support of The Eagle's efforts to publish the truth, in spite of what is and was at stake. They put their butts on the line for journalism and for this, we commend them.

It is restraints such as this that make us wonder if the high sounding pronouncements of our constitution are just pipe-dreams in the face of such blatant censorship in our own community. The Eagle sought to print the truth and were prevented in spite of any constitution.

It is restraints such as this which make us realize the restriction of other freedoms may soon follow.

Censorship is an ugly word and unfortunately the corporate employees of The Eagle now understand its definition with stark clarity and realize their own limitations. As fellow journalists we, at The George-Anne, will fight wholeheartedly to retain our rights and their rights to freedom of the press.

Life at 21 was strange and exciting

By Cathy McNamara
Editor

From the editor's desk

Cathy McNamara

I like being 22, but 21 was undoubtedly more fun.

It was the anticipation of being carded each time you purchased an alcoholic beverage (Ha, HA! I'm twweenntee-won), the feeling that you can go anywhere you want legally and the power that comes with owning for the first time ever a "real" ID.

Strange how few times people card you when you first turn 21 and you're dying to show them your ID, almost begging them to card you when just a few short months ago you were praying they wouldn't. And then you turn 22 and everyone cards you but by this time it's nothing more than a hassle.

The anticipation is worn and the power is not as significant.

So you're 21 years old and you go to buy a six-pack and for some reason you still feel like you're breaking the law and any minute now the Chief of Police is going to bust in Johnson's Beverage Store and say, "Hey, you're not 21! Throw down your wine coolers and put your hands in the air!"

It's that you've been buying illegally for years and this legal power stuff you're just not quite used to yet. You approach the counter, dare to write a check (illegal buyers never write checks because their fake IDs say someone else's name) and offer your ID. They look at you, they look at the ID, but low and behold, they hand it back without a word.

So it is true! I am really 21, you think with relief. And, that's fun.

It's like when someone threatens to sue you and you laugh because you know you don't have any assets. All you have is a pair of Reeboks, a high school class ring and your sacred ID. You say, "Go ahead, sue me, make my day" in your best Clint Eastwood voice.

It's like when you tell your friends something shocking and they open their mouths and make the strangest face you've ever seen as if what you've just told them is bigger than Watergate or the Iran-Contra affair.

And, considering the things that have been happening around campus lately, it probably is.

It's like interviewing someone who puts cigarettes out in the palm of their hands.

It's strange and unconventional. That's what life is like; you just have to know where to look.

Nicks psychologically repel paint

By Terry Snyder
Staff Columnist

Snyde Remarks

Terry Snyder

I have eight thousand one hundred and thirty-six nicks in the paint on my car. None of them are visible from over three feet away, but I know exactly where each one is located.

It's one of those afflictions of having your own car. You always feel like you're driving a wreck because you know thousands of things about it that could be just a little better.

That's the problem with a lot of things. The better you get to know them, the crummier they get.

Have you ever seen a member of the opposite sex from a distance, become interested in that person, approached him or her, and found that he or she is really some kind of mutant whose afflictions grow steadily as the distance between you decreases?

So anyhow, I have these nicks in the paint on my car. I could spend the money to get the car painted, but I just can't bring myself to it. After all,

I don't really use the paint; it's just there.

If it disappeared tomorrow I wouldn't even miss it when I drove the car. It doesn't make the car go faster, ride smoother, handle quicker or get better gas mileage.

A good paint job costs at least a couple of hundred dollars. Why spend that kind of money on something that seems to have no use whatsoever? I worry about spending money because it's never easy to tell if you'll enjoy what you bought with it as much as you enjoyed having it.

When you have money in your pocket, you can walk through any store and know that you have the power to possess anything that doesn't cost more than you have. I never really appreciate this power until I have to give it up.

Sure, I could get the car painted and not have a single nick for quite a while, but, for the same amount of money, I could get new speakers for its stereo, and I might enjoy those more.

To this day, I haven't been able to decide whether I'd enjoy a paint job, new wheels, or new speakers the most. The end result is that I'll probably never get any of them. But I can buy one of them. I have that power; that's what's important.

Maybe that's why you never see happy people in Jaguars. They always look like they just killed their mothers. Maybe that's so nobody will pull out in front of them with a Volvo. People who drive Volvos do that a lot. Then they slow down. That's why Volvos are so safe. If the idiots that owned them would learn how to drive, they wouldn't have to be.

But anyhow, every guy who drives a Jaguar had to give up sixty thousand dollars worth of 'I could buy that' power. Now, when he sees something for sixty thousand dollars, he can only think, "I could have owned that, but I bought this car instead." That must be a horrible realization, and that's what you actually see on the faces of Jaguar owners.

I think the whole point is that nothing is perfect. Show me anything you think is perfect, and I'll tell you how it could be better. We lost the ability to accept perfection in the fall of Eden. The first little bit of knowledge Eve gained was that Adam's hair could be a little bit thicker, and the first knowledge that Adam gained was the Eve's thighs couldn't.

If you don't believe in Eden, maybe it's because we've gotten that much better at rejecting the ideal of perfection. Remember that perfection is only the condition of things that just aren't going to get any better.

Fan of The George-Anne sends article for students' benefit

Dear Editor:

I would like to start my letter off by saying that I enjoy reading your paper, The George-Anne. Our daughter is a freshman at GSC, and brings us her newspapers from school when she comes home to visit. The paper is very informative, and lets us, as parents, know what is going on at GSC.

I have noticed that you are always asking opinions from your readers. Well, I was reading a neighboring county's newspaper last night, and being a faithful reader of Dear Abby, I found an article that I thought you might want to print in The George-Anne.

Enclosed is the article, and please print it in one of your upcoming editions. It is a very important piece.

Thank you for your time on this matter, and keep up the outstanding work you are doing for your readers.

Sincerely,
A Concerned GSC Mom!

PARENTS URGE TEEN-AGE DRIVERS TO USE, NOT LOSE, THEIR HEADS

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am enclosing a "paid notice" that appeared in The Raleigh (N.C.) Times. Perhaps you can use it in your column. My wife and I thought it was very moving and deserved nationwide exposure. We hope you agree.

LORI AND KEVIN SHANNON, RALEIGH

Letter

DEAR SHANNONS: I agree, and so did Claude Sitton, my "boss" at The Raleigh Times: Here's the piece:

MESSAGE TO TEEN-AGE DRIVERS FROM THE PARENTS OF A DECEASED TEEN-AGE DRIVER

You have a power that no one else on Earth possesses. Your teachers, the police, the governor, the president—none of them have this power; only you have it. This "power" is the power not to kill yourself while behind the wheel of an automobile. This "power" is the power not to kill others with the car you're driving. This "power" is the power not to be a victim of the slaughter of teen-age drivers on our roadways.

You've all seen the stories in the newspaper. Many of you were friends of the teenagers killed. Maybe they were speeding, or passed illegally, or ignored a stop sign, or tried to beat a red light. You cried for them, went to their funerals, participated at memorial services held for them at school. And then got into your car and did the same thing because it could never happen to you!

We want to tell you about another group that doesn't have your "power", and that's your parents. When you leave this Earth, your parents remain behind. They are left behind to grieve over your premature death. They are also left behind to grieve for the future that you'll never experience for yourself—your high school graduation, your wedding, your first child. There will never be another vacation where the "whole" family goes on a trip. On Christmas, your parents will decorate a little tree to put next to your cemetery marker. The smiles around the Thanksgiving table will never be as wide. Mothers Day...Fathers Day...your birthday...the first warm day of Spring—will always cause your parents to think of what might have been.

One year ago today, we buried our teen-age son, Jack. Jack was killed in an automobile accident. The accident was a direct result of ignoring the posted speed limit. Jack was a great kid, and we could not have asked for a better son. However, a few seconds of bad judgement, whether caused by inexperience or a sense of "teen-age immortality," or both, cost Jack his life. There is no pain on this Earth that's worse than losing a child. This tragedy will haunt us for the rest of our lives. And every week more parents must face the dreaded realization that they will never see their child again on this Earth—never to kiss them, never to laugh with them, never to hold them close. Never again.

Last month, three local teen-agers were killed in an accident; the two brothers are buried next to Jack. When we saw these three kids lying side by side in the cemetery on Valentine's Day, we knew we had to try to do something to stop this carnage.

How successful we are will depend on you: that means each of you exercising your unique "power"—and using peer pressure to convince your friends to do likewise. If we succeed, it will mean that all these teen-agers, and our son Jack, haven't died in vain.

BARBARA AND JACK RATZ, SR., RALEIGH

DEAR BARBARA AND JACK: My heart goes out to you in your sorrow. The piece you wrote is indeed powerful—and a fitting memorial to your son, Jack Jr.

I hope editors of high school (and college) papers will feel it's worthy of printing. If so, consider this "permission".

I know this piece will be clipped and saved by many. And God willing, some lives will be saved.

A bass fishing tournament will be held April 22, entries due April 21. An intramural Quiz Bowl will take place May 15, entries due May 15. The Bud Light Dixie Classic softball tournament will be held June 2-4, entries due May 31.

It is State Qualifier time for GSC's intramural softball teams. The Intramural Dept.'s annual Softball State Qualifier Tournament will be held May 5-7 at the Sports Complex.

Entry is open for 24 men's teams and eight women's teams. The entry fee is $50 and two Thunderbird softballs. All entry fees are due by May 3. For further information, contact Intramurals at 681-5261.

noted. "My role as catcher mainly involves keeping the younger pitchers on track. The veteran pitchers know how to pitch and control a game, but the younger ones sometimes need reminding."

After completing his physical education degree next year, Fitzpatrick plans on trying to make the major leagues. "Catchers are in demand, so I feel like I have a shot." Who knows, he may steal his way to the top.
