Tomorrow is last day for voter registration

All five city council seats open for December election, two challenged

By Kevin Hudson

Managing Editor

Tomorrow is the deadline for voter registration for the Statesboro City Council election in December.

All five of the council seats are open for the Dec. 6 election.

To register to vote in the city election, students and others must register at city hall by 5 p.m. on Nov. 6. Only those which live inside the city limits may vote in city elections.

All of the incumbents have qualified for reelection. The incumbents are Lewis W. "Bo" Hook, T. Eddie Rushing, John Newton, David Shumake and Charles Brown.

Two other residents have announced their intent to run.

John West is challenging Charles Brown for one of the two seats which represent the GSU community in district four.

Shumake is being run against by Earl Jones in district two, which covers much of the west-central portion of the city.

The other three councilmen have not been challenged, and will be reelected unless a write-in candidate receives the majority of the votes in one of their districts.

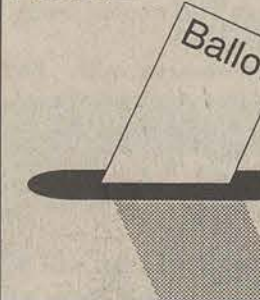

The deadline for notice of intent to run as a write-in candidate is 20 days prior to the election.

City councilmen in Statesboro serve four-year terms.

The city council is the law-making body of Statesboro. Its members are also responsible for zoning changes, city utilities, beer/wine licensing and other local regulations.

City hall is located at 26 South Main Street next to the old Piggly Wiggly site. The offices are open from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.

University of Iowa shocked by mass murder, suicide

By Robert Becker

Chicago Tribune

IOWA CITY — When Police Chief R.J. Winkelhake raced over to the University of Iowa campus Friday to aid in the search for killer Gang Lu, he had no idea that the gunman was hiding just down the hall from his own wife's office.

Winkelhake was among the officers who responded to a call for police at Van Allen Hall, where the gunman had shot four people, including a rival physics student who had won a $1,000 academic prize that Lu, 28, apparently believed should have been his.

A few minutes later, a second call came into 911 placing the killer at Jessup Hall. The chief knew Jessup Hall well because his wife, Kathy, worked there in the office of Academic Affairs.

It had been two years since Winkelhake, 49, left the top police job in Vernon Hills, Ill., for Iowa City. He had also been deputy chief in Palatine, Ill., for 11 years.

"It's quiet here compared to Chicago," Winkelhake said Sunday. "But it's certainly not a quiet little town."

Winkelhake rushed past paramedics leaning over two victims shot on the first floor of Jessup Hall. Told that the suspect might be upstairs, he drew his gun and ran to the stairwell.

At the top of the stairs, he saw his wife — safe. "It was quite a relief," Winkelhake said.

But she immediately told him something that he needed to know: She had just heard a shot down the hallway.

Winkelhake realized that the gunman was on the second floor and that there was a possibility "he was still at it."

He started down the hall and discovered many students inside classrooms. "There was a lot of confusion," Winkelhake said.

Winkelhake flung open the classroom doors and yelled at those inside to "get down, stay quiet and lock the door."

He and other officers kept searching. "You go in a door and you're worried," Winkelhake said. "You hope if you do find him, he's not standing up aiming a gun at you."

Moments later, Winkelhake found Lu lying on the floor of a room at the end of the hallway.

Lu still had a .38-caliber gun in his hand. He was breathing, but he had shot himself in the head. Paramedics were called; Lu died before they arrived.

One of Lu's victims was T. Anne Cleary, a colleague of Kathy Winkelhake. She died

New book blames many for women's problems

By Susan Ager

Knight-Ridder Newspapers

An angry book, but well written, they're saying.

That makes journalist Susan Faludi think they've missed the point.

Her new book has an angry title: "Backlash: The Undeclared War Against American Women." Between the covers, too, is a relentless fury fueled by arsenals of statistics, studies and personal interviews.

Its targets? The media. The fashion and cosmetics industries. New right moralists. And everyone else who, over the past 15 years, wittingly or not, helped convince women that feminism failed them or, worse, ruined their lives.

"An angry book, but trenchantly written, highly readable," says Newsweek, which takes a big hit in the book.

Faludi dismisses such angry-but-readable reviews as "another example of how the backlash operates — enlisting women to keep themselves in check, by being told over and over again there's something wrong with expressing outrage."

Alas, the backlash against "Backlash" is beginning.

Men are particularly uncomfortable with women's anger because they can't avoid feeling guilty. She says it's as if they know, deep in their hearts: "women have been had, and when they wake up to it, we're really gonna be in trouble."

"Is this hostile man-bashing?" she asks of her book. "Is this another irrational screed from a woman? No. It's possible, I would argue, to be angry without being crazy. To have reasoned anger, based on real evidence that women have been mistreated."

Even her friends, though, say the author of "Backlash" is not the Susan Faludi they know. Not the mild-mannered Wall Street Journal reporter who seems happiest quietly writing at her terminal, rarely joining newsroom debates.

Faludi, 31, acknowledges that her work on the book has changed her.

This is how it began:

On the plane to New York for a friend's wedding in 1986, Faludi read a Newsweek cover story that proclaimed women like her were "more likely to be shot by a terrorist" than to find a husband.

"I arrived in New York in a total funk," she recalls. She believed the numbers Newsweek quoted: A Harvard/Yale study that showed college-educated women had just a 20-percent chance of marrying at age 30. By 35, their chance plunged to 5 percent.

She moped for weeks; at 26, she was just a few years short of very bad odds. She was amazed that before Newsweek bludgeoned her, she had never spent a single hour in marital panic. And she began to poke around, with the aim of writing a story about career women's man-less plight.

The more she poked, the more holes she found: Bad methodology, bad assumptions, "about 14 things wrong with the study." It didn't take long for her to corner the truth: When properly analyzed, census data show career women have a plenty good chance of finding husbands — at least a 58-percent chance at age 30 — and that it's men who face a woman shortage.

"I felt had," she says. She got mad.

And now she's getting even.

"Backlash" takes on perpetrators of that tall tale and others: That career women are infertile because they waited too long. That working moms are stressed out and would rather be home. That women contend with less discrimination and harassment in the "post-feminist" workplace.

She even confronts the myth that women long for sexy underthings beneath their no-nonsense suits.

The book is dense, chewy and challenging — good bedtime reading, whatever your persuasion, only if you like to sleep seething. At 544 pages, it includes 81 pages of footnotes alone. It would have been hundreds of pages longer if her editors had allowed her to include all the data she found to support her three-pronged argument:

Every time women show a little bit of progress, a backlash begins, fueled by cultural anxiety and men's anger. Myths are spread.

Those messages go unchallenged and repeated, in trend story after trend story. Women buy them. They begin to turn on themselves, blaming feminism and themselves for foolish choices.

Finally, having turned on themselves and feminism, women become isolated, "their political wills broken." They turn inward, focusing on their own homes, their own offices, their own men — exactly what backlash promoters hoped.

Faludi hopes her book can stir new passion in women for a stage bigger than their own lives. She calls the Anita Hill/Clarence Thomas episode "just a dress rehearsal" for women who, she predicts, will galvanize like never before when — not if — the U.S. Supreme Court reverses abortion rights granted by Roe vs. Wade.

What happened to Anita Hill could not have come at a better time for publicists working to sell Faludi's book.

What still puzzles Faludi is later polls showing only a third of women believed Hill. She hasn't had time to analyze the numbers. But she suspects they say at least this: Women are well trained to "get admiration and applause by fitting in with the norm." In the same way, she says, women were early opponents of a Persian Gulf War, but changed their minds later to side with the guys and Washington leadership.

Susan Faludi is, in some key ways, a new woman after five years of chronicling the backlash against feminism's tiny and fleeting successes.

She started wearing plain, sturdy, cotton panties, produced by Jockey for Her, almost every day "except some Saturdays." It's a brand she discovered while dismantling one silly myth: that wistful single career women were buying fantasy lingerie. Instead, she found, sales of teddies and other flimsy little things tumbled in the '80s. One woman explained, "I really don't need to sit on snaps all day."

Meanwhile, Jockey's underwear has, within five years of its introduction in 1983, grabbed a 40-percent share of the lingerie market.

Proof, she says, that women just won't buy some myths.

Excerpts from Susan Faludi's Backlash: The Undeclared War Against American Women

By Susan Ager

Knight-Ridder Newspapers

One female reader happily dubbed Susan Faludi's book Backlash: The Undeclared War Against American Women "a tool kit" for building arguments against bashers and backslashers of feminism. It's full of gee-whiz facts and stats, some sobering, some fun. Among them:

—There's no evidence any bra was ever burned during the opening decade of the Women's Movement, although a Chicago ad man tried to persuade women to toss their bras into the Chicago River. Three of his employees complied.

—The cocooning trend, which suggested career women would return to the home, was launched by market researcher Faith Popcorn. The word "just popped into my head" in a 1986 interview, Popcorn told Faludi.

—Good Housekeeping's controversial "New Traditionalists" ad campaign, which featured serene women posed at home with tidy children, was created by a man who decided career women were returning home because Faith Popcorn said so, and because oatmeal sales were up.

—In a 1986 cover story about the man-shortage for career women, Newsweek said a woman over 30 was "more likely to be shot by a terrorist" than to find a husband. Someone had said it as a joke, but it made its way into the story, and stories in other publications thereafter. Faludi points out that a single woman is more likely to be killed by the husband she eventually finds than by a terrorist.

—Between 1980 and 1987, sales of women's suits rose by almost 6 million units each year, while dresses declined by 29 million units. In 1986, though, U.S. apparel manufacturers cut suit production 40 percent. In 1987, they cut it another 40 percent. That same year, production of garter belts doubled after the Intimate Apparel Council — an all-male board of lingerie makers — set up a special public relations committee to convince America that unhappy career women wanted sexy underthings beneath their suits.

—For 20 years, a large nationwide poll called the Yankelovich Monitor has asked men to define masculinity. The lead answer each time, ahead by a wide margin of being a leader, an athlete, a lover or a decision-maker, was this: "being a good provider for his family."

GSU College Democrats vs. GSU College Republicans

Because we are proud of Georgia – with its God-given natural wonders and its man-made achievements – we know that Georgia can be greater, that the Georgia that is today is only a shadow of the Georgia that can be.

Georgia Democrats have the experience and commitment to lead Georgia in the 90's. We will build on the strength of Georgia's past-- and forge a new future of hope and opportunity for every Georgian.

As Georgia enters a new decade – and a new century to follow it – we need bold leadership, the kind of leadership that will give Georgia a future worthy of its proud past. This is why you should become a Georgia College Democrat.

Why should people join your party, rather than join the opposition or remain independent?

No issue poses greater challenges for state government than health care. Total health care costs for the state are increasing about 20% a year. Whatever health care programs are undertaken, they must be done within the fiscal reality of escalating costs and tighter revenues.

One of the primary challenges is trying to insure that citizens have access to affordable, quality care. One of every six Georgians is defined as "medically indigent." They are employed persons without health insurance or those below the poverty line who do not qualify for Medicaid.

However these are just the beginning of problems in health care. We believe there is a serious need for a complete review of all of Georgia's health care and social service programs.

How does your party propose to handle the crisis in health care?

Senate Majority Leader George J. Mitchell and the Democratic Congressional Leadership today launch an economic recovery and growth package to combat the recession, overcome the damage it has caused, and set the Nation on the road to sustainable long-term economic growth.

This package includes: tax relief to middle-income Americans, unemployment insurance, investing in our Nation's infrastructure, health care, strengthening American education, strengthening the safety net, and, an aggressive energy policy.

Together these policies will begin to put America's economic house back in order during the second disastrous Republican Recession in a decade. We have waited patiently for action from the White House. For the first six months of the recession, however, the Administration refused to admit that there was a problem, and now it refuses to act. Meanwhile, millions of hardworking Americans and their families find it more and more difficult to make ends meet.

Now is the time to act. The economic recovery and growth package that congressional Democrats offer today will put our Nation on the road to recovery and create a foundation for sustainable prosperity.

How does your party propose to eliminate the budget deficit?

Who is to blame for the deficit?

While the topic of abortion is not covered in the party platform, we simply say that we, the Georgia Democrats, trust the women of Georgia to make that choice.

What is your party's stand on abortion?

The party views these two questions as one in the same. The best way to handle the AIDS crisis is through better sex education in secondary institutions.

Georgia has the fifth highest teen pregnancy rate in the nation, the fifth highest infant mortality rate, and ranks eighth in the number of reported AIDS cases. Clearly Georgia's health care and teen pregnancy prevention is in a crisis. The social and human costs of teen pregnancy and infant mortality are unacceptable. Teenage girls who have babies too often are forced to drop out of school and suffer a severe loss of earnings potential.

The state should get serious about teaching teenagers about the consequences of teen pregnancy and aids. We support establishing a Commission composed of doctors, school psychologists, teachers, religious leaders, and parents to determine best way to teach sex education. One of our top priorities should be to see that every high school offers sex and AIDS instruction.

What is the best way to handle the AIDS crisis?

Should sex education be taught in the schools?

No one is denying that George Bush as the advantage in 1992, but as the Gulf War drifts further from the headlines, Americans are starting to finally see how important domestic issues are becoming.

Governor Bill Clinton of Arkansas is the Democratic front-runner that is addressing these issues. He states that the next campaign should be about how to rebuild the country's internal strength so we can be what we envision our nation to be. Gov. Clinton knows that he will be fighting an uphill battle, but it is because he feels so strongly about what is best for America that he has chosen to run. The best that can happen is that we have a new president that cares about the homefront. The worst is that the Republicans will have to face the real issues, and finally act on them.

Who will win the '92 presidential elections?

Because we are not yet chartered it is difficult to give a good number. We are currently actively recruiting new members. Anyone interested should contact Connie Phillips at 681-7445 or Chris Clark at 681-0655.

How many members do you have in your organization, locally?

The GSU College Republicans believe that the proper function of government is to do for the people those things that have to be done but cannot be done, or cannot be done as well, by individuals, and that the most effective government is government closest to the people.

We believe that good government is based on the individual and that each person's ability, dignity, freedom and responsibility must be honored and recognized.

We believe that free enterprise and the encouragement of individual initiative and incentive have given this nation an economic system second to none: We believe that sound money management should be our goal.

We believe government should retain those principles of the past worth retaining, yet always be receptive to new ideas with an outlook broad enough to accommodate thoughtful change and varying points of view.

Finally, we believe that the Republican Party is the best vehicle for translating these ideals into positive and successful principles of government.

This is why we feel you should be a Republican.

Our party has and will continue to propose bills that will provide adequate and affordable health care to all Americans. We should give in to socialized medicine. Study what has happened to health care in England since they have chosen this path.

Both Presidents Ronald Reagan and George Bush proposed two Republican-based constitutional amendments. The first, line item veto, was an amendment that would have given the president the power to strike one or more lines from any proposed bill. The second proposal, a balanced budget, would force the powers of government to balance the budget, and keep it that way. However, neither proposal was passed, due to the tenacious Democratic way of thinking.

The Democratic party is responsible for the enormous deficit. Short term thinking Democrats, under President [Franklin] Roosevelt's administration, initiated deficit spending as a solution to economic dilemmas during the Great Depression.

The Constitution of the USA clearly states "all revenue bills must originate in the House of Representatives." The Democratic party controlled the House long enough to implement the idea of short term planning; consequently, their decisions did not consider the future generations of America.

The last time the budget was balanced was under Republican President's administration. During that time, a balanced budget was possible due to the aid of a Republican controlled House of Representatives and Senate.

The Republican Party is not in favor of abortion unless rape or incest has occurred or the mother's life is at risk. The Bush administration has conveyed a strong message to the country: placing a baby up for adoption is the alternative to abortion. However, some well-intentioned Americans may find legalizing abortion is a better alternative than previous "back alley" practices.

The lack of solid American morals and values dictate the present laws governing abortion. However, with the recent appointment of Clarence Thomas to the United States Supreme Court, these laws may soon be changed to protect the lives of innocent babies.

The morals and values of sex education should be taught in the home. Defining sex is the responsibility of a young person's parents. The educational system of America should not be used to carry out that job. Teachers should not be obligated to present his or her views on sex to another person's child.

The Republican Party recognizes that AIDS can affect all people and is compassionate in that respect. However, the best way to handle the AIDS crisis is by treating it as a disease and not a civil rights issue.

George Bush... need we explain why?

The GSU College Republicans has 85 members on roll. For further information, one can call Will Hurst at 764-8378 or Keith Wilson at 681-6766.

Imagine Sweetheart Circle full of high-spirited, enthusiastic women. That was the scene last Thursday October 31 at Delta Tau Delta's annual "Yell like Hell".

Participating sororities, Alpha Omicron Pi, Kappa Delta, Kappa Kappa Gamma, Phi Mu and Zeta Tau Alpha each performed a group of chants and cheers that displayed their spirit and sisterhood. Also, each group displayed a banner using the Yell like Hell theme.

The pledge classes appeared first and were later joined by the sisters of the sorority for the last part of the competition.

Awards were presented at the end of the event. Alpha Omicron Pi won the Best Banner competition and the trophy for Overall Participation.

Kappa Kappa Gamma was the winner in the "Yell" itself. The event was created to help Delta Tau Delta raise money for their philanthropy projects.

In spite of constant warnings about the lack of calcium in their diets, many people still don't get enough. A glass of whole milk - the most obvious solution - is high in fat and calories. Even lowfat milk may not have an appealing taste.

A calcium deficient diet is most harmful to women. A survey by the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) shows that women between the age of 12 and 19 consume only 65% of the Recommended Daily Allowance (RDA) of calcium. Women between ages 20 and 49 are getting only 71% of the RDA.

Between the ages 11 and 24, the RDA for both males and females is 1200 mg, the equivalent of about four 8-oz. glasses of milk. For adults over age 24, the RDA is 800 mg, or nearly the equivalent of three 8-oz. glasses of milk.

These statistics should be taken seriously since an estimated 25 million Americans suffer from osteoporosis, a condition in which severe bone deterioration causes fractures, spinal curvature, and excruciating pain. Even though much remains to be learned about the causes of osteoporosis, calcium intake remains to be a significant factor - along with a sedentary life-style, heavy smoking, a small body frame, and genes. Including sufficient calcium in your diet strengthens bones, and if adults over age 35 consume too little, the weakening bones that normally begin around that age may accelerate dangerously.

Sharon Lerch of American Health magazine says that adequate calcium intake is especially important for women, who are at risk for osteoporosis at an earlier age than men because the quick drop in the hormone estrogen that accompanies menopause speeds bone loss. Although women in their post-menopausal

A new wave of HIV positive carriers is entering middle and upper class society, with college-aged people being the fastest growing infected population. AIDS is the fifth leading cause of death among college women.

Dr. William Darrow, Chief of Behavioral and Prevention Research Branch Division of STD/HIV Prevention, will present "Assessing AIDS Prevention," Nov. 1 at 10 a.m. in the Southern Center assembly hall. The program is sponsored by the department of sociology and anthropology with funding from CLEC.

Dr. Darrow is the highest ranking sociologist at the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta. This lecture about AIDS and AIDS prevention will contain the most up-to-date information on the disease and the response of the general public.

GSU has also recognized the need for AIDS education. A newcomer to the GSU community, Whitney Himes, was recently appointed to the position of Health Educator for the Department of Health Services.

Himes is currently developing a Unified Peer Education Program on campus and of the main issues the program will address AIDS is a top priority.

The program will not only deal with prevention, but it will help people assist those who are terminally ill due to the disease.

"With AIDS entering into all various populations we will eventually know somebody; whether it be a relative, a friend, or a co-worker with the disease," said Himes.

The program will also focus on increasing student awareness about the growing problem. "Students don't take the issue seriously till it hits close to home," Himes said.

The education portion of the program will not condemn students, but help them examine their life-styles which may put them in a high risk category.

Himes said, "The program's mission is to help students take a negative behavior and change it to a positive behavior."

On a lighter note, don't forget that the second event in CLEC's Performing Arts Series, "Mark Twain: America's First Stand-up Comedian" will be presented at the Foy Recital Hall Nov. 12 and 13 at 8 p.m. Tickets for the event are limited. GSU students, faculty, staff, and administration can pick up their free tickets from the Union Information Counter upon the presentation of a valid GSU i.d. # Eagles iced by Penguins 19-17

By Rod Swinson
Staff Writer

The Penguins of Youngstown State dealt a crucial blow to the Eagles playoff hopes by handing the Eagles a tough 19-17 defeat Saturday at Paulson stadium.

"Our playoff hopes were hurt tremendously," said head coach Tim Stowers. "We still have a chance, but it's very slim."

The penguins came out strong on the Eagles home field and marched down the field.

The middle of the Eagle defense was tested time and time again as running backs Tamron Smith and Leo Hawkins burst up the middle for gains of 16 and 11 yards respectively. Smith added another 18-yd run to give the Penguins a first and goal from the Eagle 9.

The Eagle defense stiffened there and held the penguins to a 22-yd field goal by Jeff Wilkins to give the penguins a 3-0 lead.

The Eagle offense started out strong on their opening play as quarterback Derrick McGrady pitched to Don Hudson for a 19-yd gain around the left end. But the Eagle offense stalled right there and was forced to punt.

The penguin offense began another drive like the first until Eagle safety Mark Giles picked off a Ray Isaac pass at the Eagle 40 yard line.

The Eagles could not capitalize on the opportunity and were forced to punt again.

The teams traded possessions to end the first quarter.

The penguin defense made a big play on the Eagles first drive in the second quarter.

Cornerback Reggie Brown intercepted a McGrady pitch at the GSU 48 and sailed down the sideline untouched for a touchdown. The extra point was blocked and the penguins had a 9-0 lead.

"That was probably the biggest play of the game," said McGrady.

On the Eagles next drive McGrady was replaced by reserve quarterback Charles Bostick.

"Derrick (McGrady) did not have the hot hand early in the game," said Stowers. "We thought we should go with Bostick."

The Eagles' offense continued to struggle on their next possession.

The penguin defense came up with another big play as Malcolm Everette recovered a fumble by Lester Efford to give the penguin offense the ball on the Eagle 39-yd line.

The Eagle defense stopped the penguins right there, but Wilkins kicked a 48-yd field goal to give his team a 12-0 lead.

Eagle Cornerback Maurice Reid blocked a Larry Bucciarelli punt to give the Eagles the ball on the penguin 12 yard line.

The Eagle offense failed to put the ball into end zone and had to settle for a 37-yd field goal by David Cool to go in at halftime trailing 12-3.

"Obviously we started off slowly on both sides of the ball," said Stowers. "At one point, we were 0 for 9 on third down conversion, so it's easy to see we were having difficulty moving the ball."

The penguins came out on their first possession of the second half and drove for their final score of the day.

Eagle receiver Darren Willis goes up for a ball against a Youngstown State defender, but it was tipped away. It was indicative of the type of day it was for the Eagles, whose playoff hopes are now in jeopardy. (Photo by Tony Tocco)

Following runs by Smith and Hawkins, who both rushed for over 100 yards, Isaac kept the ball around right end and out ran the Eagle defense 43 yards for another touchdown. Wilkins added the extra point to give the penguins a 19-3 lead.

"We were keying on the misdirection plays and they beat us outside," said defensive end Michael Berry.

McGrady returned to the game in the fourth quarter to try and mount a comeback.

"McGrady is better suited to pass," said Stowers. "He's a little bit older and has a quicker release. He responded well."

The Eagles offense got on track as McGrady completed four passes to Deryl Belser to set up a first and goal at the 8 yard line.

Three plays later Steve Payne took a pitch around the left end to pay dirt. McGrady found his way in for the 2-pt conversion to make the score 19-11 with 11:21 remaining in the game.

The Eagle defense held the penguin offense on their next drive and gave the Eagle offense another chance.

The offense behind McGrady passing marched down the field.

With 5:40 left in the game, McGrady went around the right end to move the Eagles within two. The 2-pt conversion fell just short and the Eagles trailed 19-17.

"I just wanted to get in again and move the team," said McGrady. "We knew if we gave Cool a chance, he would pull us out, but it didn't happen."

The Eagles playoff hopes were hurt as their record fell to 5-4.

"We had a chance to control our own destiny," said Stowers. "We just did not get it done."

The Eagles have an off week this week before taking the field again against Troy St. on homecoming weekend.

Rod's Review

By Rod Swinson
Staff Writer

"ADDICTION," said Richard Pryor, "is a cunning and baffling thing."

As I pondered a topic for this review, I tried to avoid the sickening but sad story of Roy Tarpley (formerly) of the Dallas Mavericks.

The story itself, is so very sad, but this story had an especially heavy weight on me as an African American because Tarpley has squandered an opportunity that most African Americans can only dream of.

Tarpley is not alone. Let's think back to the 1986 lottery picks and look at how they have fared.

Roy Tarpley was the seventh pick, pegged as one of the great talents to play the game. Now he's banned from the NBA for life. (Actually he can reappear in two years.)

William Bedford was the sixth pick of the Phoenix Suns. Now he's with the Pistons after some time in the drug rehabilitation center. He was arrested for his eighth speeding ticket while driving with a suspended license.

Kenny Walker was the fifth pick. He is now an unsigned free agent.

Chuck Person was picked fourth. He is now a bonified player for the Indiana Pacers.

Chris Washburn was the third pick. He was just sentenced to three years in prison last week for drug possession.

Len Bias was the second pick. His tragic death from a drug overdose a couple of days after the draft has become a catalyst for drug awareness.

Brad Daugherty was the first pick of the Cleveland Cavaliers. He has finally grown up to become a real man in the NBA.

It's a shame that four of the seven have been involved in drugs.

I was really happy to know that all seven were African Americans, but four of them did not appreciate the opportunity that was afforded them, which brings me back to my subject.

Roy Tarpley has taken a $3 million bill and lit a match to it.

Think about the chance that Tarpley has blown.

The front office of the Mavericks cut a deal with Tarpley in 1989. He would make $500,000 annually through the 1990-1991 season with a healthy incentive to be added.

His big payoff, the first $3 million, would not start until the Junior quarterback Derrick McGrady powers through the pack to score the Eagles first touchdown. After being benched in the second quarter, he led them back to within two points of a tie. ## The Comeback Man

By Michael Strong
Sports Editor

Eagle quarterback Derrick McGrady rose from the dead on Saturday to lead GSU back to within two points of a victory against Youngstown State.

In a season of musical quarterbacks this season, McGrady is the third person to play it. Freshman Charles Bostick was the starter against Auburn, but lost the job to Albert Huntley when the offense struggled.

Then, Huntley reinjured his ankle and Bostick was again the starter.

Then came the James Madison game. Bostick was yanked in the second quarter and McGrady led the Eagles to the second greatest comeback in team history.

But when he pitched out to Youngstown State's Reggie Brown who returned it 48 yards for a touchdown, McGrady's future was in doubt.

"I didn't know if I was going back in or not," he said.

He didn't. Bostick came in off the bench for the rest of the first half and started the second half.

"We just felt like we needed a spark," said Coach Tim Stowers. "Charles moved the ball pretty well at the end of the half, so we started him in the second [half]."

But Bostick ran into problems in the second half. So after three series in which the team went "three and out", McGrady came back in to start the fourth quarter.

He began to weave his magic again.

On his first series, the Eagles drove 68 yards on ten plays for a touchdown. McGrady went around the left side to get the two point conversion.

Apparently, the time off did him some good.

"I wasn't very sharp," he said. "It gave me some time to settle down. I wasn't nervous or anything, I just wasn't sharp."

McGrady was sharp on the next series as well, as the Eagles scored another touchdown and were down by only two.

They went for the two-point conversion to tie the game, but Darryl Hopkins was stopped on the two yard line.

The offense never got the ball back as the Youngstown State ran out the clock for the victory.

But McGrady's performance got a positive response from Stowers.

"He did well," he said. "He knows the offense, he's been around for four years."

But McGrady had his own view on it.

"This just goes to show that we're never out of a ballgame," he said. "We always have a chance. It [falling behind early] just caught up with us this week."

Strong

I have made a mistake. In my overzealousness to get out a hot news/sports story I did not double check the facts and those facts turned out to be incorrect.

In the Oct. 22 edition of the George-Anne I wrote a story that appeared on the front page about two students that had allegedly spoken with two Braves players: Steve Avery and Sid Bream. The students then allegedly spoke with Scott Erickson and Kent Hrbek.

Apparently, an Atlanta television station was doing a live remote from Minneapolis and decided to randomly call someone in Georgia to talk about the World Series.

Because I received the information on deadline night for the paper, I was unable to check with the television station that supposedly had called these students.

The students I spoke with concerning "the event" sincerely thought they had spoken with those players. I thought it odd a station in Atlanta would call someone in south Georgia, but since I know them personally, I took them at their word.

To this moment I believe that they thought they had spoken with the players.

Over the next couple of days after the story ran, I tried to speak with the station about the call, but could never get through.

Finally, this week I did. This station informed me that they did not make any calls to students as a matter of fact, this station doesn't even have a news department.

I checked back with those students to see if they were sure it was that station that they had spoken with and they were sure that was it.

So, I called the station back and reaffirmed that they did not place those calls. I called several other stations in the Atlanta area and they all gave me similar responses: No calls to any students at GSU.

On Tuesday, Oct. 29, I received a phone call from an unidentified woman saying that she had received a similar phone call, but her roommate knew of a couple of guys who were going to make some phone calls to students claiming that they were a T.V. station from Atlanta doing a live remote from Minneapolis....

I also spoke with someone who claimed that they also received a phone call, but recognized the voice and called the caller's bluff.

So from all of this overwhelming evidence, I can only assume that the whole thing was a hoax.

This I can live with: I should have held the story until I double checked the call with the station or some other source. This is my fault and I will learn from this mistake. When you take this kind of job, you have to learn to accept the responsibilities that go along with it.

Part of those responsibilities is owning up to being duped and admitting you made a mistake. In the future, I will be the wiser for it.

This I cannot handle: Any moron thinking it is funny to fool somebody by pretending to be a celebrity and giving their victim a false thrill - for no other apparent reason than boredom.

I'm sure these people never thought it would make it into the newspaper, but that is not the issue. The issue is that they have humiliated and hurt these people.

More importantly, they have placed a friendship that I value into jeopardy because I have to report that it was a joke.

I don't blame the students for not wanting this to be printed, nobody wants to be a made fool of, especially when it will be in a newspaper, but it is my job to report things as they are, not as I would like them to be.

As far as the people who pulled the hoax, you're lucky you don't have to suffer the embarrassment and humiliation that your victims now feel, but hey, what do you care right?

Well, I can say without reservation that running that story is going to cost me in more than one way and there are only three people to blame: Two people who own a phone and myself.

The GSU Mens and Womens Swimming teams scored impressive victories over rival University of North Carolina at Charlotte teams Friday evening in Hanner Natatorium.

The Mens team out-swam UNCC winning by a decisive 164-69 margin.

The Ladies were equally as impressive. They submerged the Lady 49ers by a score of 151-78.

This was the first meet of the season for both teams.

UNCC was looking to avenge losses to the GSU teams they suffered in last year's Southern States Championships.

A very competitive meet was anticipated, but the 49ers couldn't even keep it close.

The Women kept an eight meet winning streak alive with the win. The streak dates back to last year's Southern States Champion team who went undefeated.

Junior Stacy Scheible led the team with first-place finishes in the 200-yard individual medley and the 200-yard backstroke.

Scheible also established a school record in the 200-yard individual medley with a time of 2:11.00. In doing so she improved upon the record which she established last season.

Sophomore Heather Gordon swam away with victories in the 50-yard freestyle (25.75) and the 100-yard freestyle (57.20).

Freshman Karen Hurley also chipped-in with two victories in the 200-yard freestyle and the 500-yard freestyle.

The Lady Eagles amassed 151 points compared to the Lady 49ers 78.

On the Mens side, highly touted freshman Rodrigo Puig-Mir was the high-point man for the Eagles. He led the Eagles by out-distancing the field in the distance events.

He won the 500-yard freestyle (4:58.91) and the 1,000-yard freestyle (10:33.49) events.

years benefit from increasing their calcium intake to the RDA, women between ages 40 and 49 average only 569 mg of calcium a day according to the USDA's food survey.

Taking calcium supplements is good, but it is better to get calcium naturally through your diet. Fortunately, there are products other than milk that are low in fat and rich in calcium. Just a few good sources of products rich in calcium and low in fat are plain lowfat yogurt, Swiss cheese, American cheese, spinach, broccoli, collard greens, figs, oranges, sardines, salmon, almonds, and green beans. Most importantly, you should read the label on any product that you purchase to determine the calcium content.

Saturday from a head wound. Three other victims – the chairman of the physics and astronomy department, Lu's adviser and another professor – also died.

On Sunday, the Johnson County attorney described a letter addressed by Lu to the Chicago Tribune and three other news organizations outlining the actions he took Friday.

The letter also contained statements by Lu that guns were a way for him to "redress grievances," said the prosecutor, J. Patrick White.

Lu had given copies of the undated letter to acquaintances and asked them to mail them. Instead, they were turned over to police.

In the letter, the full contents of which were not released, Lu complained about his lack of a job, a letter of reference he had requested from the faculty, and the academic award given to the rival he killed, Linhua Shan.

"It's such a waste, such a tragedy," Winklehake said.

Solution to "Tennis Anyone?"

Rod's Review

'92 season.

In simple terms, Tarpley threw a $3million score out of the window just for a high. (Two weeks before going to the bank)

"ADDICTION, IS A CUNNING AND BAFFLING THING."

I know it's not a BLACK thing, but it just hits a little more close to home when it's a Black that blows his chance.

Where is our world headed.

When I think of the people like Dr. Martin Luther King who fought so hard for an opportunity for a dream to become a reality, I really don't know whether to feel sorry for Tarpley or be angry at him.

What a waste. But the man really has a problem. He is not his own man anymore. He's the slave to a substance. That's Sad.

One writer from a major newspaper in Boston offered this opinion:

"A man like Roy Tarpley whose inability to cope with his problem has cost him all of his earning power. He is well-bred and intelligent. In sober times, he has been able to articulate his problem. But despite what you and I would consider sufficient motivation, he has yet to conquer his addiction. It is a sad, frightening tale."

Those words express my opinion explicitly.

I just simply desire for people (especially my people) to overcome the pressure to escape reality and make our dreams become a reality.

As for Mr. Tarpley, I thank him for one thing. He helped me put life in perspective.

But for the grace of God, there goes Rod.

It is my sincere pleasure to initiate the STD Bulletin. In this segment the latest info about STDs will be reviewed. I will describe the symptoms and signs of each disease as well as various treatment options. The relative risk of contracting each disease will be discussed. Most importantly, how to avoid getting STDs will be addressed. I thank the George Anne for its cooperation in providing this very important health service to the students of GSU.

Topic #2: Genital Warts &amp; Cancer

Most experts now agree that the same virus that causes genital warts also can cause pre-cancer and cancer of the cervix. Any woman with genital warts should be evaluated for the presence of abnormal cervical cells. Although cervical cancer is a deadly disease, if it is caught in its pre-invasive stage is 100% curable.

Most women who have been exposed to the human papilloma virus don't get warts. They usually find out the infection with a pap smear. Annual pap smears remain the cheapest and most reliable screening tool to prevent cervical cancer. Pap smears have decreased the rate of death from cervical cancer since 1957 by 70%.

Colposcopy is the microscopic examination of the cervix to detect pre-cancer and cancer. If the pap smear is abnormal a colposcopy is necessary. It is done in the office and does not require anesthesia. Small biopsies of the cervix are sometimes taken if abnormal areas are seen under the colposcope.

The medical community is now worried about future epidemic of cervical cancer since 15-20% of teenagers have already been infected with this virus. In some groups the infection rate is much higher.
