STRONG QUAKE SHAKES CALIFORNIA:

A strong earthquake Wednesday rattled Southern California from the Mexican border to the Nevada state line, setting off rockslides and a fire, rattling nerves but injuring only a few residents. The quake, measuring 5.5 on the Richter scale, rocked a 200-mile radius from its epicenter here, 35 miles northeast of downtown Los Angeles.

MAJOR NORTHROP PROBES DROPPED:

Federal prosecutors are dropping major probes of allegations Northrop Corp. falsified test data on the MX missile and overcharged the Air Force on the Stealth bomber, the Washington Post reported, citing internal Northrop documents. The action comes in response to Northrop's guilty plea to fraud charges and payment of $17 million in fines.

WARRANTS NOT NEEDED ABROAD:

Law enforcement officers don't need search warrants to search non-citizens outside U.S. borders, the U.S. Supreme Court has ruled. The international search ruling strengthens the federal case against former Panamanian ruler Manuel Noriega. Noriega's lawyer Frank Rubino said the decision was "very important to us" and could harm the defense.

U.S. PROTECTIVE SWEEPS OK:

Police making arrests in U.S. homes can make a "protective sweep" of the house if they suspect a dangerous third person is hidden there, the U.S. Supreme Court has ruled. In a 7-2 decision, the court said warrantless domestic searches can be justified to protect the safety of police officers, but critics say the ruling invades personal privacy within the home.

D.C. MAYOR PLEADS INNOCENT:

District of Columbia Mayor Marion Barry pleaded innocent to three perjury and five cocaine-possession charges Wednesday. His lawyer's vow: no plea bargaining or resignation. Barry, 53, is free pending trial June 4. A grand jury investigation has expanded to include accusations of corruption, prosecutors said.

INFANT DEATH TOLL COULD SOAR:

The infant death toll could soar in the 1990s due to growing problems with crack cocaine, AIDS, syphilis, more babies born to unwed mothers and fewer women receiving prenatal care, suggests a new report. The United States ranks 20th among industrialized countries in the number of babies who die each year. The rate is 10.1 deaths per 1,000 live births.

EXISTING HOME SALES DOWN:

Sales of existing homes fell 2.2 percent in January from December to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 3.48 million units, a real estate trade group said. Reason: rising mortgage rates and a usual mid-winter slowdown, according to the National Association of Realtors. The only region that had gains was the South. The median price for existing single-family homes: $96,200.

BUMPER QUALITY VARIES WIDELY:

The quality of auto bumpers varies so widely that some small cars could cost $1,500 more to repair than others after a low-speed crash, according to the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety. The institute tests one type of car each year. This year it tested small, four-door 1990-model cars in four types of crashes at 5 mph.

SHUTTLE ATLANTIS LAUNCHED:

Atlantis put on a fiery display visible to millions of East Coast residents awake at 2:51 a.m. EDT Wednesday. The shuttle took the most northerly course ever, hugging the coast from Cape Canaveral to New Jersey. Five previous launch attempts were scrubbed, mostly due to weather.

Residents complain

By MATT MAYBERRY
Staff Writer

1990 has not been a good year for Dorman Hall. Residents repeatedly complained about faulty equipment, frequent late-hour fire alarms and shortages of necessary supplies.

One Dorman resident, a football player, said, "With as much money as the football players bring in, they deserve a better place to live. This place is a hell hole."

Similar sentiments of disgust are expressed almost daily as Dorman residents arouse from their sleep in the early hours of the morning to respond to fire alarms. On-campus housing policy requires that every resident evacuate the building in the event of a fire alarm, no matter what the reason for the alarm.

When repairs are made, they are often slow in coming, causing many residents to complain. One resident said that when his telephone went dead, three weeks passed before it was finally replaced.

Other frequently cited problems include clogged toilets and showers, broken tiles on ceilings, air conditioners emitting heat, shortages of toilet paper and substandard condition of furniture in the TV room.

Georgia resident assistants come to GSC

G-A staff reports

GSC hosted over 400 RAs on Saturday, Feb. 10, during the Georgia Resident Assistant Saturday Seminar (G.R.A.S.S.).

The annual one day event is designed to give RAs the chance to share ideas.

The day-long workshop consisted of presentations made by RAs, Hall Directors and Housing Coordinators from across the state.

The seminar and the presentations are geared to give the attendees a look at how other campuses do things. They, then, have a chance to incorporate those ideas into their residence programs.

The seminar also gave RAs from all around the state a chance to socialize and find out how life is on different campuses varies.

ASSAULT ON GAY MEN SPARKS REACTION

MISSOULA, Mont. — The assault of two homosexual University of Montana students has promoted members of the university's gay community to begin a battle against homophobia.

"People are really angry, really scared," said Sara Reynolds, female coordinator of Lambda Alliance, a homosexual support group.

The uproar began when two gay men were attacked Jan. 14 by three men shouting anti-homosexual epithets. When one of the men attempted to call the police, three as-yet unidentified assailants grabbed him and began to beat him. The other homosexual man tried to separate them and was beaten as well.

Reynolds said the Lambda Alliance has formed a task force to educate students about homosexuality. "Ignorance is the parent of fear and fear is the parent of hatred," she said. "Through education, we may be able to remove the hate. We hope to take away the myths and present the facts."

Michael Hall, male coordinator of the alliance, presented a letter to the Associated Students of the University of Montana senate asking for support.

Chamber, DOT to meet on campus road effort

By KEVIN HUDSON
Staff Writer

The Statesboro-Bulloch County Chamber of Commerce expects to meet with members from Georgia's Department of Transportation (DOT) about the proposal for widening Fair Road this spring.

The expansion is presently on the agenda and will be voted on within the next five years. If the action is approved, fair road, formally known as State Highway 67, will be paved into a four-lane road from where it presently narrows to two lanes near Hawthorne Court to the Kiwanis-Ogeechee Fairgrounds.

The traffic on that stretch of the highway is especially bad after football and basketball games when visitors from out of town leave Statesboro to go home. The extension would also alleviate traffic in the Hawthorne and Somerset areas and would allow easier access to events at the Fairgrounds.

According to the Statesboro Georgian, Gerald Edenfield, president of the Statesboro-Bulloch County Chamber of Commerce, and several other state and local officials have already taken some action. They met with DOT commissioner, Hal Rives, last January for an initial discussion on the matter.

The fact that Highway 67 is also a route to Fort Stewart, a neighboring military base, federal funds may be used for the expansion. Edenfield and others are expected to discuss the federal funding issue with United States senators, Sam Nunn and Wyche Fowler, as well as first district congressman, Lindsay Thomas, in late April or early May.

The Chamber of Commerce is also planning to ask for funding to expand both of the Statesboro perimeter roads to four lanes. The roads, which are being built on the east and west sides of town, are presently in the planning and early construction stages.

Baby conceived to save another's life

By ROCHELLE SHARPE

©Copyright 1990, USA TODAY/Apple College Information Network

Mary Ayala is having a baby to save her daughter's life.

Unless 17-year-old Anissa gets a bone marrow transplant, she almost certainly will die of leukemia. For two years, doctors have searched in vain for the one donor in 20,000 who could supply the proper cells.

Now Mary Ayala is trying to create the perfect match.

At 43, Ayala became pregnant again. Doctors now say the baby girl she will deliver in April almost certainly is compatible — and may save Anissa's life.

But what Mary Ayala calls her miracle baby is being condemned by some as the devil in disguise.

Suddenly, a practice that desperate mothers have quietly engaged in for almost two decades is being attacked as a harbinger of the Brave New World — where women conceive babies for bone marrow and abort them if their genetic material proves useless.

The Ayalas began their donor search in April 1988, after doctors discovered Anissa had leukemia.

Earlier that year Anissa, who played soccer and served on her school's student council began bruising from the simplest activities, like carrying books to class.

Then she started developing lumps and getting bad cramps. Eventually doctors performed a series of tests and reached the fateful diagnosis: without a bone marrow transplant, Anissa could die in three years.

The Ayalas first tried to find a compatible donor among their relatives, then turned to the National Marrow Donor Program, a registry of volunteers. Soon, they joined LIFE-SAVERS, a group that recruits potential donors by publicizing the individual victim's plight.

For Anissa, the odds of finding compatible bone marrow are especially long. With 20,000 types of marrow, finding a person with similar cells would be hard enough. But Anissa also is Mexican American, an ethnic group underrepresented in the donor registry, which lists 87,037 volunteers. It often is easier to find compatible donors among those with similar ethnic backgrounds.

Transplanting bone marrow

Bone marrow transplants can save lives, but with 20,000 different types of bone marrow, finding a good match is crucial. A national registry program has enrolled 87,000 volunteers, but has shortages from many ethnic groups.

1 Donor selection

There are three types of transplants, depending on the source of the marrow.

Autologous
Uses patient's own marrow, removed before patient's marrow has been destroyed.

Syngenic
Comes from an identical twin. To date, this has been the most successful.

Allogenic
Comes from a sibling, parent or matched donor. This is the most common.

2 Preparation

The patient's marrow must be destroyed to keep the immune system from rejecting the new marrow. If leukemia or other cancer is involved, chemotherapy is also given.

3 Aspiration of the marrow

Under general anesthesia, a quart of blood-diluted marrow is removed from the donor's pelvic bone with a syringe. The marrow is then processed through stainless-steel screens to break up particles and remove blood and anti-coagulants.

4 Infusion

Through a catheter, the marrow is injected into the patient's blood stream. Marrow cells migrate to cavities in bones.

5 Supportive care

Because two to six weeks may pass before the marrow begins producing blood cells, patients need transfusions of white blood cells to prevent infection. Transfusions of red blood cells and platelets are also needed to prevent anemia and bleeding. Because preparation for the transplant often causes nausea and vomiting, intravenous feeding may be required.

EXXON JURY ADMONISHED:

The jury in former Exxon Valdez skipper Joseph Hazelwood's trial has been instructed to avoid news reports about the tanker's spill, the day after the oil company was indicted on five federal criminal charges. Superior Court Judge Karl Johnstone said he would sequester the jury if necessary.

GROUP PETITIONS JUSTICE DEPT:

Houston physician Alan Blum steps up efforts to remove cigarette signage at televised sports events. Blum, who heads Doctors Ought to Care, an anti-smoking group, says the group will petition the U.S. Justice Department to prevent tobacco signs at televised soccer games and is planning an opening day boycott of baseball stadiums with cigarette signs.

NEITHER SIDE GIVING GROUND:

Baseball owners have stiffened their stance and players' resolve is as strong as ever, say the chief negotiators. Chuck O'Connor said the owners' Player Relations Committee has not discussed changing proposals. As the spring-training lockout enters its 14th day, union chief Don Fehr dismissed reports of dissent.

SACRAMENTO WITHDRAWS MONEY:

Sacramento's City Council has voted to withdraw its $50 million offer to lure the Los Angeles Raiders to the city. Raiders managing general partner, Al Davis, is continuing talks with Oakland, the city the Raiders left after the 1981 season. Sacramento Mayor Anne Rudin said that negotiations are still possible, but the public money has been withdrawn.

Bone marrow hotline...

©Copyright 1990, USA TODAY/Apple College Information Network

If you want to donate bone marrow, call the LIFE-SAVERS Foundation of America at 1-800-950-1050 anytime.

The foundation will send an information packet describing the program and where where you can get your blood tested in your community.

Anyone between 18 and 55 can donate marrow, a procedure that requires a 24-hour hospital stay. Donors usually are under general anesthesia for one to three hours, while doctors remove marrow from a hip bone. Patients usually complain of soreness for up to a week, but the procedure is not dangerous. The marrow will regenerate itself within 30 days.

The foundation accepts money to help defray the costs of the blood tests, which cost $75 each.

About 1,000 people in the United States are searching for a bone marrow donor. There are 87,037 people on the LIFE-SAVERS registry.

reversed. And Mary Ayala was in her 40s, an age when most women have trouble conceiving.

But within six months Ayala was pregnant.

"I feel my baby is a blessing from God," she says.

In November, she thought her prayers were being answered early.

Three months into the pregnancy doctors told Anissa they had located a compatible donor, a man from San Francisco. But then, suddenly, he backed out.

Dr. Rudi Brutoco, chairman of the Life-Savers Foundation in Covina, Calif., said he had no idea why the man changed his mind.

Although Anissa wanted to talk to the potential donor, Brutoco said contacts are forbidden because of the risk of bribery or extortion.

Mary Ayala underwent amniocentesis, a test that told the family the baby has an almost 99 percent chance of being compatible. Brutoco said Ayala never would have considered abortion even if the marrow had not matched.

After her sister's birth, if the baby's umbilical cord contains enough proper cells, they will be transfused into Anissa. If not, she will have to wait until her sister is at least six months old, when additional cells can be taken from the infant's bone marrow.

Given that timetable and Anissa's precarious health, the family continues to search for a donor. It was during their most recent campaign that Mary Ayala discussed her pregnancy — and ignited a furor.

Within hours, critics were questioning her values.

"Using someone without their consent, like it or not, is dehumanizing," said Alexander Capron, a professor at the University of Southern California. "There's a sense that a person is a means to an end and not an end in herself."

But, Brutoco said, "The real ethical issue here is that every day 25 people die in this country because they cannot get a transplant. It's not right that we let that happen when we can do something about it."

At Walnut High School, where Anissa is a senior, neither students nor teachers ever considered ethical implications until such discussions started dominating the news.

"What more love could a child be conceived in than to save a life?" asks Alice O'Keeffe, a home economics teacher. She says both An-

Reel to reel: movie reviews by Bill Johnson

By BILL JOHNSON
Staff Writer

Loose Cannons

Rating: B

From the Cowardly Lion to the entire cast of Star Trek, Dan Aykroyd portrays many personalities that give him a chance to go back to his Saturday Night Live antics for zany fun in Loose Cannons. Gene Hackman also stars in this buddy (groan) flick with a catch—Aykroyd impersonates characters from other movies whenever he is in the presence of violence.

Hackman and Aykroyd play two cops on the case of a lost Hitler film that showed the execution of Hitler. The problem is, the man who killed Hitler may be the German chancellor-to-be.

This may all sound confusing, but the film flows along at an easy pace. Aykroyd and Hackman are better together than most screen duos, although I couldn't picture them in the same movie before I saw this.

All of the personalities that Aykroyd portrays are hilarious, bringing back memories of SNL. Hackman has the role of the macho hero, and you can see in his eyes that he is enjoying his part. Dom DeLuise makes a small part come alive with humor, using all of his talents.

It's a safe bet that you will like Loose Cannons, a comedy with several personalities.

Flashback

Rating: B+

How the '60s have become a hot commodity in movies today. From the Vietnam War to Flower Power, the '60s have brought money to a lot of people 30 years later.

The newest addition to the growing pot of gold is Flashback, a movie starring Dennis Hopper, the '60s actor, and Kiefer Sutherland, the '90s actor.

The plot has Hopper portraying a '60s refugee who has been on the run for 20 years from the feds. He has been recently captured, and has to cross the country in order to face an ancient charge. Sutherland is the FBI agent who has to escort Hopper across the U.S. by train to his court date.

The two men do not get along at all. Halfway through the trip, Hopper plays a mind trick on Sutherland by acting as if he has slipped some LSD into Sutherland's drink. Hopper tells Sutherland that tequila is the best thing to reverse the effects of LSD, and Sutherland proceeds to get drunk.

There never were any drugs involved, so Hopper tricked his captor into drinking the tequila.

The rest of the film has Sutherland tracking down the escaped Hopper, and they both become hunted by a crooked sheriff in a hick town. The pair eventually become friends, working together against the sheriff.

Hopper is a delight as the '60s radical back to raise some more hell. He is the perfect hippie actor, and this film must have been made with him in mind.

Kiefer Sutherland is equally good as the FBI agent. He is stiff at the beginning of the film, but he fleshes out a good character during the course of the movie.

Flashback is a hilarious look back at the '60s, with an excellent soundtrack that includes music by Edie Brickell and New Bohemians, R.E.M., and Jimi Hendrix. For a nostalgic look back at the '60s, go see Flashback and let your mind wander.

Buck Birdseye: Man about campus

By BUCK BIRDSEYE
Staff Columnist

They say nothing is constant but change, and I reckon it's true, especially concerning underwear. And keeping that in mind, ole Georgia Southern is hanging around its own knees these days, with another set o' drawers 'round the ankles. I mean, change here is so constant it's hard to know what building the classes I been cutting are in. Oh, well.

Only two things on Buck's mind today: 1) This 'ere university status, and 2) the war on drugs. Ole Buck's concerned about what they planning on for a regional university, 'bout what's gone be going on 'round here, and 'bout all the new mobile homes they gone need in MY neighborhood so's folks can have a good, solid, God-given aluminum roof over they heads.

Now, them administrator fellers tole us this 'ere was gone be a place devoted to the interests of the region—but I ain't seen no new building planned that has a dadgum thing to do with hog-slaughtering. Why, I was about wet from tears of joy when I heard they was gone make this a university.

I pictured a fine, new slaughterhouse right up on Forest Drive over to the ponds. I could smell hog blood in the air. But ain't no hog-butcherin' planned. Second, you'd think this 'ere region would want to educate its young mens and womens in necessary skills for the region's future—but they ain't no pickup truck repair and modifying major planned.

So what's ole Buck gone major in? Oh yeah, they's bidness, and they's history and they's engineering, but they ain't gone be no hog-butcherin' and they ain't gone be no pickup repair, and it's even highly doubtful that they gone have a course in advanced deer poaching. So Buck figures he's gone have to major in something useful, like art.

For one thing, I brung some scrap iron I'd took from out back of the mobile home, and I had it there in the bed o' my brother's pickup truck (you seen it, it's the Ford F150 with "BAD DOGS" wrote on the back), and some feller come up and call it skulptcher. So I knows a good thing.

I ain't no scrap iron dealer no mo'. I is a post-modern impressionist now, brudder, and the difference between scrap iron and post-modern impressionism is about $50 a ton. And that's a whole bunch of Cook's beer, yes sir.

Now, the war on drugs. First off, nothing busts up a man's heart like sad stories about American younguns who be selling they bodies and souls so's they can enlarge they nostrils and feel like Donald Trump for a few minutes. Nothing hurts a man's heart like driving in some parts of this town and seeing fellers just standing there selling dope like they was selling hotcakes.

In fact, I was over to one part of town, and some other feller was next to one of them there dope dealers, and he was selling hotcakes, and well, while them hotcakes was getting cold, the feller selling crack was working faster than the drive-thru people at MackDonald's. Calling his stockbroker in between sales, too.

Feller come up to Buck's Studebaker, and he say, "Crack, coke, acid." Buck, he don't know nothing 'bout crack, except he figure he probably don't want to buy any kind of crack. On the other hand, I needed me a Coke, on account of I was thusty, and I figured the car battery could use some acid. So Buck, he wind up with what look like a home-made Goodie's Headache powder and these little pieces of paper.

Anyhow, 'bout a week later, after I returned from Uranus or New Jersey, I still ain't sure, I decided it be time for America's war on drugs to get serious. Here is what Buck think: First, legalize marywanna. Buck don't smoke it, but he'd grow it if he thunk it'd sell over to the produce market. That way, Georgia could pull in at least another $100-200 in tax money, money this fine state desperately needs.

And folks, I'm told, would be getting easygoing and meller 'bout things, and they would not go desecrating good beer cans to smoke that five-minute Donald Trump feeling. Who wants to feel Donald Trump? His wife don't even wanna.

Second off, if we gone blow up countries which be making cocaine, then by God, why we keep sending Vice President Dan Quayle (a.k.a.

Opie) instead of napalm? Buck knows why. You know why?

I'll tell you why—it ain't no war, and it's like this: Ever so often, you see ole Arnold Ray (our illustrious sheriff) standing in a pitcher on the front page of the 'Boro Herald, and he and his boys has got theyselves some bushy marywanna plants. Ole Arnold Ray be standing like he just done caught hisself a two-ton tuna.

Like he saying, "I done obfuscated this 'ere cannabis and thus did I stop the vicious liberal horde what would insidiously pizen the youth of Bulloch County and turn they brains to tapioca." Grits!

How come them fellers over to a certain part of town still be standing outselling the feller who selling hotcakes, then? 'Cause it ain't no war. It ain't never no war if everybody's getting some collards with pitchers o' presidents.

You wanna win a war on drugs? Grits to testing folks' wee-wee. Grits to sending V.P. Opie to countries where he don't know the language. Grits to pictures of our sheriff with his two-ton tuna. Grits to drug summits.

Whatcha'll do is give the folks in them poppy fields three days' warning. Then you tumble a few thousand napalm bombs in them fields, and the locals can come back in a week and plant theyselves some mangoes or something. And the war is won.

And then it's a whole bunch of folk gone have to start working for a living, for a change.

Swimmer offers a thank-you

Dear Editor,

I would like to take this opportunity to thank everyone involved in Georgia Southern Swimming. Thank you coaches, teammates, managers and friends for four fun-filled and rewarding years. To my parents, thank you for the support and love needed to always keep going. A very special thank you to Coach Scott Farmer who has helped me be the best I could and reach my goals and dreams. You've brought this team to success and I wish you more in the future. I will miss you all, but never forget any one of you!

Letter mention merely politics

Dear Editor,

Excuse me, Mr. Snee, I apologize for mentioning "Your committee's" name in my article. But way before "The Black Awareness Council" was ever created Alpha Phi Alpha had its first MLK Day celebration back in 1980. Then, somewhere around 1984 or '85 when it was made a holiday, then the school jumped on the bandwagon and gave funds for us to continue this program and created the Black Awareness Council to manage funds and schedule other events for Black Awareness Month. And, I thank Dr. Dale Lick and Dr. Henry for letting us still be involved in the program. My statement that you quoted, "I might not like your religion or notions on different subjects, but I will listen to you with an open mind," is not self-contradiction, but respect for your fellow human being.

And, I wonder if you, Mr. Snee, have read or hear for yourself anything that was by Louis Farrakhan? And, if you are who I think you are, do you really know what it is like being a black man trying to change your society's social values?

Once again, I am sorry for mentioning your committee's name in my article. I understand that it is politics. It's easy to praise a dead black leader.

LRC expresses its gratitude

Dear Editor,

All of us here at the Learning Resources Center would like to express our gratitude for your interest in the LRC Tutorial Center. As Tutorial Program coordinator, one of my responsibilities is to provide information about our learning resources to faculty, students and other concerned parties. I agree with you that tutoring is "one of the most important" needs among our students, and I appreciate your calling attention to this fact.

Indeed, our tutors do become overwhelmed at times by student requests; however, all campus resources are stretched to accommodate the increased enrollment. Students who come to us for help receive assistance—for which they are never charged; equally important, they receive this help from tutors who are genuinely concerned and trained in their areas. Occasionally, students may leave without receiving help at the time of their visit because they come when no tutor is on duty, do not plan well enough in advance to make an appointment for English or reading and study skills, or could not wait for a few minutes for a math tutor working with another student. Those who "drop in" for tutoring sometimes face this inconvenience. For this reason we encourage students to make appointments and we carefully distribute tutoring schedules to all teaching faculty, post them in classrooms and on hallway bulletin boards and give them to students who visit the center.

Let me assure you that our department head, four faculty consultants, full-time coordinator and all nine tutors are aware of the importance of an effective tutorial program and work consistently to improve ours because we, like you, desire success for GSC students.

Some views on existentialism

Dear Editor,

After so much fanfare about football games at this college, I am amazed to see a philosophical subject in your award winning newspaper. Yet, as an ex-believer of existentialism, I am too fastidious to agree with Mr. Miller's advice of reading "Existentialism".

The uniqueness of existentialism lays in its paradoxical nature. It is an ontological doctrine; yet it is also a popular movement which, fortunately or not, hasn't come to America as much as to Europe, Japan and China. As an intellectual branch, it can be traced through the early philosophies of Socrates, Montaigne, Nietzsche, et al. However, Sartre, is NOT the creator of existentialism. The father of this school, as usually cited, is the not-so-illustrious Soren Kierkegaard. Many other philosophers, including Heidegger and Jaspers, had advanced existential thinking before Sartre's major work, "Being and Nothingness", appeared.

Therefore, to avoid the "misrepresentations" that Mr. Miller is concerned with (and suffered from, methinks), one needs to read perhaps more than the misnamed book

"Existentialism" (which originally titled "Existentialism and Humanism").

If you just want to brag to your girlfriend about existentialism, or to understand it as a popular movement which gained wide popularity in the Post-World War 2 and Cold War era, it might wiser to read Sartre's literary works of many other existential writers (e.g., Camus, Kafka, and Sartre's partner-in-life Simone de Beauvoir) more entertaining, and easier to lead us into and out of the maze of existentialism. Besides, I would like to see Theatre South perform one of Sartre's dramas.

Mr. Miller's literal interpretation of existentialism also surprised me. He inferred that one of the motivations "for doing good is to earn the good opinions of others.....". Yet in the existential world where Medusa rules (that is to say, to look at another person is to make him a thing), an inter-subjective relationship (or inter-personal communication) is impossible, let alone of being motivated by "the good opinions of others". With the existential "nausea" toward this society, it is questionable which is the "good deed" and which is not. To talk about punishment, in the light of existentialism, merely living in this planet is punishment enough, so who cares for more? Also, Mr. Miller's quotation of "I think, therefore I exist", is a misreading, perhaps from Descartes' aphorism "I think, therefore I am". The existentialist motto is "I act, therefore I am".

It has been almost ten years since Sartre passed away. Madame de Beauvoir also left us last year. In the 90's, it seems to me existentialism is "out", along with communism. Yet I still like to read and reread some of the aforementioned writer's works, if only I had fewer exams and more free time.

Gospel according to Brother Jim

Staff Reports

From February 7-9, 1990, a team of Pentecostal Holiness preachers led by Jim Gilles, affectionately known as Brother Jim, visited Georgia Southern campus. Most of us have heard his views on sex, booze and rock n' roll. Some of us have also experienced his charismatic personality first hand. Although the above aspects of Jim Gilles' personality are the ones best known by GSC students, some important theological issues are raised by him which deserve some consideration.

Remember, Brother Jim claims to be a minister of the gospel. Therefore, it is appropriate to compare his doctrines with the teachings of Biblical Christianity.

Brother Jim holds the following doctrines in common with all biblically sound Christians:

- The Bible is the inherent and authoritative word of God.
- God is trinity, meaning He is not only one God, but three persons (the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost).
- Man was made in the image of God.
- God is holy and requires absolute holiness from man.
- Man fell from perfection to sin through the original sin of Adam.
- All unregenerate men are sinful and under the condemnation of God and will be cast into hell if they do not come to faith in Christ.
- Jesus Christ is the virgin-born son of God.
- Jesus Christ lived a perfect, sinless life and died on the cross in payment for the sins of man.
- Salvation is through the faith of Christ and all those who are saved will seek to obey God.

I must confess that I am a Five Point Calvinist, and Jim Gilles is not. There are many points of doctrine on which Brother Jim and I disagree. However, most of these issues are well within the confines of Biblical Christianity. In fact, many fine Christians would take Brother Jim's side on most of these doctrinal issues. Therefore, I will only address those points where Brother Jim blatantly contradicts the Biblical teaching as well as the teaching of most evangelical churches.

One major error in Jim Gilles' teaching is that God does not know which people will or will not be saved. Jim says, "God only knows those things which are knowable." According to Mr. Gilles, the exact details of future events are not knowable to God. Contradicting this, he adds that God has a general knowledge of "major future events" such as those things foretold in prophecy.

This doctrine clearly denies God's omniscience even though Mr. Gilles claims it does not. All but the most liberal churches affirm that God is absolutely omniscient and knows everything that has, does or will happen.

The Bible clearly teaches that God knows everything that will ever happen. This knowledge certainly does not exclude a knowledge of who will and will not be saved. The following are a few passages that clearly demonstrate God's knowledge of future events:

- And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them that are called according to his purpose. For whom HE DID FORE-KNOW, HE ALSO DID PREDESTINATE to be conformed to the firstborn among many brethren (Romans 8:28-29).
- Elect according to the foreknowledge of God the Father, through sanctification of the spirit, unto obedience and sprinkling of blood of Jesus Christ (1 Peter 1:2).
- Even before a word is on my tongue, O Lord thou knowest it altogether (Psalm 139:4).

• Thy eyes beheld my unformed substance; in thy book were written, every one of them, the days that were formed for me, when as yet there were none of them (Psalm 139:16).

• Before I formed thee in the belly I knew thee; and before thou camest forth out of the womb I sanctified thee, and I ordained thee a prophet unto the nations (Jeremiah 1:5).

A second major error which Jim Gilles has made is that he believes a person must live in absolute sinless perfection in order to be a Christian in order to remain saved. Granted, it is taught in some Wesleyan circles that perfection can be reached by means of a second work of grace by God, but to say that a person must maintain sinless perfection in order to be saved is completely foreign to the Bible. I think that the following passage from John 1:8-10 proves that Christians are not sinlessly perfect in this life.

"If we say we have no sin, we deceive ourselves and the truth is not in us. If we confess our sins, He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness. If we say that we have not sinned, we make Him (Christ) a liar and his word is not in us."

Notice in this passage, John includes himself as a person who would be deceiving himself if he claimed to be without sin by using the first person plural pronoun "we." Obviously, John was a saved Christian when he wrote the epistle or he would not have been qualified to write it. Why would John include himself as being a person who would be deceived if he claimed to be sinless when (according to Jim) all Christians must be and remain sinless in order to maintain their salvation?

Personally, I think the Apostle John would accuse Jim Gilles of being deceived. John would also accuse Brother Jim of making Christ out to be a liar. Romans 5:6 and 7 give more evidence that even the most faithful Christians commit sins.

In the first six verses of the second chapter of First John we have an important change of emphasis. In these verses the author is exhorting new Christians to abandon their old lifestyle and to start acting like Christians. It is from a misinterpretation of these verses that Jim Gilles derives his doctrine of perfection.

"My little children, these things I write unto you, that ye sin not. And if any man sin we have as advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous: And he is the propitiation of our sins: and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world. And hereby we do know that we know him, if we keep his commandments. He that saith, I know him, and keepeth not his commandments, is a liar, and the truth is not in him. But who so keepeth his word, in him verily is love of God perfected: hereby know we that we are in him. He that sayeth he abideth in him ought himself walk, even as he walked (1 John 2:1-6).

In the King James Version of the Bible, it may appear at first glance that John was teaching perfectionism in John 2:1-6. However, if this is the case then John was blatantly contradicting the statements made in the closing verses in chapter one of his epistle. Logically, a person would have to deny the inherency of scripture if they persist in claiming that 1 John 2:1-6 teaches perfectionism because two inherent statements cannot contradict each other.

Aqua Eagles utterly destroy competition in championships

By DAVID LONSINGER
Guest writer

The GSC aqua Eagles captured 16 of 20 events and broke 13 Southeast Federation Swimming and Diving Championship records as they took first with 830 points.

Mark Brown led the way for GSC as he set three federation and GSC school records. Brown, who finished with six victories in 1990, won the 400 individual medley (4:20.88), 100-yard breaststroke (1:00.21) and the 200-yard breaststroke (2:12.40).

Senior Andy Bristow, who led the Eagles with 10 individual victories, also set three federation highs. Bristow captured the 200 individual medley (2:00.86), 100-yard backstroke (54.47) and the 200-yard backstroke (1:59.59). Along with his three record times, Bristow also was named 1990 Competitor of the Year.

Jason Singalewitch and Shane Davis took two first-place times during the three-day competition. Davis, who ended the season with nine victories, set federation marks in the 100-yard butterfly (53.92) and the 200-yard butterfly (2:02.50). Singalewitch took the 500-yard free style (4:52.78) and the 1650 free style (17:12.06).

Tim Eigel added to the record-setting performance by breaking the 200-yard free style in 1:49.02.

The relay squads set four federation and two GSC records.

The men's swimming and diving teams traveled to Atlanta Feb 22-24. The Aqua Eagles annihilated the competition with 830 points and set several records. (File photo)

The GSC Lady Eagle swim team won 18 of 20 events and set 12 Southeast Federation Swimming and Diving records as they rolled up 651 points for their second consecutive federation title.

Once again Stacy Scheible led the way for the Lady Eagles as she won three individual events, which were federation and GSC school records. Scheible won the 200 individual medley (2:11.89), 100-yard breaststroke (1:07.90) and the 200-yard breaststroke (2:26.77).

Three Lady Eagles captured two individual events, which included the establishment of three federation records.

Keri Maschio took top-place honors in the 200-yard free style (1:57.60) and set the federation record in the 100-yard free style (54.41). Amanda Hall captured first-place times in the 100-yard backstroke (1:03.88) and the 200-yard backstroke (2:15.60), both federation record marks. Melanie Johnson captured the 1650 free style (18:50.22) and the 200-yard butterfly (2:20.45).

Other individual winners for GSC included Jackie Davis in the 400 individual medley (4:56.16), Terri Comeau in the 500-yard free style (5:22.77) and Angela Serina in the 100-yard butterfly (1:02.11), a federation record.

The Lady Eagle relay squads continued the onslaught by capturing five victories, including four federation records and two school records.

The team of Comeau, Scheible, Maschio and Hall took two relay victories in the 200 free style (1:40.29) and 400 free style (3:40.99), both federation marks. The victory in the 200 free style was a school record time.

The squad of Hall, Scheible, Serina and Maschio captured the 400 medley relay in 4:09.44, a federation and GSC mark. That was the relay squad's team-leading fifth victory of the year.

Jacki Graham, Davis, Suzie Hicks and Vickie Haklin set a federation mark in the 200 medley relay with a time of 1:53.53.

Georgia State placed second in the championships with 388 points, Augusta was third with 240, and Florida A&M finished fourth with 35 points.

Stacey Scheible, who led the Lady Eagles individually with 15 first-place finishes in the 1990 campaign, was awarded the Female Competitor of the Year.

Jackie Davis, the lone senior and winner of nine events in 1990, was named the Scholar Athlete of the Year.

Amanda Hall, who set two federation records and one Hanner pool record, finished with eight victories.

GSC, coming off six consecutive victories, proved to be well-prepared to defend their 1989 federation title.

Defensive coach takes new job at W. Georgia

By PAUL FLOECKHER
Assistant Sports Editor

GSC defensive line coach John Pate today will officially accept the defensive coordinator's position at West Georgia College.

Since coming to GSC as a graduate assistant in 1985, Pate has been on the sidelines for three I-AA national championship teams, including this year's 15-0 squad.

"It's been a great ride here," Pate said. "It's opened a lot of opportunities for all the coaches."

Although Pate will enter a program that is coming off a 4-7 year and has not had a winning season since 1982, the coach is confident the Braves can turn their fortunes around.

"If I didn't think we could win, I wouldn't have accepted the job," he said. "I think we'll make a commitment to be a contender in the Gulf South Conference," a conference that has been rated the toughest in NCAA Division II.

Pate hopes that this promotion will bring him a step closer to his aim of being a head coach. He has been a head coach on one occasion, at Union College in Barbourville, Ky., during the 1984 season.

He also served as defensive coordinator and head track coach at Georgia Southwestern and assistant head coach and defensive coordinator at Fort Benning.

Pate owns a bachelor's degree from North Georgia College and a master's in sports management from GSC.

Two members of Pate's 1988 "Howling Commandos" were I-AA All-America choices. Tackle Darren Alford and end Giff Smith earned the distinction after recording 15.5 sacks and 10 sacks, respectively.

Pate doesn't know when and where GSC will find his replacement, but he's "sure there are a hundred guys beating down the door to get my job."

West Georgia was victim number two in GSC's 15-0 dream season, losing 48-7 in Statesboro September 9. However, the Eagles and Braves are not scheduled to play this season.

"They're not going to do that, thank goodness," Pate said.

The combination of a new emphasis on fitness and the skyrocketing growth of GSC has caused a new problem for the Campus Recreation/Intramural Department (CR/I): a lack of proper facilities to meet the need of the students on campus.

The current facilities were designed over 15 years ago and to accommodate just 6,500 students. GSC's current enrollment of 11,700 puts a strain on those outmoded and overused facilities.

"The facilities were not designed with this kind of growth in mind," said William Ehling, CR/I Director.

The current facilities are shared among the varsity teams, club teams, intramural teams, and individual students. Physical education classes also use the facilities, this further limits the availability of the facilities to students.

"The athletic department has helped out," said Ehling. The biggest problem is that prime time for students is 3 p.m. to 8 p.m., but CR/I cannot use the facilities until 6 p.m. as the teams need to practice. A further strain is the club teams that also log practice time within the facilities. The club teams are rugby, women's soccer, badminton, volleyball (both men and women), and men's and women's track. Track is new this spring, as is women's soccer.

The GSC Lady Eagle tennis team won five of six singles matches and swept all three doubles matches to down Armstrong State 8-1 Monday in Savannah.

Top-seeded Anja Fritsch breezed through her match, blowing out ASC's Jennifer Owens, 6-0, 6-1.

Second-seeded Susana Abia dropped her first set to Becky Phillips, 4-6, but came back to win the next two, 6-2, 6-2.

Number four Monika Brock swept Dana Powell, 6-2, 6-1; fifth-seeded Michelle Strasser defeated Andrea Kelly, 6-3, 6-1; and number six Almuth Steinbach downed Susan Harrell, 6-1, 6-2.

Crystal Kessler gave the Lady Pirates their only singles victory with a 6-3, 2-6, 6-2 win over GSC's third seed, Lori Martin.

GSC won each doubles match in straight sets. Fritsch/Steinbach defeated Phillips/Kessler, 6-2, 6-4; Abia/Karly Kroger routed Owens/Kelly, 6-2, 6-0; and Martin/Brock wrapped up the sweep with a 6-1, 6-1 victory over Powell/Celeste Hoyt. With their third straight victory, the Lady Eagles improved to 3-2.
