DEMOCRATS DOING BETTER IN POLLS:

Surveys show President Bush's acceptance of cuts in Medicare and hikes in gas and alcohol taxes played a role in re-viving the Democratic role as the protectors of the middle class. Pollster Peter Hart says his client, Ohio Democratic gubernatorial candidate Anthony Celebrezze, closed a double-digit gap with GOP nominee George Voinovich by using the theme: "Protect working families."

SATANIST CONVENTION RUMORED:

Rumors of a satanists' convention in Washington, D.C., have Christians up in arms. In letters to 25 area preachers, preacher Richard Shannon of Fairfax, Va., says "tens of thousands" of satanists are expected to come to the capital for a "revival" between now and Nov. 9. Shannon says his information was based on unconfirmed reports received from a former satanist.

GIANTS, 49ERS STILL UNDEFEATED:

The New York Giants and San Francisco 49ers took another step Sunday toward a historic showdown. The NFL's two only undefeated teams each won their seventh game, inching closer to their Dec. 3 meeting in San Francisco. On Sunday, the Giants beat Washington 21-10; the 49ers edged Cleveland 20-17. If both teams make it to the matchup with 11-0 records, it will be a first in NFL history.

COURT TO WEIGH DISTRESS CLAIMS:

On Monday, the U.S. Supreme Court weighs whether 25 people on an Eastern Airlines flight that barely avoided crashing seven years ago can sue the airline for emotional distress. A ruling is expected next spring. Eastern is resisting the suit, asserting that a win for passengers would open the door to "potentially unlimited" claims every time a jet hits turbulence.

MEETING BUSH'S GOALS 'UNLIKELY':

A USA TODAY survey of 118 state teachers and principals of the year found 44 percent feel it's "very unlikely" the USA will meet President Bush's education goals by the year 2000. The six goals include freeing schools of drugs, increasing graduation rates to 90 percent and ensuring that every adult will be literate. Another 31 percent believe it is "somewhat unlikely."

HEALTH GOAL SERIOUSLY DOUBTED:

Forty-one percent of 118 teachers and principals surveyed in a USA TODAY survey say the most important of President Bush's six education goals is assuring children have access to health care and preschool that allows them to come to school ready to learn. But 28 percent say that goal is the least likely one to be met.

REAGAN WRITES HIS MEMOIRS:

Former President Ronald Reagan sought an end to the Cold War after realizing a nuclear exchange could destroy the Earth. That is what he writes in his memoirs titled "An American Life." Excerpts appear in this week's Time magazine. Also in the book: Reagan is unapologetic about his economic policy and maintains "presidents don't create deficits; Congress does."

PEOPLE INJURED AT KKK MARCH:

Six demonstrators and eight police officers were injured when violence erupted at a Ku Klux Klan march in Washington, D.C., Sunday. Forty-three anti-Klan protesters were arrested on disorderly conduct and assault charges during the KKK's half-mile march to the Capitol along Constitution Avenue. Police used bully sticks against protesters, who were throwing rocks and bottles.

Few using 24-hour services of library

By Patrick Hodell
Staff Writer

Due to student demand, the ground floor of the library is now open continuously between Sunday afternoon and Friday evening. Student counts performed by the library administration show few students are using the service.

The request to open the ground floor of the Henderson Library continuously from 2 p.m. Sunday to 7 p.m. Friday came from the office of the Vice President of Academic Affairs, Harry Carter. However, library administration complains of low student attendance between the hours of 1 a.m. and 7 a.m.

According to Julius Airial, library director, "The ground floor consists of periodicals, the Learning Resources Center (LRC), two classrooms, microfilm periodical readers, four Infotrac machines, telephones, water fountains and restroom facilities adapted for the handicapped."

"This service is unique to the University System of Georgia to the best of my knowledge. I checked at the University of Georgia, Georgia State and Georgia Tech and they definitely do not have such a facility open 24 hours."

The cost of running this service is about $70,000 a year. There are currently two people working the 12-8 a.m. shift. A security guard is available to escort people to nearby parking lots and for general security purposes; and a library assistant is present to staff machines and to guard the door. Both staff members are equipped with radios to contact Campus Security. A third person will soon be hired to assist the current staff.

Interested students can call 681-5028 for 24 hour information on library hours or any additional information.

Harville House not haunted

The once grand Harville House now surrounded by overgrowth and ignored by all except vandals and curiosity seekers. (Photo by James Drinkard)

By Rebecca Davidson
Staff Writer

Outside the city of Statesboro stands a crumbling Victorian home known as the Harville House. Vines climb collapsing columns, hinting of a faded beauty and grandeur.

When seen by moonlight, it is easy to believe that the ghosts of Harvilles past still roam its many rooms and halls. It has become a popular place to 'spook' your girl, and scare your friends. Too popular.

Virgil Harville, one of the many descendants of Samuel Winkler Harville, (Dec. 17, 1826-Jan. 19, 1915), was only too happy to share some family history.

He spoke of a more self-sufficient era, when the Harville family produced almost everything they needed right there on their huge estate. The estate contained 2,800 acres of land at one time.

But now, the house that should be a historic Bulloch County landmark is slowly falling apart, aided and abetted by curious 'ghost' hunting students and locals.

Beer cans litter the grounds, in spite of the clear 'No Trespassing' sign posted on the front fence. An occasional beer can or bottle can be found inside as well.

Most of the windows have been shot out by trespassers. The front door no longer has its turn of the century glass; it too has been smashed by vandals.

When the owners attempted to board up the windows and doors, many of the boards were torn down.

The damage is due to the myth that the house is haunted. Local legend has it that the entire family was violently murdered there. Not so, say the Harvilles. But the rumors have persisted, and so have the unwelcome callers.

One of Harville's fears is that a careless smoker will start a fire, or someone will be hurt. "Their parents would be sure to want to sue, in spite of the warnings posted," he stated.

Harville and his family have, on several occasions, played the part of very solid spirits. Several warning shots have been fired, but only after the intruders had climbed the fence.

The Harville House is a real piece of Americana. Harville said that he has not the slightest objection to people looking, but he and his family are saddened by the wanton destruction of their ancestral home.

The house is in need of massive restoration. The Harvilles would like to see the university and the community work together in bringing this beautiful old landmark back to life.

"There is a lot of history here," Harville said, looking sadly at the home his great-grandfather and grandfather built.

Are you ready to throw down? There was no half-steppin' Saturday when the Savannah State College marching band took the field at half time. The marching tigers wowed spectators from all angles with moves like these. (Photo by Kim Perry.)

Airborne school: Learning to fly

*Saw an old lady walkin' down the street,
She had a chute on her back,
jump boots on her feet
I said, "Hey old lady where you goin' to?"
She said, "U.S. Army airborne school"
I said, "Hey old lady, now ain't you too old?"
"Better leave that stuff to the young and the bold."
She said, "Hey young man who you talkin' to?"
"I'm an instructor at airborne school."
- Airborne running cadence*

(Editor's note: The use of him in this article refers to both male and female as both can (and have) become airborne qualified.)

By Gary A. Witte
Managing Editor

The parachutist is drifting down to earth. He enjoys the view on the way down. Everything looks sharp and clear.

It is as if the ground below him is nothing but a model, with a miniature Drop Zone and miniature instructors waiting for him on the ground.

Considering the kind of parachute he's using, he has to keep at least 25 meters between himself and fellow jumpers.

If he turns without looking, and is too close to another jumper, he could easily become entangled with them. This would probably mean a trip to the ground quicker than either would wish.

This August, 50 years ago, the Airborne corps was established.

In those 50 years, many changes have emerged in Airborne school.

In 1943, the all black 555th Parachute Infantry Company earned their airborne qualifications. Known as the "Triple Nickel", these men proved themselves in an Army that was segregated.

In 1973, because of a shortage of riggers (those who pack and prepare the parachutes for use), the Army allowed the admission of women into Airborne school.

The course was modified to place technical proficiency over physical proficiency.

Privates Johnston and Kutsch became the first women to graduate, and went on to complete the Parachute Rigger course.

Parachute Rigger training is an additional three-week course which teaches packing and preparation of a parachute. As a requirement for graduation, the students must pack a chute and then jump with it.

Today, women are enrolled in Airborne school on a regular basis.

GSU students earn wings

G-A Staff Reports

The Eagle Battalion sent 15 cadets to U.S. Army Airborne school this summer and 14 graduated.

The cadet that did not complete the three-week training course was forced to quit because of a knee injury received while running.

The three-week course teaches attendees the use of the parachute as a means of troop deployment. As the graduation requirement, students must make a minimum of five parachute jumps from an aircraft.

Cadets who become Airborne qualified are authorized to wear the parachutist badge on their uniforms. The badge is a parachute with two wings spreading out behind it.

The group of cadets sent, included students from GSU, Savannah State and Armstrong College.

Those who graduated this summer are: Dirk Ames, Glenn Blackburn, Michael Duck, Harry G. Inscow, Timothy L. Lester, Gordon Morrison, Mark Parker, Mike Rico, James Scott, John Simington, Alprentice Smith, Willie Smith, Henry Washington, and Gary Witte.

"It was great to have the opportunity to something most people don't get a chance to do during their lives," said cadet Glenn Blackburn, a senior political science major.

Part 2 of 2

At about 100 feet, the jumper must check his direction of drift. During training, smoke will be popped on the Drop Zone to assist the student in determining this.

To slow his descent, he must pull the pair of risers connecting him to his chute opposite his direction of drift.

He gets into the "Prepare to Land" attitude, feet and knees together, eyes on the horizon, and moderate tension in his legs.

To look at the ground would cause him to "reach" for the ground with his legs and bring his feet apart.

Landing with straight legs is to invite a broken leg or two.

Landing with legs bent too far is also a invitation for a broken leg or two.

Airborne school is a three-week course designed to make certain the student is physically-conditioned and trained in the use of military parachuting as a means of troop deployment.

Instructors, all of them sergeants, are called blackhats because of the black baseball caps they wear. They are never called blackhats to their face.

All instructors are qualified jumpmasters.

Students are often referred to as "Legs." A leg is any non-airborne qualified person. It isn't used as a term of endearment.

Because of this, the Army is discouraging its use, but you will occasionally hear the odd "What do you think you're doing, LEG?"

The course is divided into Ground week, Tower week, and Jump week.

Each morning during the first two weeks, students must qualify by completing the physical exercises and group distance run.

Typical exercises include chin-ups, four-count push-ups, jumping jacks (called the side-straddle hop), and sit-ups.

The group run can range anywhere from two to three miles during Ground week. For Tower week, the distances increase to three or four miles.

Students must keep pace with the formation, otherwise they will be considered a "run fall-out."

Students who drop out of more than two runs, or any Friday run, are dropped from the course.

Physical endurance is also stressed by the use of push-ups as a corrective punishment.

During Ground week, students are taught one of the most important aspects of parachuting: the Parachute Landing Fall (PLF).

The PLF involves five points of contact, which means the five points of the body that should strike the ground upon landing. These are the balls of the feet, the calf, the thigh, the buttocks, and the push-up muscle.

As the student lands, he must throw his legs up and over his body, letting the momentum of his fall continue without injuring himself.

This is constantly practiced in the sawdust training pits. Students' uniforms become a haven for sawdust during these weeks of training.

Training also includes jumps from the 34-foot tower. These simulate actual jumps from aircraft and allows the instructors to grade the students on proper exit techniques.

The hardest thing for students to overcome is the fear of jumping into empty air 34-feet above the ground. The students are attached to risers which are attached to a steel cable and slide them down to a raised mound.

Complaints are often heard on the mound from those male students that did not have their harness tight enough.

To qualify for Tower week, students must complete five proper PLFs from each direction of landing and complete five proper tower exits.

Failure to accomplish these tasks by the end of the week, results in the student repeating ground week with the next class.

The jumper tries not to look at the ground, but can see it in periphery, and it's coming up fast.

He feels his feet hit ground and immediately he attempts to do a proper PLF, forcing one knee into the other to get the right body position for the roll.

At nearly the same instant that his feet touch ground, his body slams into it. Without thinking about it, he keeps his chin to his chest as he was taught. A head hitting the ground, even helmeted, has often sounded the death knell for many parachutists.

He continues the momentum and kicks his feet up and over his head, completing his landing.

Once safe on the ground he must immediately activate one of his quick release assemblies which collapses the chute. The quick release assembly is the metal buckle which attaches the risers to the parachutist's harness.

In high winds, without the collapsing of the chute, the jumper would be dragged across the Drop Zone.

During Tower week, the students continue the mock door and physical fitness training. The practice of PLFs take on a whole new aspect, however.

Students are introduced to the Swing Landing Trainer.

In full harness, the students are swung from a height of about ten feet, and then lowered until they are a couple of feet from the sawdust pit before being dropped into it.

Students must not only complete a satisfactory PLF, they must also pull the correct set of risers for the direction they will be falling.

To qualify for jump week, students must complete a satisfactory PLF from each direction of possible landing. As always, a blackhat is there to grade the landing and criticize it.

After talking to the grader there is rarely any doubt in the students' mind whether or not he landed correctly.

University/area group to visit Soviet Union Student groups on rise

Drs. McRae and Rhodes to visit USSR (special photo)

Special to the George-Anne

Spring Break 1991 will find Georgia Southern University students, faculty, alumni and some area residents in Russia.

Dr. Jane Rhodes, professor of art education, and John H. McRae, assistant professor in early childhood education, are planning the trip, a first for the university.

The trip will be a 10-day tour of Moscow, Vladimir, Suzdal, and Leningrad. Highlights of the trip include Red Square, the Kremlin Complex, Gorky Park, the Winter Palace, the fortress of Peter and Paul; the palace of Peter the Great; the Hermitage Museum, which houses the largest collection of French paintings stolen by the Nazis in World War II; and the Armory, which houses the gowns of Catherine the Great and the famous Faberge eggs that once belonged to the czars.

A fellow alumnus of McRae's from Valdosta State College, Holly Smith of Savannah, who lives in Moscow as a translator will also help direct the group's tour.

Rhodes, who holds a Ph. D. in cultural anthropology and art education, has lived in Europe and the Middle East and has travelled throughout Latin America, the Far East, and North Africa. She is writing a book on travel and an art textbook.

McRae received a Hayes Fulbright Scholarship to the University of Rajasthan in Jaipur, India, and travelled extensively throughout India. In 1988, he guided the first group of high school students from south Georgia through a similar trip of Russia. He is teaching in the early childhood department at GSU.

Beginning in January, four informal classes on Russian culture, travel tips, history, religion, and current events will be held for the group before they depart in mid-March. McRae has arranged for fellow Georgians who have already travelled to the USSR to come and share their experiences.

The trip is open to all Georgia Southern students, alumni, and area residents. Spaces are available and anyone interested or requesting more information should contact Sybil Fickle or Debra Champion at the Southern Center, 681-5555.

With all of the student organizations on campus, it's easy to lose track. In addition to the 112 student organizations already here, several organizations are currently being considered for approval.

These organizations include Coordinated Religious Ministries, Sports Management Club, SPAGE, HOST, and St. Pat's.

The Coordinated Religious Ministries Club will provide professional support for members and to coordinate scheduling of religious events on campus as well as between individual religious organizations.

The Sports Management Club is open to sports management majors who are interested in this field. The group will provide useful opportunities and experiences to students.

SPAGE (Student Professional Association of Georgia Educators) will assist students in examining their career opportunities in their specific field of education, participating in exploratory activities in this field and in studying and becoming involved in educational issues.

HOST is the Hospitality Organization. See GROUPS, page 8

This week's eCLECtic column: Verdehr Trio to perform

By ELEANOR LAWSON
Guest Writer

If you have been keeping up with CLEC events, then you know that we have had many diverse and interesting programs and events to offer you during the past weeks.

In keeping with this practice, this week's programs and events should keep the culturally and intellectually-stimulated segment of this reading audience quite busy. This week's programs cover art, music, education, journalism, and literature.

The Verdehr Trio will be performing tonight at 8 in the Foy auditorium. If you do not have a ticket yet, any remaining tickets will be available at the Union Information Desk free of charge to students, faculty, and staff, or at the door of the Foy Recital Hall.

The Verdehr Trio, a violin-clarinete-piano trio, will be performing contemporary works written by some of today's most sought after composers and eighteenth and nineteenth century pieces that have been reworked exclusively for the trio. For more information, call the CLEC office at 681-5434.

Other events to look for this week are the departmental programs, the first of which will be a lecture by Dr. Kenneth Marantz, leading authority on children's books and the illustrations used in this type of literature. The lecture, which is being coordinated by Dr. Jane Rhoades, will take place November 1 at 1 p.m. in the Union, room 252.

Marantz's lecture is entitled "Art of the Picture Book." Marantz is the author of many children's books and writes regularly for the New York Times book review section. For more information, call Rhoades at 681-5358.

CLEC and the Communication Arts department are co-sponsoring a lecture by Mr. Pat Murphy, professional journalist and publisher of the Arizona Republic and the Phoenix Gazette. Murphy spent 20 years on the news staff of the Miami Herald before assuming a position in Arizona. He lists hosting

Forensics and Performance/Works to present play

By DONNA D'AMBROSIO
Staff Writer

The student organization of Forensics and Performance/Works will present Annie: A Love Story, an adaptation from the short story by Rebecca Brown in which a modern woman falls in love with Annie Oakley.

Director Patricia Pace said Annie is a "parody of the Old West" and has multimedia props including slides and Western films.

Pace, who has also directed The True Bride, The Way we Live Now, Alice in Wonderland, and Lifetimes Under Apartheid, said Annie was chosen it is a "beautiful story."

Pace said the thing she likes best about Annie, whose cast is composed solely of six girls, is that it is fun because "there are shoot outs and square dances."

In addition to Annie, Brown is also known for the collection of short stories The Evolution of Darkness and novels such as The Haunted House, The Children's Crusade, and The Terrible Girls.

Brown will be at Georgia Southern University November 15-17 in time for Annie's performances November 14-17 which will be in room 101 at 8 p.m. in the new Communication Arts Building.

Pace said she hopes the play, which will be free of charge, draws a crowd of one or two hundred people.

LATE FIELD GOAL LIFTS 49ERS:

Mike Cofer kicked a 45-yard field goal with five seconds left to give the unbeaten San Francisco 49ers (7-0) a 20-17 NFL victory against the Cleveland Browns Sunday. Joe Montana completed just four of 16 passes for 31 yards in the second half before the game-winning drive. After the Browns tied the score with 1:10 left, he led a 44-yard, seven-play drive for the field goal.

GIANTS REMAIN UNBEATEN:

The New York Giants (7-0) took a three-game lead in the NFC East by beating the Washington Redskins 21-10. In other NFL games Sunday: Chicago 31, Phoenix 21; Green Bay 24, Minnesota 10; San Diego 41, Tampa Bay 10; Buffalo 27, New England 10; Miami 27, Indianapolis 7; N.Y. Jets 17, Houston 12; Atlanta 38, Cincinnati 17; Philadelphia 21, Dallas 20; Detroit 27, New Orleans 10.

VIRGINIA STAYS NO. 1:

Virginia (7-0), which had the week off, remained No. 1 in the USA TODAY/CNN College football poll. The rest of the top ten: No. 2, Nebraska (8-0); No. 3, Notre Dame (6-1); No. 4, Houston (7-0); No. 5, Auburn (6-0-1) and Washington (7-1) tied; No. 7, Illinois (6-1); No. 8, Miami (Fla.) (6-2); No. 9, Colorado (7-1-1); No. 10, Brigham Young (6-1). (From the USA TODAY Sports section.)

BECKER DOWNS EDBERG:

Boris Becker continued his late-season rush for the No. 1 ranking by downing Sweden's Stefan Edberg Sunday. Becker rode his serve to a 6-4, 6-0, 6-3 victory in the Stockholm Open final Sunday. Edberg, 9-17 lifetime against Becker, will keep his No. 1 computer ranking going into this week's Paris Open. The battle for No. 1 should go down to the season-ending ATP Championships Nov. 12-18.

GRAF WINS NINTH THIS YEAR:

Steffi Graf earned her ninth title of the year Sunday, beating Sukova 7-5, 6-3 in a tournament at Brighton, England. Graf needed only 68 minutes to beat Sukova, seeded third, for the 17th consecutive time. The German, No. 1 in the world, won the event for a record fourth time in a row.

MUDD WINS NABISCO TOURNEY:

The higher the purse, the lower Jodie Mudd shoots. Mudd added the $2.5 million Nabisco Championship to his $1.5 million Players Championship title with a playoff victory against Billy Mayfair Sunday, giving him wins in the two richest events. Mudd rolled in a 15-foot birdie on the first playoff hole to win the $450,000 first prize at Champions Golf Club in Houston.

DANIEL TO SKIP EVENT:

Beth Daniel, the leading player in the LPGA this season, will skip the Mazda Japan Classic, which begins Thursday at Tokyo. Daniel, who missed part of 1988 with mononucleosis, says she's feeling tired and had medical tests last week. Daniel won seven tournaments and $863,578 this year. Patty Sheehan could tie her for Player of the Year if she wins this week.

To get the full effect of Georgia Southern's 54-7 clubbing of the Savannah State Tigers before 19,331 at Paulson Stadium Saturday, just listen to SSC head coach Bill Davis.

"I think we would've had a very good chance at winning this football game had we played good pass defense," Davis said.

Had they.

Two GSU quarterbacks combined for nine completions in 13 attempts for 211 yards, with three touchdowns, no interceptions and only one sack.

"We didn't have any special teams play," Davis added. "We left the special teams in Savannah."

Already trailing 21-0 and facing a fourth-and-26 at their own four, the Tigers lined up in punt formation with only eight men on the field. Punter Gregg Leverett received a poor snap, fumbled, and fell on the ball in the end zone for a safety.

SSC did line up with 11 men for the rest of their punts, but still had two blocked and finished the day with a 19.2 yards-per-punt average.

"We couldn't get our running game untracked," Davis said. "When you get behind like we did, you can't afford to sit there and try to find your running game."

In the opening quarter, GSU rushed for 104 yards to SSC's negative six. By halftime, the Tigers trailed 33-7 behind an 18-carry, zero-yard running game.

Meanwhile, ten different Eagles carried the ball for a total of 373 yards. Joe Ross led with 87 yards on 10 carries, followed by Lester Efford's 82 yards on 10 carries.

The opening drive of the fourth quarter summed up the day for SSC.

With the starters long gone, the Eagles drove from their 25 to the SSC 43, where they faced third-and-22. Albert Huntley then hit Terrence Findley for an apparent touchdown.

However, offsetting penalties nullified the play. On the first play after the penalty, Huntley again hooked up with Findley for a 43-yard TD strike and a 47-7 GSU lead.

The touchdown was the first of the season for Huntley and the first of Findley's career.

Taking advantage of a gambling Tiger secondary, GSU starting quarterback Raymond Gross threw two first-quarter TD passes to wide-open receivers.

Deryl Belser snares 30-yard TD pass from Raymond Gross for a 14-0 Eagle lead over Savannah State. (Photo by Tony Tacco.)

Gross hit Karl Miller from 18 yards out to start the scoring. Miller's third score of the season capped a six-play, 57-yard drive.

Two minutes later, the Eagles scored again. Gross faked a hand-off, then lofted a pass to Deryl Belser, who was alone at the SSC five. Belser caught the ball and completed the 30-yard play for a 14-0 Eagle lead.

"The original call was for me to do a 15-yard out route," Belser said. "When the cornerback came up, I broke my route off and ran vertical, and Raymond read the same thing."

Alonzo McGhee closed the first-quarter onslaught with a one-yard TD run off right tackle. Efford set up the score with a 39-yard run to the one.

After the safety tacked on two more points, GSU cornerback Rodney Oglesby put the Eagles back in business with an interception at the Eagle 30.

The interception was the 12th of Oglesby's career, tying the school record set by Taz Dixon (1986-89).

Five plays after the turnover,

Ross dashed seven yards with a pitch from Gross for his 10th TD of the season. Darryl Hopkins ignited the drive with a 20-yard run and Ross added a 28-yarder.

When Mike Dowis kicked a 29-yard field goal to make the score 33-0 with 5:28 still left in the second quarter, the Eagles already had their third highest point total of the season.

SSC scored 15 seconds before halftime, but the Eagles erased all thoughts of a Tiger comeback on their first drive of the second half.

Belser caught a 21-yard pass and Ross ripped off a 46-yard run off left tackle, giving the Eagles a

Soccer Eagles win TAAC Eastern title

By JAMES DRINKARD

Sports Writer

The GSU soccer Eagles defeated Mercer and SCAD to clinch the Trans America Athletic Conference Eastern Division soccer title last week. Stetson holds the number two spot in the division.

On Saturday the Eagles defeated Mercer 2-1 in Macon. The win, coupled with a Stetson loss, gave the Eagles their first ever regular season crown.

The Bears scored the first point of the contest 16 minutes into the game. The goal was the only offensive action that was to take place in the first half as both teams played excellent defense.

The Eagles struck quickly in the second half as they scored just one minute into the half. Scott DeAmbrose was credited with the goal with the assist coming from Ken Wilson.

The game remained tied until TAAC player-of-the-year candidate John Regan scored his tenth goal of the season with just eight minutes remaining in the game. The assist was given to Sean Connelly.

The Eagles began the week with a 11-0 domination of the Savannah College of Art and Design last Wednesday. Three Southern goalkeepers, Kevin Chambers, Joe Bellafato, and Mike Cole, combined their talents to get the shutout.

Georgia Southern set two team records by attempting 33 shots in one half and collecting 11 assists in one half.

The Eagles controlled the ball the entire game by allowing the Bees only three shots while attempting 51 of their own.

GSU scored twice in the first four minutes of the game. Just over two minutes into the game, Jay Dingbaum and Pat Mitchell drove deep into the SCAD backfield, passing off to Steen Larsen, who found the back of the net. Just under two minutes later, John Regan scored for the Eagles, and the rout was on.

Kevin and Sean Connelly led the Eagles with two goals apiece, and seven other GSU players scored one goal each in the lopsided victory.

The victories give GSU the right to play the Western Division champion, most likely Centenary, November 3 in Shreveport, La. The Eagles are currently 14-4 on the season and 4-1 in the conference.

Blue wins first B-ball scrimmage

G-A Staff Reports

The GSU basketball Eagles completed their first intra-squad scrimmage of the season Friday at Hanner Fieldhouse, with the Blue defeating the White 84-53.

Head coach Frank Kerns and his staff put the Eagles through a simulated 40-minute game with players competing for both squads. After holding a 38-31 lead at halftime, the Blue outscored the White 46-22 in the second half.

Senior center Emmett Smith was both the leading scorer and rebounder, pouring in 26 points and pulling down 13 rebounds.

Jeff Hagans and Joby Powell both scored 20 points, while Monty Noblitt added 16 and Tony Windless chipped in 13.

Powell finished second to Smith in rebounds with nine. Windless had eight, followed by Hagans' seven.

Preseason all-conference selection Charlton Young scored 11 points and was tops in assists with six.

The Eagles hit four three-point field goals, one each by Young, Smith, Tommy Williams and Herbert Barlow.

Center Cal Ferguson underwent arthroscopic knee surgery Friday at Savannah's Candler Hospital. His condition was listed as excellent after removal of plica. Ferguson is expected to return within two weeks.

GRUNSETH QUITTS MINN. RACE:

Plagued by rumors of a sex scandal, Republican Jon Grunseth quit the Minnesota governor's race Sunday night. Allegations say Grunseth skinny-dipped with four teen-age girls. His resignation comes nine days before the election. Gov. Rudy Perpich of the Democrat-Farmer-Labor Party remains on the ballot. Grunseth also admits to a nine-year relationship with Tamara Taylor, 32.

POWELL SAYS SCHOOL WILL GO ON:

Ten-year-old Sheena Jennings, a fifth-grader in Antioch, Calif., wrote to Gen. Colin Powell asking, "If there is a war, do we have to go to school?" Powell wrote Sheena last week and said that he sympathized with her distaste for academics. "School was very hard for me, too. ... But as I look back, I realize that school was very important for me," Powell said in his letter.

NO MORE HOMELESS AT O'HARE:

Officials at O'Hare Airport in Chicago ousted about 30 people Sunday as part of a new airport policy that closes O'Hare from midnight to 5 a.m. Only ticketed passengers and employees are allowed inside. Those meeting arriving flights have to wait outside unless they can prove they're waiting for a child or disabled person.

NWA PILOTS PLAN FOR FUTURE:

Three former Northwest Airlines pilots, found guilty of flying while intoxicated, are planning life after jail. Capt. Norman Prouse, 52, will start serving a 16-month term Nov. 26 and wants to take business courses in prison, his lawyer says. Flight engineer Joseph Balzer, 35, and First Officer Robert Kirchner, 36, each got one-year sentences. All are appealing.

TEMPERATURES ACROSS THE USA:

Both the northwest and northeast corners of the USA will be stormy Monday, as a strong storm offshore over the Pacific Ocean sends disturbances into the Northwest. Monday should be New England's only stormy day. A storm that is forming off the New England coast is expected to move eastward over the Atlantic Tuesday. Showers are expected in southern Florida.

DOW JONES OPENS ON DOWNSWING:

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials opens Monday at 2436.14, down 48.02. The New York Stock Exchange composite opens at 166.71, down 2.80. The American Stock Exchange market value opens at 291.39, down 1.39. The NASDAQ OTC composite opens at 334.36, down 5.38.

Airborne

The 250-foot tower is an optional requirement for progression to jump week, because the tower cannot operate in winds higher than 13 m.p.h. Bad weather during the week can prevent an entire class from being dropped from the tower.

Students are graded on their landing once being dropped from the tower.

Once the students reach the long-awaited Jump week, there is no physical fitness training. However, students must run to the airfield in boots and helmet.

In this fashion, the blackhats may catch those who may be injured from previous jumps or those injured in training and are attempting to hide it from the instructors.

Those injured, depending on the severity of injury, may either be sent back to repeat tower week or may be dropped from the course.

Students are issued their main parachute harness and reserve at the airfield, and pair up to help put the harnesses on.

Once finished, the students must go through a ritualized inspection by a blackhat. From now until he jumps, should the student adjust any of his equipment or have to go to the bathroom, he must be re-inspected.

Then the waiting begins. Students wait in a warehouse-like building on modified tables, leaning back against their chutes. Some sleep, others just sit and wait.

The roaring drone of the C-130 aircraft can be heard outside as the blackhats get a group of 60 and take them into a different building for their Pre-jump briefing.

All emergency actions are reviewed for what seems to be the thousandth time and there is more waiting in specially modified benches.

It is almost like church, everyone is quiet, lost in their own thoughts about what they are about to do.

A cheer is given as the group of 60 are taken out onto the airstrip and into the dark belly of the aircraft.

To become Airborne qualified, each student must make five jumps over the course of the week. No more, no less. Without the fifth, you are not considered Airborne qualified.

Students normally make two of the jumps with combat equipment and one at night. Jumps are made from about 2 miles above the earth.

After escaping his harness and collapsing his chute, he must roll the chute up as he was taught and place it into the canvas bag he carried down with him.

He carries this and his unused reserve chute on his back the half-mile to the pick-up point.

Already the next group of parachutists are descending onto the Drop Zone he is leaving.

Cries of "AirBORNE!" are heard and students happily congratulate each other on surviving the jump. War stories are told of near misses and hard landings.

They are ready to do it again.

radio and talk shows among his other interests.

Murphy has recently returned from an extensive tour of the Mid East, which will be the topic of his lecture, "A Dialogue about the Mid East." The program will take place Monday, November 5, at 7 p.m. in the Southern Center for Continuing Education. For more information, call David Addington at 681-5138.

CLEC and the art department are sponsoring a lecture by Alan Larkin on lithography, "The Artist Discusses his Work." The lecture will take place at 7 p.m. in room 340 of the Foy Building. Larkin will give a demonstration workshop from 8 a.m. to noon and from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. in the Foy Building on the third floor in the printmaking studio. For more information, call Bernie Solomon at 681-5358.

All departmental programs are funded by Student Activity monies and are open to anyone interested.

nization for Students. Its purpose will be to provide opportunities for networking between students and professionals in the hospitality industry.

St. Pat's will strive to unite engineering technology in engineering and allow them to interact as a united group by promoting service, altruism, and fraternity.

If you see any group here that might interest you, it may be approved soon, so look for their signs around campus. Contact one of these groups, attend a meeting and get involved. Joining a student organization is a great way to broaden your contacts and your horizons.
