CIVIL RIGHTS CASE BEGINS:

The Supreme Court Wednesday hears the case of Gloyce Qualls, who is challenging a policy at an auto battery plant owned by Johnson Controls in Milwaukee. The policy prohibits all fertile women from working in certain jobs due to health risks. It could be the most far-reaching case of the term, the biggest civil rights case of the decade. (From the USA TODAY News section.)

LEONARD BERNSTEIN RETIRES:

Conductor Leonard Bernstein shocked the music world Tuesday by announcing his retirement. Considered one of the great orchestra conductors of the century, Bernstein has been struggling with emphysema, a plural tumor and pulmonary infections all year. Bernstein is still hoping to perform briefly at the October 28th AIDS benefit at Carnegie Hall.

INTERNEES GET APOLOGIES:

At a Justice Department ceremony Tuesday, Japanese-Americans received $20,000 checks as a token of apology and reparation. About 120,000 Japanese - many who were born in the USA or naturalized citizens - were held as security risks from early 1942 to 1946. When released, they often found their jobs, businesses and property gone. The checks will be given out over a period of three years.

SOUTER HEARS FIRST CASE:

David Souter, the Supreme Court's newest member, heard his first case as a justice on Tuesday - a complex securities law case. Souter will have his first closed-door conference Wednesday afternoon, as the justices take initial votes on cases heard this week. Souter has reportedly been deluged by applications from lawyers who want one of up to four clerking jobs.

HIGH STAKES IN FLA. GOV'S RACE:

The governor's race in Florida is heating up. Republican Gov. Bob Martinez is seeking to be Florida's first re-elected Republican governor. But Democrat Lawton Chiles aims to stop him. Chiles, who retired from the Senate two years ago citing burnout, limited contributions to $100 per person, below the $3,000 state limit. He has raised $1 million, compared to Martinez's $9.3 million.

CRUDE TOPS $40 A BARREL:

Crude oil futures prices hit an all-time high of $40.40 a barrel Tuesday as angry rhetoric from Iraqi President Saddam Hussein escalated Middle East war fears. The price of light sweet crude - the key grade of U.S. oil - closed up $1.45 at $40.40 per 42-gallon barrel for November delivery after gaining nearly $1 on Monday. The previous record close was $40.10 on Sept. 27.

NO BUDGET DEAL BAD FOR MARKET:

Congress' failure to settle on a budget added to the market's woes Tuesday. Without a settlement, interest rates are unlikely to drop. Wall Street desperately wants a rate cut to ease the burden on debt-laden companies and to lessen competition from the bond market. Now the concern is that an accord will take weeks. That means no lower rates at a time when the economy needs a boost.

BARRY'S AUTHORITY LIMITED:

The District of Columbia Council passed emergency legislation Tuesday to limit Mayor Marion Barry's spending authority during his last weeks in office. Restrictions: Barry's

University projects a $323 million impact on Bulloch county

G-A Staff Reports

On the eve of the annual A Day for Southern Campaign, GSU officials are projecting that the institution will generate a record economic impact on Bulloch County of nearly a third of a billion dollars during the 1990-91 academic year.

The university's Controller's Office annually compiles an estimate based on the projected spending in the county by students, faculty and staff, and the institution. The latest projection takes into account the expected 12,000+ enrollment, the faculty-staff payroll and institutional expenditures for a total estimated impact of $323 million.

The figure shows a rise of about 35 percent over last year, when the university impacted Bulloch County by some $238 million. The estimate is based on the widely-accepted method of assuming that money spent by those affiliated with the university will change hands four times before leaving the county.

A breakdown of estimated university-related spending is as follows: institutional spending, $8.5 million; student expenditures, $39.9 million; faculty-staff payroll, $32.4 million.

The economic impact figures do not take into account additional monies generated by new businesses or construction spurred by the university, or money spent by visiting alumni, parents, and friends during the year.

Safety not taken lightly, say officials

G-A Staff Reports

The consensus of opinion among GSU officials is that university students here enjoy a relatively safe environment - but stress the danger of complacency.

"Students who live in GSU's residence halls are often of the opinion that, because they live on-campus, they are totally safe," said Vickie Hawkins, director of residence life. "That's not necessarily so. We do a lot to educate our students, because safety is of prime importance in a residence hall."

Residence Life provides, at the start of each school year, a calendar of events for every student that features safety tips throughout. Also, room keys are on key chains have a return address so that if lost, there is a better chance of recovering the keys.

"We've been hosting a criminal investigator to give a program on safety in each residence hall," she said, "and attendance is mandatory. During the program we have a discussion about safety and show a video tape on safety tips."

Resident Assistants are also trained to give safety tips to students, especially concerning the propping open of hall entrance doors, said Hawkins, and there are 40 night monitors who check for violations of safety rules each evening, looking especially for open doors and unregistered guests.

The third week in October has been designated as Personal Safety Week in the residence halls, and Residence Life will be engraving personal items with identification to discourage theft and so that recovery is make easier if a theft does occur.

"We have about 150 people working as Residence Life staffers and every one of them is trained in what to do in an emergency," she said.

As the university has boomed in enrollment the past five years, the majority of GSU's students live off campus - some 75 percent, in fact. This situation has not escaped the attention of Student Affairs officials.

"We have a newsletter that is sent to all off-campus students, and recently had a campus Public Safety official write a column that stressed safety tips," said Jane Thompson, assistant dean of students. "We also ask parents, via our 'Apparent Issues' newsletter, to talk with their children about safety precautions."

Letters have been written to landlords at the major complexes that house students, requesting that they make sure their units are safe and urging them to promote safety among their tenants.

Mike Russell, captain of criminal investigations with GSU's campus police said that arranging special programs on safety is no problem. "We're more than glad to talk to people and give them tips on safety," he said, adding that the campus police have worked closely with both residence hall and student affairs personnel.

"I think we have a safe campus, and I think students feel safe," said Thompson. "But we do not want them to become complacent."

Although we have a safe environment, we shouldn't take it for granted. Students -- or anyone for that matter -- ought to take certain reasonable precautions."

10th Haunted Forest October 25-31

G-A Staff Reports

Georgia Southern recreation students will host their 10th annual Haunted Forest beginning October 25 in the woods of Forest Drive on the university campus.

The Haunted Forest will be open from 8 p.m. to midnight October 25-27 and October 30-31 at its yearly spook site. Admission is $3.

An added attraction this year will be Fright Night in the Light, designed for young children and senior adults from 4-6 p.m. October 29. Admission is $1.

A ribbon cutting for the 10th Annual Haunted Forest will be at 4 p.m. October 25.

Statesboro-GSU symphony sells season tickets

New donation program offers musical incentives

G-A Staff Reports

Tickets are on sale for the five-concert Statesboro-Georgia Southern Symphony's 1990-91 season, which begins November 19.

The Symphony, conducted by Dr. Douglas Graves, opens with "Glasnost - Music of Russia," which will feature works by Rimsky-Korsakoff, Shostakovich, Khachaturian, Mussorgsky, and Borodin.

As last year, there will be both a 4 p.m. matinee and an 8 p.m. evening program on each concert day, and shuttles will run from Pittman Park United Methodist Church on Fair Road for the matinee concerts only, beginning at 3:30 p.m.

Evening program season tickets are $20 for adults and $10 children. Matinee season tickets are $15 adults and $7.50 for children. To order season tickets, mail a check payable to the Statesboro-Georgia Southern Symphony to Friends of the Symphony, 410 Grenade St., Statesboro, GA 30458.

Individual tickets are available at the door for $10 for the evening and $7.50 matinee.

A new four-level program of giving to the Symphony has been established.

A "Supporter" donation of $100-249 entitles the giver to two season tickets and two tickets to a special Chamber Concert and reception. A "Donor" gift of $250-499 entitles the donor to two season tickets, the Chamber Concert and two additional individual concert tickets.

A "Patron" donation of $500-999 is good for three season tickets, three chamber tickets, reserved parking at all concerts, two additional individual concert tickets and a Symphony lapel pin.

The fourth, and highest level, is that of $1,000 or more, the "Benefactor," which gets four season tickets, four admissions to the Chamber Concert, reserved parking, two individual concert tickets, the lapel pin and designated reserved seating for all concerts.

Contributors in these four categories will be recognized in concert programs.

The season continues with the March 11 "Symphonic Masterpieces" concert, the April 15 Youth Concert, May 6 "Bach Family," and May 24 Outdoor Pops at the Sports Complex.

Additional support from United Way helps to underwrite the Youth Concert, the Outdoor Pops, and the School Outreach program.

SGA buys trash cans

G-A Staff Reports

In an effort to ease the relationship between students and a local landowner, GSU's student government voted Tuesday, October 9, to purchase five trash cans to be placed in the parking lot in front of the Rockin' Eagle.

Holmes Ramsey, the owner of the parking lot, contacted SGA President Curtis Whitaker last week to express concern over glass, cans, and litter left in the parking lot from students patronizing the Rockin' Eagle, Zax and the Flyin' Eagle.

Ramsey, a Georgia Southern graduate, told Whitaker that he would rather have the students "hang out" in his parking lot rather than go elsewhere, citing that there aren't very many choices of places for students to go in Statesboro.

Because clean-up costs can sometimes run as much as $300 each time, the student government decided to help Ramsey by purchasing trash cans to go on his lot.

Ramsey also contacted the Statesboro Police Department and Georgia Southern University Police and asked them not to issue tickets to students loitering on his lot.

"Basically, we want the relationship between Mr. Ramsey and SGA to be so that he will come to SGA first," said Whitaker. "I hope that SGA can help prevent students from being harassed in situations like this," he added.

Both the student government and Ramsey are optimistic about the changes being made and are confident that such change will rectify the problem.

M.C. Elfin Magic will begin his world tour next summer. His back up band will be Five Guys with Long Hair, opening act Cedartown's 357 will perform. M.C.'s album "Just Elfin" is currently at the top of the pop and soul charts as is his single "Me and the Keebs."

Mental disorders strike young

By Marilyn Elias

©Copyright 1990, USA TODAY/Apple College Information Network

LOS ANGELES — Serious mental disorders are far more likely to strike before age 20 than experts previously thought, suggests a report out Monday.

"What this means is that we're going to have to focus much younger than we have before," says Dr. Lewis L. Judd, director, National Institute of Mental Health.

Judd released the new report at an NIMH advisory panel public hearing here.

Mental illness rates traditionally have been estimated by averaging incidence across the lifespan. But that doesn't reveal when problems begin or the peak age range at risk. The effect has been to make serious mental health problems seem more prevalent in middle age than they really are, says Dr. Jack Burke of NIMH.

His team looked at mental health survey findings from five cities, projected to represent the U.S. population.

To count as serious, disorders have tripled in the past 30 years, he had to impair the person's life or to add. (Marilyn Elias writes for require professional help. Among USA TODAY.) findings:

— Peak years for major depression are between 15 and 19. Rates during those years are two to four times higher than in middle age, up to seven times higher than after 65.

— Disabling phobias hit most frequently between 5 and 9 years old.

— Obsessive-compulsive disorders typically start in childhood or teen years.

A key advantage to early detection: preventing further tragedies often caused by mental health problems.

"We know that teens with undiagnosed major depression or anxiety disorders have a twofold risk of drug or alcohol abuse," says Judd.

And an untreated mental disorder, particularly depression, is the biggest risk factor for suicide in 14- to 24-year-olds, whose rates

Reader agrees with editor

Dear Editor,

I have to tell you that I normally stand totally opposite you on most of what you write about, but it was with a tear in my eye and a smile on my face that I read your article on the "Good ole boys" here at GSU. Your description of the unnamed teacher was perfect. I am now taking my second class under him and he is really the only reason I am taking it. I simply needed a class and remembered what a wonderful and inspiring teacher he was and my mind was made up. It is a great loss for GSU when he is forced to leave.

His style of teaching is indeed radical, radical to the point of being effective! His off the wall humor and erratic style keep the class moving, interesting, and stimulating, something many teachers fail to do.

I am a fifth year senior and have attended three other schools and with the possible exception of one other he has been the greatest teacher I have ever had the privilege to study under. I am glad to hear that he would not kiss posterior, but I sure would like to kick the posterior of the man making so grave an error.

I would do anything if I thought it would allow him to keep his job, not just for me, but for the hundreds of upcoming students who will never know the pleasure of his teaching of "Carpe Diem."

I would ask that you withhold my name only because I am presently enrolled in one of his classes and would not want him to be accused of favoritism or me of brown-nosing, but then again what should he care, he won't be here much longer anyway.

Name withheld as requested

Also angry at 'Good Ole Boy' system

Dear Editor,

I know exactly which professor you spoke of in your column about the "Good Ole Boy" system prevailing. I think that it's a total shame that he is leaving; I share your anger in the injustice of what is happening.

GSU is certainly losing one of its best professors to the game of politics. This professor's classroom is filled with excitement and students look forward to coming to his class. He makes you see the world in a different view other than what the media portrays life as being. To this professor I would like to say that of all the teachers I have had, you will be the one I remember and respect the most and, I am sorry this happened. This occurrence is an embarrassment to GSU. You will be missed not only by me but by many others. Future students will surely miss out on an inspirational teacher.

Melissa Canup

Impressed with professor's style

Dear Editor,

I am an alumnus of GSU but I simply had to respond to your column about the "Good Ole Boy System." I had that very professor you wrote about my last quarter at GSU and I was very impressed with his style. Had I not been recruited to attend Officer Candidate School for the United States Navy, I would have continued my educational pursuits; and although my major was mathematics, I was planning to minor in the subject this professor teaches. To call this situation a shame is quite an understatement; it is a travesty!

I am not an easily swayed individual, but this teacher really taught me a lot about life and I was seriously re-evaluating my career objectives after meeting him. And although I did get a good job right out of school and decided not to go to grad school, he helped me make my decision.

I am really sorry to know that other GSU students will not have the opportunity to be in any of his classes; I'm sure his leaving will hurt the department and the major he instructs. Thank You for your column! Even though you kept it anonymous I am sure his students know who he is; and thank you Dr. ----- for all your inspiration; good luck to you.

Daniel Hollingsworth

Professor will be missed

Dear Editor,

Let me applaud your efforts to help a man well deserving of great educational accolades to keep his job. You are quite a strong editorial persuader, but this time I think even you have met your match-The "Good Ole Boy System" shall always prevail here at GSU and elsewhere in the south.

I had this professor you wrote about last fall quarter and he changed a lot of things in my life. Going to class was never more exciting than it was then. I learned more in his class than in all my others combined. I will never forget a lecture he once gave on racism. He preached so vehemently against it I felt my heart would beat through my throat! And to top the class off he even began to cry after his final sentence. As long as I live I will never forget that lecture, for I even cried for a split second as I walked from his class. No teacher has ever touched me so deeply with words or ideas. No teacher has ever even come close to making my heart break in light of reality.

No Mr. Rushing, there is no justice in the world. I shout injustice with you, and hope that one day all that is wrong and foul in this world will be corrected. GSU is losing its soul. And when that man steps foot off of this campus, so shall a little piece of me, and a little piece of you, and a little piece of every student who ever decided to listen to this man's brilliant and thought provoking lessons. Dr. ----- I will miss you, but "forgive them," as another persecuted man once said, "for they know not what they do."

Shane Rider

Joyce and Joe Cruzan and their daughter Nancy are dying. Quite literally Nancy's life is in a deteriorating mode as she lies comatose in a hospital bed, a victim of an automobile accident which occurred in 1983. Nancy is a human vegetable, restricted to one position for the remainder of her time here on earth. Her arms and legs don't move anymore, and could not even if her brain had the ability to make them; atrophy has rendered Nancy a motionless victim simply waiting for death. According to one account from a nurse assigned to Nancy's room, her hands have curled into claws; nurses have had to tape napkins to her inner arms to keep her fingernails from piercing her own wrists.

For seven long, treacherous, pain filled years Nancy has existed merely by the tube which runs through her stomach. Her doctors say she could possibly go on in this state of being for 30 years or more.

Nancy's parents just sit and watch. That is all they can do. The law will not allow them to do what I deem, along with thousands of other realists, as the right thing.

In 1987, the Cruzans attempted to have Nancy's feeding tube removed, stating that Nancy would not have wanted to live on artificial life support. And that's a logical and moral assumption in the eyes of any human. But because Nancy had no living will, and because there was no clear evidence that Nancy would want to die in her present condition (like, how could there be if she's in a coma?) the Missouri Supreme Court ruled that Nancy's parents could not remove her life support system. And again on June 25, 1990, the U.S. Supreme Court upheld that decision, allowing state governments to prohibit families from disconnecting life support systems from comatose loved ones. But U.S. Supreme Court Chief Justice William Rehnquist felt that "the United States Constitution would grant a competent person a constitutionally protected right to refuse lifesaving hydration and nutrition." But in the Cruzan case Rehnquist said that such "clear and convincing" proof that Ms. Cruzan would want to die is lacking. Thus the Cruzans must continue to watch their daughter live and die.

The only humane choice is obvious. Rehnquist and the other justices, despite their vast knowledge of the U.S. Constitution and the law, are wrong. The Cruzans, and everyone in a situation similar to theirs should be allowed to choose whether or not the comatose victim should be allowed to have life support discontinued.

From The Editor's Desk Clint Rushing

Ok, sure there are those of you out there who say that if it becomes acceptable to take a patient off a life support system, soon it will be common practice to end a suffering death with a lethal injection. Well then you would have mistakenly equated removing a helpless victim from life support with actively murdering or assisting in suicide. I believe lethal injections are murder, and there is a fine line of ethics involved here. But a difference exists between lethal injections and removal of life support. Taking a comatose patient off of a system is simply allowing that victim to die in the same manner that he would have had such a system never be employed, and that alone makes euthanasia of this type right.

The individual state government's should not have the right to decide whether or not life support systems can be removed from comatose patients without living wills. The decision should lie exclusively with the spouse or the family. Our courts in the U.S. have their duties to uphold justice, but not to interfere in our private lives. This most recent decision in the Cruzan case has showed yet again that the courts think they know what is best for the people, but in actuality they only know what is best for their own image. The Cruzan case should have set a precedent of compassionate human decision, instead it simply delt a fatal blow to the ethics of mercy killing.

The court's decision has made a difficult life even more difficult for the Cruzans and people in the same situation all over the nation. And although it seems logical to remove Nancy from her life support system financially as well as morally, we all know the judicial system does not work for the convenience of the people, rather to invade their privacy, intrude into their reproductive lives and bedroom activities, and now in the most recent rulings, to intrude on the death bed.

some scent was on sale before you opened the mail box because it smelled like a French whorehouse (I've never really been to France!) I don't know what my brother priests thought I was getting-likely a little love letter from Riverdale.

Last week's mail brought all my favorite magazines: Trains, Railfan, Car and Driver, Newsweek, Smithsonian, Consumer Reports, MacUser, and The New Yorker. Card after card dropped out as I turned the pages, gaping at Porches, Saddam, cartoons, (Who really reads the New Yorker?) thirty pound toads (Yetch imagine the size of the warts), optical storage media, and glorious trains galore. My living room floor looke like the aftermath of a Manhattan ticker tape parade parade. The neighbor's cat, always of acutely misanthropic demeanor, padded silently over and gave my bare foot a claw-swipe of protest.

The cards I really hate are those bound into the magazine. Claw-dine Depussey, the cat being French, you see, and musical, doesn't mind because these cards don't fall out, but that's precisely why I am never able to turn to a specific page of the magazine on the first try. Or second... I'd rather nurse the occasional scratched big toe than try three or four times before I can find the page I want. Claw-dine, over for another visit, seems to sense what I am writing -- she is quietly approaching my bare feet. Ouch! Damn! Her masters are Calvinists.

And then there are the requests for donations -- at my house more than five a week. Why do priests get hit up so much more often than real people? Even if we were soft touches, we don't make money. Most of the charities must know that because they are run by priests or nuns. I never give them a cent. Sell something from the Vatican. Sell the Vatican. With fig leaves on the statues and mosaics, it would be a great site for a new T.V. ministry: The 7,000,000,000,000 Club -- it would have to be that many lira or they couldn't afford mascara, Mercedes limos, and lavish houses. But that's another article; where was I? Oh, yeah! Well, father or sister kindly encloses a business reply envelope.

Hey, Chuck . . .

By CHARLES C. WHITE
Assistant Sports Editor

Teaming Thousands:

"Hey Chuck, remember that rugby article that ran in the October 9th issue? I know football, baseball, and basketball. But I know about as much about rugby as I do brain surgery. Tell me, what's the deal with rugby?"

All-Knowing Answer:

Man, I wish I knew.
Here's all I officially know: GSU tied Golden Isles 4-4. More on how I found that out later.

I'm the Asst. S. E. and the kind of guy who's always willing to broaden his horizons. So I volunteer to cover the rugby game Saturday, right? Right.

Wrong.

Being the prompt kind of guy I am, I show up shortly after two. Weather: overcast and warm. Quality weather.

Initially I hadn't the foggiest idea what was happening.

Apparently the game had already gotten a bit rough. One of our guys, Dennis Bougemill, was on the ground on our sideline with a bunch of gauze all over his knee. I think I saw a little blood. About 10 minutes after I showed (heavens only knows how long Dennis had to sit there) an ambulance, three EMTs, two University Police (UP) cars, and three UP dudes came by to see if the leg could be saved.

I haven't heard any updates, but get well soon Dennis.

Later in the game . . . Could this game get more violent or what? . . . One of Golden Isles' guys goes down in the middle of the field. He's grabbing for his leg and is either in serious pain or doing a good job of faking it. So I'm expecting the ref to call an official "Corpse-on-the-field" time out. No luck. This joker is flailing around and everyone else is just a-playing away. Finally someone explodes with mercy and knocks the ball (which looks like a pregnant albino football) out of bounds. After a while some Golden Isle folks come over and help the guy off the field. What gents.

Anyway, I was quite impressed by the number of folks that showed -- I counted 90 or so.

Now you've gotta understand, time's relative since:

- a) there's no obvious clock
- b) I haven't the foggiest what's going on.

For that matter score is relative too since:

- a) there's no obvious scoreboard
- b) see "b" above.

Anyway, about 3 p.m., one of our guys, #12 (no name at least I got the number), made what looked like a 50-yard touchdown run. Apparently rugby doesn't have a point after. If it does, we must have declined to try for it.

So later that day I'm sitting around the apartment trying to figure how I'm supposed to write an article on an event which:

- a) I don't know the final score
- b) I don't know anyone who played
- c) see "b" way above.

Alert Reader Makes a Good Point: "Hey Chuck, why didn't you get off your duff and interview the head coach or some of the players? And by the way, how'd you find out what the final score was?"

Lame excuses for not doing interviews: No one distinctly looked or acted like a head coach, I didn't know what to ask, and most importantly, I didn't want to look stupid in front of two cute girls I know.

I had to use a very professional technique to obtain the final score. I saw one of the rugby players locking his bike up outside my window. Me being the subtle kind of guy I am (if you don't know me, you missed the humor) I hollered out the window, "Hey dude, who won the rugby game?"

Don't get me wrong folks, I'm not trying to poop on the game of rugby or any of its participants. These dudes are big and hairy -- I'm not. But I am a born and bred Southerner, i.e. clueless on the subject of British-born sports. If we ever get up a cricket team or an Australian rules football team, I'll retire.

If anyone out there would care to try and explain this brutal game to me, bring it on. We can start with simple things like a) how many folks on a team, b) how long a game lasts, c) are there quarters, innings, periods, etc, d) is there a halftime, e) if so, how long does it last, f) what you can do and what you can't do, g) anything else.

Volleyball team sends Savannah State packing for a second time

By CHARLES C. WHITE
Assistant Sports Editor

Tuesday night the Lady Eagles hosted Savannah State and promptly sent the Lady Tigers back home, soundly defeating them 15-1, 15-0, 15-8.

Unfortunately, this was the first match Coach J.B. Claiborne missed this year.

The first game was never close. Senior Jill Eisel made one perfect set after another allowing freshman Lori Dattollo and sophomore Mendy Crook to punch one devastating kill after another at the Lady Tigers. Dattollo provided points from the back court as well with five service aces.

With the easy win in the first game, Assistant Coach Tracey Middleton replaced five of her starters with less experienced players. Despite their previous lack of playing time, the Lady Eagles showed great talent.

The second game was another scoring blitz. Vargas started the scoring with five consecutive service aces. The Lady Tigers tried to slow the momentum by taking a time out. All for nothing, though. Vargas served two more points before Savannah State could earn the service. The Lady Eagles allowed nothing, immediately regaining the service. Eisel finished the game with seven consecutive points, four of which were service aces.

The third and final game of the match wasn't half as close as the score may convey. Vargas continued her scoring with three service aces. Sophomore Sandy Bobal and junior Michelle Jackson set each other for two awesome kills. Freshman Heather Brown got in on the action, setting Vargas for another crushing kill. Junior Dee Cardell was everywhere, setting for kills and receiving others' sets for kills of her own.

According to an NCAA poll released this past week, GSU is ranked number three in the nation in service aces per game.

Mendy Crook was ranked number three in the nation for individual service aces.

The New South Women's Athletic Conference (NSWAC) released team and individual statistics for all the conference teams. The poll ranked several GSU players.

The Lady Eagles are ranked second in both service aces per game with 3.4 and digs per game with 13.4.

Individual achievements include Crook's number one ranking for number of digs per game with 3.6. She had a total of 164 digs the day the poll was released. Julie Ciezowski is number five with an average of 2.6 digs per game (118 total).

Crook is also ranked fifth for service aces per game with 0.8.

Earlier this season the Lady Eagles pounded Savannah State 15-5, 15-5, 15-4 in an equally brutal match in Savannah.

Fencers compete in Atlanta Open

G-A Staff Reports

The weekend of October 6-7 members of the GSU fencing team travelled upstate to participate in the Atlanta Open, the largest tournament in the southeast. The tournament brought fencers from as far away as New York.

Anchoring the team was veteran fencer Trey Martin. Martin fenced in all three men's events: foil, saber, and epee.

Martin advanced to the second round of both foil and epee before being eliminated. However, in saber, he drove on to the finals and took fourth place.

Also fencing for the men were GSU students Jimmy Sullivan, Kevin Cleveland, Erik Gade, and Will Cotten, all of whom fenced foil. Cleveland advanced to the second round of foil before being eliminated in a tough pool. Gade made a strong showing in epee, this being the first he had fenced epee in competition.

Pam Moore, this year's club president, was GSU's only woman competitor at the tournament. She fenced in women's foil and also made a strong showing.

Stuart Johnston, a senior club member who was unable to compete due to a knee injury, was in attendance.

"Considering that most of the people in our club have been fencing for less than a year, we did remarkably well," Johnston said.

The fencing club is looking forward to a busy year.

The club currently has plans to fence in Atlanta, Charleston, S.C., and Gainesville, Fla. The club is also attempting to arrange a tournament with L.S.U. and hoping to send a few fencers to the national championships near Chicago in the spring.

Soccer goes 1-1 on road

By PAUL FLOECKHER

The GSU soccer Eagles broke their two-game losing skid Sunday with a 3-2 triumph over Wofford, the 20th-ranked team in Division II.

Wofford's Patrick Britt scored to give the Terriers a 1-0 lead at the 8:15 mark of the first half, but Southern answered with three straight goals.

Eagle John Regan closed the first-half scoring 32 minutes after Britt's goal on a direct kick that knotted the score at 1-1. The goal was Regan's fifth of the season, tops in the Trans America Athletic Conference.

GSU took just three shots the entire second half, but scored on two of them.

Ken Wilson gave the Eagles the lead for good at the 19:30 mark with his second goal of the season. The assist went to Jim Koch.

Kevin Connelly scored 23 minutes later off assists from Chris Dunlap and Johan Hageus to put GSU up 3-1. The goal was Connelly's fourth, good for third on the team.

Terrier Dan Murphy closed the scoring 43 seconds after Connelly's score with a goal off a penalty kick.

Coming off a tough 3-2 overtime loss to Stetson October 3, the Eagles dropped their second in a row Saturday, falling 4-0 to Winthrop.

The GSU offense was held to a season-low 11 shots as the Eagles suffered their worst loss in 22 games.

Winthrop's Jim Dean owned the first half, scoring two goals in ten minutes for a 2-0 halftime lead.

The second half was more of the same, with Winthrop scoring twice and Southern firing only seven shots. Shane Sallie and Jason Matthews scored seven seconds apart for the third and fourth Winthrop goals.

C-C men and women 6th at Ga. Intercollegiates

By JAMES DRINKARD
Sports Writer

The GSU cross-country team placed sixth overall at the Georgia Intercollegiate Championships last Saturday. The meet was held in Atlanta.

The course for the meet was a two-loop, all-grass course which contained several hills. Runners both started and finished the race going up a hill that one GSU team member described as being about as steep as a staircase. Along with the problems of steep hills and the demands of running a five-mile or 5K race, competitors must also contend with the myriad of roots which knife through the course.

The top finisher for the Eagles in the men's division was Gene Sapino in 25th place with a time of 27:34. Following Sapino were Jason Moody (30th -- 27:58), Michael Grubbs (36th -- 28:34), Mark Herndon (39th -- 28:43), and Tommy Trent (40th -- 28:45).

Alicia Hewes was the top finisher for the Lady Eagles placing 14th with a time of 19:56. Other Lady Eagle finishers were Angie Stewart (30th -- 22:29), Carolyn Reckamp (33rd -- 22:53), Gina Nunnally (35th -- 23:06), and Kristina Wagner (49th -- 25:12).

Terry Reid of UGA won the men's division with a time of 25:46. Keli Butler, also of UGA, led the women with a time of 17:54.

Tomorrow, The Eagles will journey to Greenville, S.C., for the Furman Invitational. The meet is held at the same course as the district meet, so many of the teams use the Furman meet as a testing ground for the district competition. Many of the district's top teams, including Auburn, Florida State, and Alabama, will be represented at the competition.

Men's Volleyball

The GSU men's volleyball club is looking for anyone interested in playing volleyball at the competitive level.

The volleyball team will meet tomorrow from 4:00-7:00 p.m. and again Sunday from 10:00 a.m.-2:00 p.m. Both meetings will be at Hanner Fieldhouse.

For further information on men's volleyball, call Drew at 764-8411 or contact the Campus Recreation and Intramural Department.

Rugby

GSU's rugby club, coming off a 4-4 tie with Golden Isles, will face the University of Alabama Saturday at Oxford Field. The match will begin at 2:00 p.m.

Saturday's contest will be GSU's last home match until a November 4 date with Georgia Tech.

The ruggers will battle Savannah College of Art and Design in Savannah next weekend, then enjoy an off weekend before facing Tech.

Upcoming Games

Women's Volleyball: Baptist College(H), Thursday, 6:00 p.m.
Soccer: Georgia State (H), Saturday, 4:00 p.m.; St. Leo (H), Sunday, 1:00 p.m.

ability to lease property or award construction projects. Council members expressed concern Barry may use city funds to reward friends before he leaves office Jan. 2.

BART SIMPSON USED IN GOP ADS:

Bart Simpson, that radical cartoon dude, is giving California gubernatorial candidate Diane Feinstein a few pointers on cheating. In a press release, state Republicans used the TV character to chide Democrat Feinstein for writing notes on her hand before a Sunday debate with GOP Sen. Pete Wilson. Bart suggests notes work better written on a shirt sleeve.

KIDS WANT TO GO TO MARS:

If there was a flight leaving tomorrow for Mars, there would be a lot of kids eager to go and meet with "friendly" Martians. A poll of 1,500 U.S. children aged 10 to 14 commissioned by the makers of M&M and Mars candies found 64 percent would go to the Red Planet.

Students will have the opportunity of working in a lab which is much like a miniature factory with the actual manufacturing process. There are plans for trips to various industries including: Royden

Ware in Statesboro, Ithica in Glenville, and Oxford Industries located in Vidalia.

Georgia alone has over 408 apparel manufacturing firms employing nearly 164,000 employees.

Last week I got 133 business reply cards and envelopes, inserts in mail I loathe getting (bills and beggars). What did I do? Did I stomp and fume? Did I curse and rage? Did I give kitty the well deserved boot? Did I wallow in self-pity? None of the above.

I mailed them!

Each recipient of my card and letter will pay the U.S. Postal Service between twenty and thirty cents for the privilege of having my communication. And it will be... blank! In one week, I contributed anonymously $33.25 to alleviate the Postal Service's operating deficit. Think. If there are 14,000 people in the GSU community, and if half of us averages only sixty magazine cards and other unwanted reply things each week, this one regional university in Bulloch County, Georgia, can contribute more than $12,100,000.00 a year. Who says the national debt is unmanageable?

Folks, mail those cards and envelopes! Write your friends in other schools. Let's start a national trend. In a single year we will do what no Congress or President in your or the previous generation has. We will balance the national budget with excess postal revenues! In ten years we will completely wipe out the national debt, eliminate the income tax, and have a savings account. With pocket change we may even buy a building or two in Tokyo.

Twenty or thirty cents at a time.

I'd never have believed that one little computer could make such an incredible difference in my academic and working life.

Miriam Stoll
B.A. History, Dartmouth College
M.B.A. Stanford Graduate School of Business

"I became a Macintosh convert in business school.

"At our computer lab I'd always find lines of people waiting to use the Macintosh computers, while other computers just sat there. So I had a choice: wait for a Macintosh, or come back at 6 A.M. to grab one before they'd all be taken.

"After business school, I took a job at a large bank and used my Macintosh for producing everything from spreadsheets to a company newsletter.

"Today I use Macintosh to help me run my own management consulting firm.

When I give a presentation, I can see in people's faces that they're really impressed. And that makes me feel great.

"Sometimes I take Friday off, put my Macintosh and skis in the car, and head for the mountains. I ski days and work nights. It's perfect.

"You know, I can't say where I'll be in five, ten, or fifteen years, but I can say that my Macintosh will be there with me."

Why do people love Macintosh?
Ask them.
