REPUTED MOB FIGURES CHARGED:

Twenty reputed Mafia figures were indicted this week in Chicago. Some experts say this is a step toward dismantling organized crime in the city. Alleged members of the "Joseph Ferriola Street Crew" face charges ranging from murder to loan rackets and gambling.

NINTENDO TRUCK HIJACKED:

Five men kidnapped the driver of a truck carrying over $1 million worth of Nintendo's IronSword adventure games in New York and hijacked the vehicle. The hijacking took place shortly after the truck left a Long Island warehouse with 20,000 IronSword cartridges and remote controllers.

SPY SUSPECT SUSPENDED:

Felix Bloch, a senior U.S. diplomat who was suspected last summer of being a spy for the Soviet Union, was officially suspended and stripped of his $80,000 salary by the State Department — a move toward firing him. Bloch, 54, was serving in his native Vienna when he was first suspected of spying. The Justice Department says the case isn't closed.

STUDENTS TERRIBLE IN GEOGRAPHY:

U.S. high school seniors have no trouble identifying major countries that appear on the nightly news, but suffer from "feeble geography skills" otherwise, says a report out Wednesday. Officials released the first National Assessment of Educational Progress on geography and said deficiencies were "a serious national concern."

MAN CONVICTED IN BOY'S RAPE:

A man with a 24-year history of violent attacks on young people was convicted in Tacoma, Wash., of raping a 7-year-old boy, cutting off his penis, strangling him and leaving him for dead. Earl Shriner, 40, faces a possible 99-year prison term. There's a trust fund to receive donations for corrective surgery for the boy.

TANKER ACCIDENT DUMPS OIL:

A British Petroleum Co. tanker ruptured its hull with its own anchor, spilling 250,000 gallons of crude oil off Huntington Beach, Calif., officials said. Coast Guard officials said the slick, measuring two miles by 400 yards, was drifting toward the popular surfing beach, often used as a scene in movies and television shows.

LOTS OF LUGGAGE LOST:

Airlines lost record amounts of luggage during December, the Department of Transportation reported. Records show 420,205 people filed reports of "mishandled" or lost luggage in the worst showing since the government started tracking such reports two years ago.

WINTER IN WEST; SPRING IN EAST:

A Pacific storm will dump more rain and snow on Washington, Oregon and northernmost California Thursday, forecasters say. Another storm is expected to hit the Northwest Sunday and could be the last of the series of storms. The United States east of the Rockies can expect a mostly mild, springlike day Thursday.

AMERICA'S CUP BACK IN COURT:

The America's Cup will once again be argued before the New York State Court of Appeals. At stake is the 1992 race site. The battle began three years ago when New Zealand challenged the use of a faster catamaran, which had never been used, by the U.S. The boat defeated New Zealand's monohull in two races. New Zealand was awarded the cup in the first legal battle. The U.S. won on appeal.

WARRIORS END LOSING STREAK:

The Golden State Warriors ended two streaks Wednesday night by defeating the Philadelphia 76ers 113-112 in Philadelphia. The Warriors ended the 76ers 12-game winning streak, as well as their own losing streak at the Spectrum which spanned 11 years. In other NBA games: Celtics 146, Hornets 125; Jazz 108, Nets 101; Suns 128, SuperSonics 124; Lakers 121, Bulls 103.

More temporary buildings discussed

By SANDY HANBERRY
News Editor

Plans to introduce four new temporary buildings, generating 18 new classrooms and 50 offices, to GSC's campus for the 1990-91 school year are currently under way. The need for the buildings stems from the rapid growth GSC has experienced in recent years.

When the final planning stages are completed, they will be sent along with GSC's specific needs to the Regents for review.

The Regents will then conduct a bid process whereby the rights to build these new temporary buildings will be awarded.

Present projections indicate that the Regents will have chosen the contractor by late April. Construction on the buildings should begin in June, shortly after graduation.

Completion of the buildings is expected by Sept. 1.

Four tentative sites are currently under review, and if approved, the four buildings will be positioned as follows: (1) in between the North Building and the racketball courts, (2) on the commuter parking lot located off Forest Drive adjacent to the Annex Building, (3) between and behind the Developmental and Political Science buildings, (4) Between Hendricks Hall and the tennis courts on the grounds of the Marvin Pittman School.

Although the Regents will have the final word about what style of temporary buildings will be built, Vice President of Business and Finance Richard Armstrong expects that the new buildings will be similar to the North Building.

"We're very pleased with the North Building. We'll have a good deal of say in the selection process. We'll write a description of something similar to the North building."

The structures will vary in size and inner configuration; their average size will be between 8,000 and 9,000 square feet. The buildings will be constructed with the needs of their future occupants in mind. It has not yet been decided who those future occupants will be, but those plans are also under way.

According to Armstrong, the buildings will be on a "lease agreement which will cost approximately $100,000 per building, per year."

Unless alternative sources of revenue materialize, the appropriations for the buildings will come from the college's general operating fund.

GSC official concerned about pageant

By Laura Mcabee
Assistant News Editor

Jane Thompson, assistant dean of Student Affairs and the Miss GSC Pageant director, has expressed concern about the propriety of the scholarship pageant.

Thompson, who has directed the pageant for 5 years, says that her concerns stem partially from the fact that scholarship has very little to do with the actual competition.

The winner of the pageant does, however, receive a $1,000 check that may be used towards tuition or elsewhere.

In the scoring of the scholarship pageant, 40% of the total points go to the talent competition, 30% to an interview, 15% to evening gown competition and 15% to the swimsuit competition.

Thompson remarks that the swimsuit competition, especially, is sexist in nature. "The pageant is based too much on physical appearance, with not enough emphasis on talent," she said. "There is even a 'swimsuit competition' winner. What is that supposed to mean?"

During the 7-minute interview portion of the pageant, contestants are asked questions dealing with topics such as current events, hobbies and special interests. Contestants' grade point averages are not considered, so the questions in the interview are the only indicators of scholastic aptitude.

Another point of contention is the fact that there seems to be an increasing degree of pettiness involved in the contest.

Thompson cites a series of harassing phone calls that she has received from people claiming to be relatives of the contestants. Some callers have been very critical of the selected judges Thompson stresses that the judges are selected from a list of certified judges.

Apparently, the callers felt that there would be a degree of bias on behalf of the judges.

Thompson also believes that there is an unhealthy competitiveness in the pageant. She is uncomfortable with the notion of an event where the competitiveness has, in some cases, taken the form of undermining other contestant's confidence.

Thompson stated that she is not talking about all contestants, and that some do, indeed, participate for fun.

Due to the negative factors, however, Thompson recommends that GSC discontinue sponsorship of the Miss GSC pageant.

Dawn Stevens (front) was crowned Miss GSC last year by previous winner Valerie Morton. GSC officials are now expressing concern over the pageant and the way it is being run.

Population growth addressed at Global Issues Conference

Special to the George-Anne

"Ignoring the problem of rapid population growth in the developing world may be the ultimate global blunder-one from which there may be no recovery," according to Werner Fornos, president of the Population Institute in Washington, D.C.

As the risk of thermonuclear war between the superpowers finally shows signs of fading, "at least some portion of the funds used in the arms race for the past 40 years can now be directed to an issue that may determine our very survival," Fornos said in a Feb. 1 speech at the Conference on Global Issues at GSC.

Priority uses for this 'peace dividend' must include the assistance required from the industrialized world so that developing nations can cope with the problem of having too many people and too few resources, Fornos maintained.

He said that the problem of rapid population growth is "at the root of, or at least exacerbates, poverty and deprivation in the third world."

Fornos noted that during this week alone, an additional 1.7 million people will be added to the world. "This is occurring at a time when rain forests are being destroyed, top soil is eroding, the global climate is becoming warmer and the ozone layer is thinning," said Fornos.

"The dangers inherent when a world's population outgrows its environmental resources demand a new commitment to reshaping our future."

Furthermore, he maintained that the industrialized world, especially the United States, needs dynamic political change from a government philosophy that is crisis-oriented to one that looks to the next decade and not just the next election.

While pollution was once thought to be a problem of the industrialized world, it is now recognized as causing crises for the developing world as well.

"To a greater or lesser degree, industrialized nations are implementing efforts to control or mitigate the pollution associated with factories and cities," he said. "Third world countries, pressing hard for rapid development, cannot afford the often costly technology required to minimize the resulting pollution."

Observing that the world's current 5.3 billion is expected to reach 6 billion in the middle of the decade, Fornos stressed that 3 billion young people will enter their reproductive years in the next generation. "That is equal to the population of the entire world in 1960," he stated.

Hidden in these statistics, according to Fornos, is the fact that the world is "demographically divided." Ninety percent of the 92 million people added to the world last year were born into the poorest countries; countries whose economies are stagnating and whose people are torn by civil strife, social unrest, and, in most cases, living in brutal poverty.

Meanwhile, the U.S., once the leader in international population assistance, has reversed its course in the past six years, refused to contribute to the United Nations Population Fund and reduced its contribution to the International Planned Parenthood Federation, said Fornos.

"The short sightedness of the current generation is dangerously narrowing the options of our children and grand children," he contended. "Ironically, the resources exist to build a world that is in ecological and human equilibrium. The quality of life for future inhabitants of the Earth may well be determined by the actions taken by the present generation. Thus far, our record as caretakers of this fragile planet has been far less than commendable."

Little sister program questioned

By LAURA MCABEE
Assistant News Editor

Recently, the Greek little sisters, a group of women who work closely with fraternity brothers and perform various functions in conjunction with the organization, have been the subject of much controversy.

Dr. James Orr, the assistant dean of students, mentions that the little sister program is something completely different now than what it used to be when it was first incorporated into the Greek system.

"Originally," Orr states, "little sisters were girls who dated or were engaged to fraternity brothers. The title 'little sister' was bestowed on the women as an honor."

Orr goes on to say that today's image of little sisters has changed drastically in the past 10-15 years. Little sisters, now, are often expected to perform household duties such as cooking, cleaning, and hosting fraternity parties, aside from other tasks.

Statistics say that, far from being respected as they once were, little sisters are often the victims of sexual abuse from the fraternity brothers. This is partially due to the fact that the little sisters may be perceived as the property of the fraternity.

Although GSC has, to a great extent, escaped this nationwide trend of exploitation, some local fraternities are beginning to end their little sister programs. This is partially in response to pressure from the organizations' national chapters in an attempt to put a stop to the alleged abuses that are occurring in the chapters nationwide.

Some national sororities have stipulated that their members are not to be little sisters, and some have even discontinued their big brother programs.

Orr states that it is a travesty when something that began as an honor has reached the point that it has gotten so bad that it becomes necessary to discontinue it.

"Fraternities and sororities have a lot of influence over their members' lives," Orr said. "When you've got this situation, the responsibility is to make a positive influence."

Orr states that women may get involved in these situations because it is a popular thing to do or out of loneliness. He states that being a little sister can create a niche to help the women feel as if they fit in. He attributes certain cases to a "groupie" phenomenon.

Anti-Depression Week begins Monday

By SANDY HANBERRY
News Editor

Anti-Depression Week, a week-long event designed to counter depression, will take place at GSC Feb. 12-17.

The purpose of the week is to add cheer and festivity at the time of year when many people have the blahs or are sliding into depression.

According to reports, as many as 35 million Americans suffer depression or recurring bouts of "Winter blues" at this time of year.

February was chosen because people "have a tendency to withdraw during the winter" and "are not as active," said Director of Counseling and Career Development Audrey Campbell.

"The highest suicide month is April, but the depression that causes it builds up in January and February."

During the week of activities, the Counseling Center will be giving away helium balloons and will be hosting a series of seminars on combatting depression.

Topics of the seminars include handling stress, being single and breaking up. Anyone wishing to attend any of these seminars is encouraged, but not required, to sign up for them in the Counseling Center.

The College Activities Board will sponsor two events for that week. Comedian Bertice Berry, will appear on Feb. 13 and video buttons will be made on Valentine's Day.

The Student Nurses Association will administer hug therapy to students between classes in Hanner Fieldhouse.

Delta Phi Alpha is planning an ice cream social for German Club and Delta Phi Alpha members.

Residence Life will sponsor Bowling Night at the Statesboro Bowling Center on Feb. 12, Roommate Appreciation Day on Feb. 13 and Staff Appreciation Day on Feb. 15.

The Chemistry Club will sell love potions (test tubes filled with heart candy) for 75¢ each.

Alice in Wonder- Theatre South is presenting "Alice in Wonderland" every night through Feb. 10 at 8 in the McCroan Auditorium.

"Alice in Wonderland" combines characters from the classics, "Alice in Wonderland" and "Through the Looking Glass," written by Lewis Carroll. The play is a fully-staged production, highlighting the biographical aspects of Carroll's fantasy.

Tickets are $4.50 for adults, $2.50 for pre-college students and $1 for GSC students with college I.D.s. All seating is general admission.

Environmental Protection- Bob Green, deputy regional counsel for the Environmental Protection Agency, will be on campus on Monday, Feb. 12, to meet with students, faculty and members of the community.

He will be speaking on "Environmental Protection Issues in the Global Market Place: What Business People of the 1990's Need to Know." The presentation is geared towards students in business, political science, history and biology field.

The informal talk will be held at 4 p.m. in Room 7 in the Hollis Building and is open to the public.

G.R.A.S.S.- The eighth annual Georgia Resident Assistant Saturday Seminar will be hosted by the GSC Department of Residence Life on Saturday.

More than 400 Resident Assistants from schools around the state will attend the day-long conference to learn more about their jobs.

G.R.A.S.S. is divided into six parts, including three interest sessions. At each interest session the RAs will choose one program out of more than 10 to attend. The programs will provide RAs with new ways of looking at old problems and discussing topics such as rape, suicide, stress and activity programming.

Representatives from 19 schools are expected to be in attendance.

Sharon Whitaker, vice president of Student Affairs at Paine College in Augusta, is the Keynote speaker for the conference.

GSC to play host to visiting artists

By CAROL KLEINGINNA
Staff Writer

Four prominent artists will display their works at GSC in an exhibit that began yesterday and will run until Feb. 28. The styles of their individual pieces will vary widely, ranging from paintings and ceramics to works on paper.

Artist Bert Brouwer has previously exhibited his work at GSC. His colorful paintings pay homage to many great artists, such as Van Gogh, Magritte and Gauguin. They also cover a variety of subjects, from landscapes to historic themes.

Born in the Netherlands, Brouwer received his Master of Fine Arts degree from the University of Wisconsin. He now lives in Michigan.

Sudie Lea O'Conner's distinctive work is done with woven paper. She is a professional studio artist and teacher who lives in Augusta. Her works have a multiple dimension effect, and are inspired by patterns in nature. Aspects of Southern landscapes are prevalent in her art, and she completes her imagery by using several art media.

Another Georgia artist, Harriet Nix, considers herself "a collector and processor of memories and visual images." The subjects of her works are drawn from many different sources, ecclesiastical or nostalgic. Her paintings aim to embody special moments in time. Nix received her Masters of Fine Arts from the University of Georgia. She lives in Athens.

Bob Owens is a Georgia ceramist. Currently, he is the head of the Fine Arts department at North Georgia College. Owens was named Art Educator of the Year for 1989.

Dance Theatre South to premiere

Special to the George-Anne

"For Kicks," the premiere presentation of Dance Theatre South, will be performed Sunday, Feb. 11, at 8 p.m. in GSC's McCroan Auditorium.

With choreography by Pat Kelly and an ensemble of seven male and 10 female dancers, the performance will provide the audience interpretations of contemporary and traditional themes—with a twist—set to both familiar and original music.

Dances in the "For Kicks" program will be performed to the music of Elvis Costello, Sting, Scott Joplin and Tom Grose, among others.

All but four of the dancers are currently students at GSC, including several actors from Theatre South, the college's resident program.

Pat Kelly, who staged all the dances herself, attended GSC for three years before doing advanced study and running her own school in New York City. Kelly has extensive choreographic and performance experience as well. The recent Theatre South production, GREASE, is among her latest accomplishments.

Tickets will be available at the McCroan box office on the day of the performance or can be ordered by calling (912) 764-9696.

New program continues to grow

By YOLANDA WALLACE
Features Editor

"This program is a beautiful child. Help us make it grow," TOPSTEP founder Victoria Futch said at a tutorial session.

The number of students applying for positions in TOPSTEP (Tutoring Others Program: a Students Teaching Each Other Project) has swelled as the program grows and begins to gain publicity.

"We hope to train 80 tutors this week," said Learning Resources Center employee and TOPSTEP assistant Cheryl Claiborne as 25 GSC students crowded into the tutorial center in the Henderson Library for a tutorial session held on January 23.

"Some of the people you are going to tutor don't have family members who have gone to college, so you're going to be role models," Futch told the students. "If that makes you uncomfortable, tell us, because we want you to be [role models]."

The tutors in TOPSTEP work with children at Julia P. Bryant Elementary School. A sister program to TOPSTEP works with students in kindergarten through second grade. TOPSTEP is set to soon move into William James Junior High School and Statesboro High School before moving on to the rest of Georgia and the country.

Mondays at Julia P. Bryant are devoted to third-graders, Tuesdays to fourth-graders, and Wednesdays to fifth-graders.

Over 40 tutors travel to the school each of the three days. They arrive at the school at 3:15. "Just when school lets out, so there's a moment of utter chaos until the tutors find the students' folders."

Red dots are placed on the folders to signify students who need help with math. Blue dots signify students who need assistance with reading, which can range from spelling to reading to organizing homework time.

At one of the initial sessions, folders were passed out, due to "so many folders and so few tutors," Claiborne said, but at subsequent sessions, tutors will choose folders.

Tutoring starts at approximately 3:30 and lasts for an hour.

"Every week, one person will be designated to stay until the last child leaves," Claiborne said. "If a parent fails to pick up a child twice, the student must leave the program."

Since college students are very busy, Claiborne recommends that tutors work only one day a week. "We don't want your volunteer time to become a burden on you."

When tutoring the students, Carol Nesmith said it is good to remember that "what's second nature to you is not second nature to the students. Be positive, be encouraging, and be creative, but be careful to look at worksheets. If you come up with something real creative or real different, the student might have a problem when he gets back in the classroom and has to do something else."

Science professor Arthur Woodrum said that most students who require tutoring have poor self-images. "Improve their self-image by positive comments; never tear them down. Tell them when they're doing something wrong; just don't tear them down while you're doing it. Any way you can, build up his self-esteem," he said.

"While you're tutoring, the student should be the most important person in your life at that moment," he said. "It is an honor to have the student think that you can help him. Get him to verbalize his thought process so you can see where he is. Don't point the answer out to him; let him find the answer and then praise him for it."

Synnovie Heggoy told the tutors, "You may not think of yourself as a teacher, but for these little folks, they're going to think it's pretty nifty to have their own college teacher come in to work with them."

The four elements for a good tutorial session, Heggoy said, are time, motivation, cognitive ability, and the materials the tutors use, but the most important is a good rapport with the student.

Tutors should take a few minutes at the beginning of each tutorial session to introduce themselves to the students, she said.

"Don't get discouraged if you don't see great, big changes in the student's ability after you've been tutoring him for two or three weeks. Remember, they have a limited attention span at that age level. Break up the hour into sections of learning time. Do the most hardest thing first, then take a break."

"Remember, they've had a couple of years to get into the academic mess that they're in. If they don't seem really motivated, it may be just a case of them pulling back to avoid failure or to check you out."

"Also, they're not very sophisticated thinkers yet, so try to remember what it was like when you were first learning to read or when you struggled with something. Sometimes, we assume people understand something when they really don't."

Said Claiborne, "Be aware of your time. Establish a rapport before the session, and re-establish it at the end by praising them."

Said Futch, "Be very, very real with these kids. They spot phony right away."

From George-Anne staff reports

—The Blackrose Rugby Tournament will take place Feb. 10 and 11 on GSC's soccer fields. The Eagles will play teams from Auburn, Clemson, Alabama, and other schools.

—Four tutor counselors are wanted for the GSC Upward Bound Summer Program. Upward Bound is a program designed to motivate and prepare high school students for post-secondary education. Applicants must 1) have achieved college sophomore status, or better, by May 1990; 2) have a 2.30 or better GPA; 3) be available daily from June 11 through July 31, 1990 [no summer school, please]; 4) be committed to working with young people; 5) be conscientious and dedicated. Salary is $1,350 [$900 plus room/board]. Applications will be accepted through March 26, 1990. If interested, apply at the Upward Bound office in the lower level of Williams Center or write to Landrum Box 8071 or call 681-5458.

—Recognized as one of the most prestigious collegiate writing contests in the country, the Rolling Stone College Journalism Competition is increasing the cash prizes of the contest from $1,000 to $2,500 for each winning entry. Smith Corona Corporation, cosponsor of the contest for the fifth consecutive year, will contribute a PWP 7000 Laptop word processor to each winning student.

Student journalists can enter the competition in any of three categories: General Reporting (any subject), Entertainment Reporting (profiles and news features on music, film, sports, and personalities), and Essays & Criticism (analytical, evaluative or interpretive compositions on any subject, including reviews).

All entries must have been published in a college or university publication between April 1, 1989 and April 1, 1990. Deadline for receiving entries is June 1, 1990. Each entrant must have been a full- or part-time student in an accredited university or college during the school year in which his or her entry was published.

If you have any questions about the contest, contact Contest Coordinator John Jordan at 212-350-1221. Every entry has an equal chance to win.

—GSC Prof. John DeNitto will present his 10th annual piano recital for the benefit of the Georgia Southern Foundation on Feb. 11 at 3:30 p.m. in the Foy Recital Hall.

First started in 1981, DeNitto's recitals have raised over $18,000. Proceeds from the $10 contributions by patrons will be used for student scholarships, the Honors Program, and other academic enrichment programs.

The classical and romantic music recital will feature compositions such as Von Weber's "Perpetual Motion" and other works by Kuhlau, Scarlatti, Mendelssohn, Rachmaninoff, and Engelmann.

DeNitto has performed with the Savannah Symphony as a resident pianist and with the Roswell Symphony in New Mexico.

—As part of the Faculty Recital Series, Douglas Graves will perform on the cello and Natalia da Roza will play the piano Thursday, Feb. 15 at 8 p.m. in Foy Recital Hall.

—On Saturday, Feb. 17, a "Take Back the Night" rally will be held at the Southern Center for Continuing Education. Sponsored by the GSC Criminal Justice Club, the National Organization for Women (NOW), and the Victim-Witness Assistance Program, the rally will be intended to increase crime awareness by focusing on the problems of date rape, the need for more effective lighting, and increased security on the GSC campus.

For more information, contact Sylvia H. Colber, president of the Criminal Justice Club, at 489-8725, or contact the Victim-Witness Assistance Program at 764-4605.

Tutoring well received

The students at GSC are discovering that there is a problem that needs to be solved before they can solve their problems. There is a need for more free tutoring on campus, more specifically in the LRC.

Tutors are available at almost any time, if you can afford it, and who is to say that tutor is going to be effective? Tutoring should be a free service provided by the school to ensure the success of its students. Most students are on a very limited budget which does not, as a rule, include tutoring. We at the George-Anne feel that if GSC is to grow and emulate some of the fine, larger institutions around the country, the success of its students should be paramount. One of the ways to help ensure prosperity of the students is accessible tutoring.

There are free tutors at the LRC, but there are so few and so many need help, they become ineffective. The college needs to take a long look at the varied needs of the students as the college expands and realize that this is one of the most important.

Recently I printed a letter written by Brian Martin which pointed out one of the many parking problems we are experiencing here at GSC. I would like to personally applaud Mr. Martin's letter and recognize him for being one of the few who aren't too lazy to at least express their opinion on my editorial page.

The parking situation here is quite a problem that no one seems to know how to solve. Students complain, faculty complain, no one is satisfied, least of all, me.

But parking is not the only traffic-oriented problem we are facing. Traffic at GSC is utterly ridiculous! I wrote an editorial earlier this quarter pointing out the fact that someone here is going to be seriously hurt, and probably, a death will occur as a result of a traffic accident. Perhaps I wrote that editorial in vain as no changes have been made since.

From The Editor's Desk
Clint Rushing

I don't know the solution to the problem, but I have a few suggestions. First of all, campus traffic must be reduced greatly. For those students who live close enough to walk, driving to class is idiotic. The administration needs to (for lack of a better term at the moment) forbid students living on campus from driving and parking on campus during the 8 a.m.-5 p.m. Sure that may seem drastic, but it would work if the students cooperated. And there's no chance of that, huh?

Secondly, the "right turn only" sign at the end of Forest Drive needs to be either removed or obeyed. Someone is going to be blind sided one day and the administration is going to say, "That sign shouldn't have been there; why didn't someone remove it?"

Next, the administration needs to take a good, long look at the parking problem here on campus and do what Chicago, New York, Atlanta, Savannah and every other metropolitan area has had to do to combat growth in the population of drivers. Instead of using all that wide open space we use for parking lots (i.e. the lot behind the student union, the Hanner lots, the grass lots behind the Southern Center and all that space behind Newton), they need to go up. Put up a parking garage, or two, or three, or four!

A parking garage! What a concept! Then all that space the administration has allocated to parking can be developed and utilized efficiently. Now, am I imagining things when I say that going up, rather than out, is an efficient parking solution? And don't give me that story of a few parking garages not being cost effective; is a $10,000,000 student union cost effective if the rest of the campus can't even accommodate the student body? Maybe parking garages should have been built instead. I think a student union could have waited until our "real" problems were solved.

GSC is growing too fast for the facilities to accommodate. Students can't find spaces to park so they park illegally, they get tickets and then complain about it, and the problems just continue to arise. Parking and traffic are always going to be problems until someone sits down with the administration and tells them to open their eyes.

I'm not knocking the job our administration is doing, I am simply saying that the problem is already here and getting worse. Will someone address it?

Existentialism: Efficiency of belief

It's Miller Time

By Ashley Miller

The principles of existentialism are an often misrepresented, and more frequently, misunderstood philosophy. In his book Existentialism, Jean-Paul Sartre, the creator of the controversial doctrine, asserts the following: "First of all, man exists, turns up, appears on the scene, and, only afterwards, defines himself. If man, as the existentialist conceives him, is indefinable, it is because at first he is nothing. Only afterward will he be something, and he, himself, will have made what he will be. Thus, there is no human nature, since there is no God to conceive it. Not only is man what he conceives himself to be, but he is also only what he wills himself to be after this thrust toward 'existence'. Man is nothing else but what he makes of himself. Such is the first principle of existentialism."

This ideology simply means there is no God, no life after death, no reward for good (heaven), no punishment for evil (hell), and no meaning in life other than the choices made in life.

Sartre, speaking of his own work, states, "There is no reality except in action. Man is nothing else than his plan; he exists only to the point that he fulfills himself; he is therefore nothing else than the ensemble of his acts, nothing else than his life."

For many who read this, it may seem a bit much to grasp at first, but realize that it is philosophy based on a premise that there is no Higher Consciousness or Being. To study this idea, whether to reaffirm your own faith or to test it, one must take an objective attitude.

In existentialism, one motivation for doing good is to earn the good opinions of others since there is no after-life to reward man at the end of physical cognizance. Sartre says, "the man who becomes aware of himself [i.e., I think; therefore, I exist] through the [self-actualization as a solitary being in life] also perceives all others, and he perceives them as the condition of his own existence."

In other words, if I think and then define that ability as my existence, then acknowledging the reader of this column as a being who also exists is indisputable. That person also exists on the same level as my state.

At several points in life, one must think over his situation to reaffirm his self-actualization and that of others. Each human is a being with independent choices to make, yet lives are bound by those same choices. If there is no reward for being good, then why be good?

To achieve the good opinions of others and to satisfy the internal self are the only reasons. Each decision made is a step in the definition of one's being.

Most important of all to remember is that the decisions made must not be hampered by what is feared or desired as the outcome. The decision must be made because it is the right decision to make. Once decided, there is no going back and full responsibility for the choice must be taken.

A trite old cliché expresses it best: No good deed goes unpunished. For the existentialist, there is no external reward—period. There is only the occasional harmony of the outcome with cultivated acceptability.

Sartre adds that "in the bright realm of values, we have no excuse behind us, nor justification before us. We are alone, with no excuses".

So what does all this mean anyway? That is a question very personal and different for each individual (in the greatest sense of the words personal and individual).

If this mere taste of this mind expansion is interesting, then go find Jean-Paul Sartre's Existentialism and read it. There is not time nor space to discuss all the aspects of the doctrine, but the fact that you are reading this is an indication that you have a broader vision than the people who stopped at the title. It makes no difference if you agree with it or not, just that you are willing to try something alien to most. If you want to respond to this—good or bad—or just have something to say, then write:

Parents make plea

Dear Students,

You have plans for your life-goals to reach—a brilliant future.....

So did Linda Lancaster, a doctoral candidate at the University of Maine, Orono, Maine. On February 18, 1989, the drunken driver of a pickup truck struck her down as she and a classmate walked along a sidewalk in the campus community. Linda died three hours later.

All her goals and plans for the future were wiped out in one senseless moment of drunken violence—a violence our legislators have yet to recognize as murder—and our courts of law waiver over justice for the victim.

You have plans for your life—but, take a moment as you walk across campus to ponder on your chances of becoming the random victim of a drunken driver. We all carry the same risk, as did Linda. But with your help we can—and must—keep our streets and sidewalks safe.

Take a stand. Refuse to ride with an intoxicated driver. Volunteer to drive a friend who has partied too much. Write your congressmen to initiate deterrent legislation against killer drivers: no time off for good behavior—no suspending half a sentence—no plea bargaining.

Do something positive, if not for yourself or for a friend, then for someone who loves you.

Keep your future alive!

Manager was wrong

Dear Editor,

I am writing this letter to both sympathize with Mel Woods, the manager of J.D.'s Café, for those problems he has had and condemn him for his solution to those problems.

It has been several times that I, as a white male, have been eating in the various restaurants around Statesboro at night and have had a large group of black people come in and not only be very loud and boisterous, but also sit at the same table that I was at without asking me if I minded or anything. They do this, I feel, to be rude and intimidating and I will usually not go into a restaurant that has a large black group already in there because of these past experiences.

There is no doubt that this situation has happened to black people around white groups many times more and has been much worse than anything a white person could imagine but if some blacks feel that they should also be rude to people who have done nothing to them, then this can only promote more racism.

Although Mel Woods may have other reasons to not want blacks in his business, I could see where he felt that some action was necessary if what had happened to me as a customer was also happening in his business.

Mel Woods' decisions to serve bad food to blacks is unfortunate and will definitely cause a boycott of his business by both blacks and whites, with myself included. But Mr. Woods may have been responding to what he perceived as a threat to his business.

Salaries the pits...

Dear Editor,

I am employed at Georgia Southern College or University— it depends on what you want to call it. I think the salaries are the pits! The salaries are extremely low, no dental benefits, and not the best kind of health care in the world. I have worked at another college and the benefits were great even if the salary was low. There has to be a balance somewhere. Here at Georgia Southern College or University there is no balance. The salary I make at GSU, I could work at McDonald's, Roses or even apply for welfare and food stamps and I would be better off. By the time they take out state and federal taxes, insurance, etc. my check is so low I could cry. I think GSU is getting all the recognition for becoming a university, but what about the employees and their benefits? I hope Dr. Henry would consider that we do the bulk of the work and without employees how would the university operate? His salary is probably three times the average person at GSC. Even professors with a doctorate degree only make about $20,000. Everyone doesn't have a doctorate degree, however, we still have to deal with 11,000 students at the same time. I hope Dr. Henry reads this article.

A CONCERNED EMPLOYEE

Response to Solomon

Dear Editor,

This is in response to Mr. Solomon's letter which appeared in a recent issue of your paper.

Mr. Solomon, Conrad X. Muhammed did not preach segregation and downplay for any race or religion. He spoke of the problems that blacks have had for years.

If you didn't pre-judge his religion or teachings, you might have heard a good message. If you would have listened without a pessimistic view, you would have heard that people pre-judged Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., saying he was a communist, mobster and radical, when in actuality, he was a man with a good message. Prejudgement caused most of white America to hate this great man who was trying to improve his society.

I might not like your religion or notions on different subjects, but I will listen to you with an open mind. I realize that I can learn something from anybody. Even though I might not agree on that person's views, I will have a better understanding. That is the key, "understanding." Without understanding this campus, county, state, nation, and world will never come together.

I understand that Jews and Muslims aren't the best of friends, but why don't you be the bigger man and not downplay someone else because his religion differs from yours.

We (Alpha Phi Alpha and the Black Awareness Committee) select speakers to show every facet of the civil rights movement to give people a chance to open their minds. Invite you and the rest of the world to come to the next Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. program, but don't come with the doors to your mind shut tightly.

Prejudgement is prejudiced and truth will ring clear when processed through an educated mind. Great minds are usually educated by being open-minded.

Thoughtful pedestrians?

Dear Editor,

For the quite ignorant person who wrote a letter to your paper concerning campus driving, and all other maniacal pedestrians. I submit a copy of an article from the January issue of "The Mirror," GSC's faculty and staff newsletter. It clearly states the laws which pertain to the right-of-way of pedestrians. Unless the pedestrian is on a crosswalk, he or she must yield to traffic.

Traffic is congested enough on campus. And it's not entirely the fault of pedestrians. Just by the number of accidents on campus this quarter, one can see that GSC drivers are not particularly careful. However, that is not the issue I am addressing.

Mindless students lackadaisically cross campus streets anywhere they please, usually in droves. This totally blocks traffic, holding up cars for extended amounts of time. Drivers need to get across campus, too. Please pedestrians, be more considerate of others. And please obey the law.

Ladies tennis future is bright

By DAVID LONSINGER
Guest writer

The GSC Lady Eagle tennis squad will look to bounce back from a disappointing 1989 season, in which the Lady Eagles posted a 7-9 record. After winning the first three matches, GSC dropped nine straight. The Lady Eagles won the final four matches, which head coach Pat Breen feels will give his young team the much needed optimism for the 1990 season.

"The addition of three newcomers combined with the experience of last years's squad gives us a very good nucleus to work with," Breen said.

The newcomer Breen is referring to are #1 seed Anja Fritsch, #3 seed Susana Abia, and Julie Holcomb who hope to make an immediate impact for GSC. The Lady Eagles return #2 seed Karly Kroeger, #4 seed Lori Martin, and #5 seed Monika Brock. Other returning players are Almuth Steinbach and Michelle Strasser are still battling for the #6 seed, but according to Breen, Steinbach has the inside track.

Fritsch, a sophomore from West

Germany, and Abia, from Venezuela, are expected to play in the top three, which will give the Lady Eagles ore depth to be competitive in the conference.

Breen expects to rebound from the 1989 season, but knows it will take time.

"We'll be competitive, especially in the conference (NSWAC)," Breen said. "We're still growing and building, but we're a strong squad because we have a legitimate #1 seed in Anja. The #1 seed will be much improved over last season, but we'll struggle at #2 and #3, but the [biggest] difference will be that we'll be competitive in the NSWAC, unlike last season."

The Lady Eagles will definitely be in shape for the 1990 campaign thanks to the efforts of strength coordinator, George Smith. Smith's weight program coupled with off-season practice and last season's competition has prepared the women for 1990's best.

"George did a fantastic job getting the girls in shape during the off-season and it has been evident during the pre-season drills," Breen said.

The ladies will need to be in good physical shape as they open the season with Middle Georgia College, Georgia State, Berry College, and Samford. In addition to the NSWAC schedule, the Lady Eagles are scheduled to battle Old Dominion, Penn State, and West Virginia University.

"I scheduled the big three for recruiting purposes," Breen said. "It will help in acquiring the two recruits I am currently interested in. Right now, I have #2 and #9 players in Georgia leaning toward Southern. The #2 player is a JUCO in Gainesville, Ga and the #9 is from Alpharetta."

With the two recruits and the returners next season, Breen expects to be in the thick of things for the top two places in the NSWAC in 1991. He was also very optimistic about the current season because of his #1 seed.

"If she (Anja) plays up to her [top] level, there are only two girls in the conference that can beat her," Breen said. "We haven't had a player like her at GSC in four years."

The Lady Eagles will be on the road for three consecutive matches and will not return home until Monday, Feb. 12 when they host the Lady Dolphins of Jacksonville University at 2:30 p.m.

Eagles romped by UNCC 88-68

By MICHAEL STRONG
Sports Editor

UNC-Charlotte's Henry Smith gave a shooting clinic, burning GSC for 32 points, and the Eagles got into foul trouble early which allowed the 49er's to obliterate the Eagles 88-68.

The defeat broke GSC's eight game winning streak and dropped their record to 14-6.

Smith was the catalyst for UNCC as he hit for 17 points in the first half. A half in which the Eagles never got closer than three points. Benny Moss added 10 points in the half to keep the Eagles away. The Eagles on the other had couldn't hit water if they had fallen out of a boat, they shot a dismal 33 percent for the half. Rebounding, usually an Eagle strength, played a large factor, as UNCC outrebounded the Eagles 25-18. All these factors added up to a 16 point halftime lead, 46-30.

Williams added another 10 points coming out of the halftime gate and the 49er's increased their lead to 21 points. UNCC coach Jeff Mullings decided to rest Williams with the large lead. The Eagles then went on a 20-4 run that saw Charlton Young hit two three pointers and Tommy Williams and Emmett Smith hit one a piece to cut the UNCC lead to just five.

But, Williams was just too much for the Eagles, he reentered the game and led the 49ers on a 16-2 dash that sealed the victory for UNCC.

Mike Curry led the Eagles, who shot a season low 35 percent, with 16 points and seven rebounds.

Young added 15, Ben Pierce had 13, and Smith finished with 12 and snagged seven rebounds.

Williams was not the only culprit for UNCC, Moss finished with 20 points and Cedric Broadhurst chipped in with 10 points.

The Eagles play Stetson in a TAAC contest at home on Saturday. Tipoff is set for 7:30.

Swim teams improving with season

By DAVID LONSINGER
Guest writer

Angela Serina, Stacey Scheible and Keri Maschio led seven separate relay squads to help lead the Lady Aqua Eagles to a 38-28 victory over the College of Charleston last Friday.

Serina, Scheible, and Maschio put the Lady Eagles in front early with a victory in the 300 yard Butterfly (3:331.61). From the early going, it was all GSC, as the Lady Eagles took eight of the nine events, dropping only the final event, the 400 yard Freestyle Relay.

Friday's meet featured all relay events, except for two rounds of one meter diving. Lady Eagle Paula Smith captured both rounds from the springboard, giving Smith her second and third diving victories respectively on the season.

Other victorious relay combinations were Jackie Davis, Melanie Johnson, and Karen Welles in the 300 yard Breaststroke (4:26.52), and Amanda Hall, Vickie Hanklin, and Terri Comeau in the 300 yard Backstroke (3:37.80).

The meet took an interesting twist when head coach Scott Farmer inserted Smith, a diver, into the 200 yard Freestyle relay with Hanklin, Johnson, and Khristi Keefe and the Lady Eagles took the event in a time of 2:05.91.

Even though the Lady Eagles have now seemed to put all the pieces together, Farmer remains cautious about the remainder of the season.

"Nothing is as easy as it seems," Farmer said. "We'll have to continue to want it [the remaining meets] because the season will get tougher as we approach the championships."

GSC improves their record to 4-2, winning their fourth consecutive meet. The Lady Eagles have not lost since Nov. 17, when they were handily defeated by Furman (122.5-102.5).

By DAVID LONSINGER

Adrian Bailey, Shane Davis, and Jason Singalewitch led several relay teams to a close victory over the College of Charleston 44-33 last Friday.

The Eagles opened the afternoon with three consecutive first place times to take the early lead. Led by Bailey, Davis, and Singalewitch in the 300 yard Butterfly (3:11.30), along with the teams of Andy Bristow, Jon Floyd, and Tim Eigel in the 300 yard Backstroke (3:18.60), and Mark Brown, Davis, and Bristow in the 300 yard Breaststroke (3:36.06) put GSC up 20-7.

The Eagles never looked back as they posted first place times in seven of the nine events. GSC closed out the afternoon with a victory in the 400 yard Freestyle by Eigel, Mark Von Duyke, Andy Hite, and Singalewitch for the 11 point victory.

Head coach Bud Floyd was, to say the least, happy about the victory, but knows it will not be as easy the next time out.

"We were so good it scares me," Floyd said. "But, they will be waiting to ambush us next week. It has been said that paybacks are hell and that could be the case Saturday."

With the victory, GSC evens its record at 3-3 and bounces back in strong fashion following a tough loss to Emory. The Eagles will return to Charleston Sat. Feb. 10, at 1 p.m., and try to make it two straight.

Practically all of the GSC Greek organizations have a big brother or little sister program.

GSC student Don Mailho does not believe that these programs pose a threat. "I think that it is an honor to be asked to be a little sister or big brother. I haven't seen any cases of abuse here at GSC, and I don't believe that the programs should be discontinued."

One GSC student who is a little sister says that her big brothers treat her as a friend and an equal, and do not require her to perform menial tasks. She claims that she is treated with the utmost respect.

Any phasing out of the little sisters/big brothers programs will likely stem from efforts of the national chapters of the Greek organizations.

Ladies victorious over Augusta College

By PAUL FLOECKHER
Sports Writer

Looking nothing like the team that lost by 14 points to Florida International over the weekend, the GSC Lady Eagles breezed to a 78-56 non-conference win over Augusta College Monday in Hanner Fieldhouse.

The Lady Eagles jumped out to a 10-point lead three minutes into the game and led by as many as 29 in the second half on the way to their 13th victory of the season.

"I'm real pleased with the way that the kids responded tonight," GSC head coach Drema Greer said. "We could've come back out and played as flat as we did the second half of FIU, but I'm just real pleased that we came out and played with a little bit of heart."

The player who showed the most heart certainly was Tracy Wilson, who burned the Lady Jaguars for 32 points on 15-19 shooting from the field and 2-2 from the free throw line. She added nine rebounds and three steals in only 23 minutes of playing time.

Wilson dominated the game from the start, scoring GSC's first 10 points. With just eight seconds gone, the 6-1 junior hit a lay up while being fouled, then hit the free throw to complete the three-point play. After another three-point play, she nailed a lay up and a short jumper to put the Lady Eagles up 10-2.

Wilson, who entered the contest scoring 18 points per game, needed a mere 11 minutes to reach her average. A Wilson lay up off an assist from Deb Blackshear gave her 18 points and GSC a 22-6 advantage at the 9:00 mark of the first half. By halftime Wilson had racked up 22 points and six rebounds.

Sophomore Gwen Thomas, in her second straight start, interrupted the Tracy Wilson show by scoring GSC's final six first half points. Two lay ups and two free throws by Thomas in the final 2:08 of the opening half gave the Lady Eagles a 37-19 lead at the break.

Thomas, who also scored the first four points of the second half, finished the night with 17 points and a team-high 10 rebounds. "I think Gwen is sending a message," Greer said. "She's tired of sitting the bench."

Thomas' lay up and two free throws in the opening minute of the second half ignited a 15-4 GSC run that gave the Lady Eagles their biggest lead at 52-23 with 13:32 left. The spurt included four more points from Thomas, four from Wilson and a three-pointer by Blackshear.

However, the Lady Jaguars doubled their score over the next six and a half minutes, cutting the deficit to 58-46. Senior forward Francean Leverett led the Augusta comeback with 10 points.

Order was restored once the GSC starters were put back in the game. A 16-2 Lady Eagle run keyed by six points from Wilson and four from Vet Cooper put the game away at 74-48.

Although Wilson and Thomas dominated the game, the rout also was a showcase for GSC's depth. All 13 Lady Eagles played at least four minutes and 10 scored. Jill Dunn scored five points and grabbed five rebounds in the first half, and Toy Williams came off the bench to score six second half points.

With the 22-point win, the Lady Eagles maintained their strangle hold over Augusta. GSC has won 16 of the 18 meetings between the two schools, including the last 10 in a row and 12 of the last 13. The Lady Jags have not won in the series since a 72-69 triumph Jan. 3, 1980, and are 0-9 against GSC in Statesboro.

Leverett led the 6-14 Lady Jaguars with 15 points.
