Public Safety Week

Public Safety Week, held Nov 4-7, was designed to increase student awareness in all areas of public safety.

Public Safety Week was initiated and planned by the campus Student Services Committee with Cathy Shriver, assistant professor of nursing as the chairperson.

Shriver organized a student survey at GSU during Fall quarter, 1991 and found that between 65-90 percent of students did not have their seatbelts fastened upon entering major roadways. Only 4 percent of the 24 front seat passengers observed had his/her seatbelts fastened.

Students were stationed at parking lot exits during the week asking drivers and passengers to fasten their seatbelts.

Motor vehicle injuries cost us $48.7 billion a year, according to Shriver. If everyone buckled up, 12,000 lives would be saved each year. The college-aged group has a death rate from motor vehicle accidents two times the rate of any other age group in the U.S.

In 1989, Georgia made seatbelt usage mandatory. The campus now has signs at each major exit from campus to remind all drivers and passengers to buckle up.

Those helping with Public Service Week were the Student Government Association, the Panhellenic Council, Debbie Rowe of campus public safety and George Jackson from the State Patrol.

AIDS Lecture

William Darrow, Director of AIDS Research at the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta, will give a lecture on AIDS, AIDS prevention and the general public's response to the disease on Nov. 11 in the Southern Center Assembly Hall.

AIDS is rapidly becoming a leading cause of death among college students.

Darrow, who has published widely on the subject of AIDS, is a renowned expert in the field. He received his Bachelor of Arts degree at the University of Connecticut in 1962 and went to receive his doctorate at Emory University in 1973.

Currently he is chief of the behavioral and prevention research branch of the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta. Darrow is also an adjunct professor at Emory University School of Public Health.

The GSU Campus Life Enrichment Committee along with the Department of Sociology and Anthropology are presenting the lecture.

FCA wins Southern Pride Spirit Flag

GSU's Southern Pride Marching Band presented the Southern Pride Flag to GSU's Fellowship of Christian Athletes at Saturday's game.

At the Oct. 26 game against the University of Central Florida, the band judged the FCA as the most spirited campus organization in Paulson Stadium.

"It was a great privilege for us to be chosen as the most spirited group," said Matthew Appel, FCA president. "We really enjoyed waving the flag and showing our school spirit at Saturday's game."

A local businessman met with GSU fraternity and sorority presidents Monday afternoon at a local nightclub to encourage voter registration among GSU students, and to discuss a possible liquor referendum for Statesboro and Bulloch County.

Approximately a dozen Greek leaders responded to the invitation of Chris Sampson, owner of two local nightclubs, to meet regarding the feasibility of a registration drive which could lead to, among other things, increased support for the legalization of liquor sales in Bulloch County.

"The main point of what I'm trying to say is to go back to your people and say 'We need to register to vote,'" said Sampson to the assembled fraternity and sorority leaders.

"Don't just think of it for the liquor referendum, but for any vote that comes up in the future."

"If we ever get this off the ground, there is going to be a lot of resentment," Sampson said,

"There are going to be ... people that don't want to see it happen."

Talk of a referendum met with mixed reactions from the fraternity and sorority presidents, many of whom expressed fear of possible negative publicity, which could be attached with official support for such a proposal.

"My personal opinion is that I'd like to do anything to get liquor here," said one Greek representative, "But I can't say that for ... my chapter."

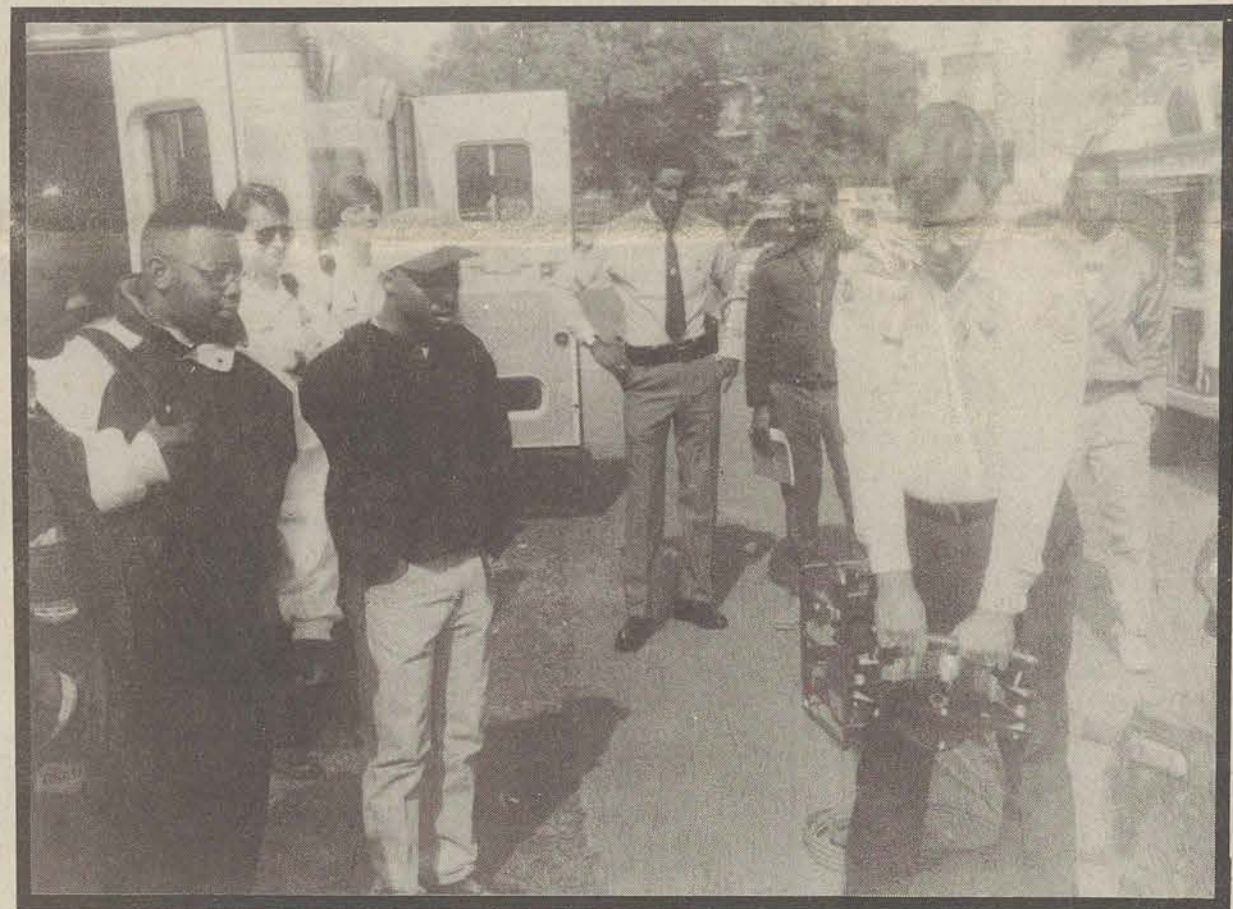

While the possibility of passing a liquor referendum would be only one aspect of increased student registration, much of the evening's discussion centered around this possibility.

"I think [legalization of liquor sales] would do a world of good for a lot of reasons, not just the fact of having fun, but that it would have a lot of monetary value both to the county and the city," said Sampson, who cited increased restaurant revenues and increased property values as possible results of liquor legalization. "I think the people that oppose it ... years from now would be happy that it happened."

Sampson referred to a 1976 liquor referendum which was voted down by only 102 out of a total of approximately 2,600 votes, noting that most college students were out of town when the vote was taken.

Sampson emphasized throughout the meeting that the referendum he would like to see passed would allow for liquor sales by the drink, which would make it possible for restaurants and clubs to sell mixed drinks but would not allow for the sale of bottled liquor.

The referendum process

By Doug Gross

Staff Writer

The areas from which the needed 35 percent of voters would be drawn to pass a referendum in Statesboro and Bulloch County is "vague," according to Probate Judge Lee Deloach.

The question concerns whether the signers of the required petition would have needed to be registered to vote in Bulloch County in the last General Election, in 1988, or if the figure is simply a number of registered voters equal to 35 percent of those registered in 1988.

"There has been no talk of [a referendum] since I've been in office," said Deloach. "I'm doing a lot of research on it ... I would hate to speculate."

Deloach reported he was conferring with the Attorney General to clarify the issue.

The following information, provided by a spokesperson from the office of Judge Deloach, details the steps in the process of having a referendum passed in Bulloch County.

- File a petition with 35 percent of registered voter's signatures. This percentage is of the number of registered voters in the last General Election.

- The Superintendent of Elections has to validate the petition by verifying each signature on the petition.

- The Superintendent shall set a date for the election not less than 30 days nor more than 60 days after the call.

- A notice in the legal paper (The Statesboro Georgian) containing the date and purpose of the referendum shall be published once a week for two weeks.

- Call of an election is the date of the first publication in

Media mogul Robert Maxwell dies

By Ruth Landa

New York Daily News

NEW YORK -- Robert Maxwell, flamboyant publisher of the Daily News and rags-to-riches master of a global media empire, died at sea Tuesday after he apparently fell overboard from his yacht anchored off the Canary Islands.

Maxwell, 68, was reported missing early Tuesday from the 180-foot Lady Ghislaine. His body was found in the Atlantic Ocean 20 miles northwest of Grand Canary Island, near northwest Africa, and was later identified by his wife, Elisabeth, at a military base in Las Palmas. She was accompanied by her son Philip, one of the couple's seven children.

Officials said Maxwell -- who was taking a week-long vacation and was the only passenger aboard -- apparently fell overboard, but they did not know how it happened. An autopsy was planned.

The death shook Maxwell's $2 billion media empire, which includes the New York Daily News and other holdings in the United States, Britain and Israel. Among these are Macmillan Inc., The Racing Times, Berlitz, The European and Britain's Daily Mirror.

Maxwell's son Kevin Maxwell assumed the role of chairman and publisher of the Daily News. He pledged that the Maxwell family would remain dedicated to rebuilding the paper, which his father purchased in March after a five-month strike.

"My father was tremendously excited by the News and its prospects," said Kevin Maxwell, 32. "We are completely committed to continuing the marvelous comeback of the newspaper by providing the support it needs to prosper in the years ahead."

Maxwell was last seen alive on the yacht's deck at 4:45 a.m. (11:45 p.m. EST Monday). The captain, Gus Rankin, and a crew member discovered that Maxwell was not on board when they went to his cabin after he failed to answer a telephone call from New York about 11 a.m.

Rankin radioed a distress call.

There was no suggestion of foul play, said Charles Wilson, editorial director of Maxwell's Mirror Group Newspapers in London. "We can only assume that Mr. Maxwell slipped and fell overboard," he said.

Maxwell had been due to deliver a speech to a dinner of the Anglo-Israel Association at a London hotel Monday night, but organizers were told about 30 minutes before the event began that he was ill. His son Ian gave the speech instead.

At the request of Maxwell Communication Corp. and the Mirror Group, the London Stock Exchange suspended trading in their shares after Maxwell's disappearance. The New York Stock Exchange halted trading on Berlitz International Inc. stock.

English course offered

By Misty McPherson

News Editor

A new two hour course, English 290 -- "The Female Experience: Modern American Drama by Female Playwrights," will be offered this winter by Linda Paige of the department of English and philosophy.

The course will introduce students to feminine concerns and issues as depicted in modern drama.

One major objective will be to define the female experience as portrayed in Modern American drama from a female perspective.

"This course is designed more to be fun and stimulating than it is to be hard," Paige said. "I'm anticipating some great discussions and encouraging men and women to enroll. I want a good mixed group."

The course will deal with about eight playwrights and their works, including: Lillian Hellman's The Children's Hour, Susan Glaspell's Trifles, Carson McCuller's A Member of the Wedding, Lorraine Hansberry's A Raisin in the Sun, Beth Henley's The Miss Firecracker Contest and Crimes of the Heart, Marsha Norman's night, Mother and Getting Out, Adrienne Kennedy's The Owl Answers and Funny House of a Negro, and Ntozake Shange's, For Colored Girls Who Have Considered Suicide When the Rainbow is Not Enuf.

Some of the readings may be supplemented by films, according to Paige.

Mark Twain comes to GSU

Veteran actor Ken Richters to do one-man show

GSU News Service

Statesboro, Georgia: Mark Twain is alive and well and coming to Statesboro. Veteran actor Ken Richters has been signed to bring his internationally touring one-man show "Mark Twain On Tour- America's First Stand-Up Comedian!" to the Foy Recital Hall at GSU on Tuesday, Nov. 12 and Wednesday, Nov. 13 at 8 p.m.

The production, which began its yearly tour in August with a series of performances in Canada, has been presented nearly 900 times over the past 13 years. Ken Richters and "Mark Twain" will return to Europe for a number of performances in May 1992.

Born Samuel Langhorne Clemens at Hannibal, Missouri in 1853, the celebrated humorist spent his 75-year life in a variety of jobs, including steamboat pilot (The call "mark twain" signaled channel depth on the Mississippi River), reporter, editor, publisher, and traveling lecturer. Even today, more than 80 years after his death, Mark Twain continues to stir controversy at every turn of the page- and in his own way reminds us that life must be enjoyed to the fullest. Because of the depression of 1893 and untimely investments in the Webster Publishing Company and Paige Typesetter, Twain, who kept a lavish mansion in Hartford, Connecticut, found himself in the throes of bankruptcy. He announced he would pay all debts in full, and in July 1895 began a world lecture tour. Ken Richters as "Mark Twain On Tour" is set within this time frame.

Twain, most widely known for The Adventures of Tom Sawyer and Adventures of Huckleberry Finn, has been called "an outrageous prankster and a gloomy pessimist." With virtually no subject too sacred for comment, his opinions on education and politics are often quoted:

"It could possibly be shown by facts and figures that there is no distinctly native criminal class in the United States... except for Congress."

"In the first place, God made idiots. This was for practice. Then he made School boards."

Richters, who has been touring as Twain for 13 years, is in his thirties and spends three hours in make-up application before each performance to complete the transformation to the elderly Twain. A familiar face to television audiences around the country, he has performed in films and on a number of network television shows, including "Happy Days," "The Dawn of Summer," "Search for Tomorrow," and "Johnny, We Hardly Knew Ye" on the early political life of John F. Kennedy. He has appeared as Mark Twain in print and television campaigns for the World Trade Center, United Technologies, and AT & T.

Tickets for Ken Richters as "Mark Twain on Tour- America's First Stand-Up Comedian!" are limited. General admission tickets for the CLEC-sponsored performances are available to the public at the CLEC office in the Foy Building or by calling 681-5434 from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Single admission tickets are See Mark Twain, page 8

'Of Tragic Misconceptions' explores identities

By Carlton Dickerson

Staff Writer

Last week I had the opportunity to view "Of Tragic Misconceptions," a play written by GSU student Barbara Donnelly, a junior english major, and directed by Ashley Doak, another student.

The play, performed in Studio 101 of the Communication Arts Building, was a dark comedy about people and their failure to grasp their identities.

The play's strange beginnings took place in a psychiatrist's office, with patients waiting to meet with the doctor. Suddenly, the audience becomes involved in the play when the receptionist, played by Natasha Charles, begins acknowledging the presence of the crowd by treating them as if they were in line to see the doctor.

"...remarkable work on the part of the writer and director..."

Natasha Charles did an incredible job in the role of the talkative receptionist, and if she continues with performances like this she just may one day see her name in lights.

After a blackout, the main body of the play begins with two characters who believe they are Jesus, one evil and one good. The evil Jesus (Dan Prince) was constantly committing sins and forgiving himself and ridiculing the good Jesus (Chris Wilkerson). The creation of these characters was remarkable work on the part of the writer and director.

As the play progressed, more mentally disturbed characters entered the office.

Santa Claus (Chris Wilkerson) turns out to be a kleptomaniac, Super man (Jeremy Williams) is a wimp, Emily Dickinson, a slut, and JFK and Marilyn Monroe (Steve Judson and Mica Roberts) are truly confused individuals. The psychiatrist was portrayed by Roman Mercer and "Joe Blow" by Damien Dorsner, and all of these actors did an incredible job.

The play got funnier and funnier until the next scene, when the plot became a bit difficult to follow. The production, at this point, didn't seem to have enough transition between the comic and serious moments. Despite the fact that a few things seemed a bit out of context, the play remained delightful throughout.

As a whole, the production was great. The use of lighting and scenery in Studio 101 was pleasant and Ashley Doak, Barbara Donnelly and the entire cast are to be commended for a fine performance.

PRestige serves as public relations firm

By Nancy Rowell

Staff Writer

Among the many organizations at GSU, one exists that is a little different from the rest. It is called PRestige and it is known as a non-profit, student-operated public relations firm.

"The purpose of PRestige is to give students actual practice as public relations consultants," said Dr. Ginny Rowden, faculty advisor.

"PRestige provides a valuable service to both the community and the students by offering public relations services to our client organizations at no cost while the students involved gain practical, hands-on experience," said Justin Pettigrew, executive director.

PRestige does a variety of work for the various clients. Some accounts require students to have knowledge concerning layout and copy writing of newsletters, brochures, and even calendars. Accounts may also require PRestige members to write feature stories, press releases, and radio spots.

"PRestige is not a club. We operate as a firm, with accounts, deadlines, and actual published work. We feel our knowledge of public relations and our talents will benefit those in the community who utilize PRestige," said Pettigrew.

Some clients that have worked with PRestige are Baskin Robbins, Campus Life Enrichment Committee (CLEC), Joseph's Home for Boys, the Placement Center, the Statesboro Humane Society, and the Statesboro, Georgia Southern Symphony.

"CLEC considers PRestige one of the most valuable student organizations on campus. They have provided CLEC with years of valuable service," said Leslie Tichich, director.

PRestige was founded by a group of students in public relations during the 1984 academic year and became an independent agency in 1986.

PRestige is open to all juniors or seniors with a grade point average of at least 2.0. Students do not have to be public relations

Students have very real reasons to distrust police

Dear Editor,

In the various local and school papers I have seen, time and time again, local law enforcement being given a pat on the back, [and] a chance to explain their actions and what amounts to collective apologies in the name of the students.

I am not angry, just sad. The simple fact is that students have real reasons for disliking and distrusting the police. Yes, I know that most all of prime-time television is devoted to glorifying law enforcement - either in cop shows, detective shows or lawyer shows (our modern-day morality plays) - but deep down in our guts, most of us know better.

How many of our attractive young female students have been pulled over and called "sweetie" or "honey" or otherwise been sexually harassed by the, yes, pot-bellied, tobacco-chewing local police? How many young male students have been wrongly arrested and thrown into patrol cars for minor infractions or worse yet, for "their own good?"

Have we so soon forgotten the videotaped incident of police brutality in L.A.? Do we really think that their "prison guard/SWAT team" mentality is not as common in the minds of police everywhere as is the sight of patrol cars in Statesboro?

And finally, hearing of the videotape that was taken of the 600 or so celebrating students after the Braves won, struck a painfully vivid chord in my memory.

There was once another great gathering of students whose actions were videotaped so that they could be found later. Surely, we are more civilized in this country, so I won't dare compare Sweetheart Circle to Tienenmen Square, but the precedent is set! And I cried about it when I read it...

Christmas is not paganistic

Dear Editor,

Regarding your write-up in the last George-Anne [Oct. 29] titled "Before we ban Halloween let's look at Christmas," I have to ask, do you really know what Christmas is?

It is the celebration of the birth of Jesus Christ, who died for you as well as the rest of the world. Yet you have the nerve to refer to his birthday as "paganistic in origin."

I have to question your inner values, you are extremely misguided, and have no right to degrade something that is so sacred to so many people.

I suggest that the next time you are compelled to write something controversial, you use a little tact. You never know whose toes you may be stepping on.

Ed. cartoon stereotypes Native Americans

Dear Editor,

I am writing to express my displeasure and disappointment after seeing the editorial cartoon in the George-Anne of Oct. 22. The cartoon drawn by Patrick O'Kelley depicted two Atlanta Braves' fans stereotypically drawn as American Indians (barefoot, large-nosed, feathered, scantily clad).

I fail to understand the intention of the artist whose drawing does not represent anything close to Braves' fans.

Perhaps O'Kelley lacks the proper awareness and unintentionally failed to realize that drawing demeaning cultural caricatures, demeans us all. Racism in any form is unacceptable.

Many of us who teach in the School of Education, as well as other representatives from other departments, are working hard to promote a greater sensitivity toward and respect for cultural diversity in our society. Sadly, this cartoon shows how far we have yet to go.

P.S. - An irony is that on a separate page of the same edition, an article was printed that described a Native American perspective of their culture being offensively represented by sports fans.

We should throw the bums out

Let me see if I got this straight

D. J. Smith

I was walking through the mall the other day, and I decided to browse through a toy store. As I walked down one aisle, I passed by some creepy, crawly things, and I started thinking about Congress.

It would seem that the magic phrase these days in Washington is, "I'm sorry." I guess our Congressmen have been taking lessons from Jimmy Swaggart.

Senator Alan Simpson can pointedly question the motives of Anita Hill, even suggesting she was just mad because Thomas wouldn't return her affections, and generally turn (with lots of Senatorial help) the proceedings into a three-ring circus, a spectacle for which this nation must forever be ashamed.

Then all he has to do is apologize, stating, "...The responsibility is mine and I shall handle it and handle it well." That makes things just peachy keen again.

And then there's Sir Ted, of the Royal Family, Kennedy. Marie Antoinette said, "Let them eat cake." Ted Kennedy said, "Tell her to shut up and party down, or I'll give her a ride home."

Then he said, in speaking of his personal faults and shortcomings, "I realize that I alone am responsible for them, and I am the one who must confront them." That makes everything much better.

These are just two examples of the complete disregard our elected officials have for what society considers acceptable or unacceptable behavior. Other examples include failure to pay bills at the Congressional Cafeteria, and hundreds of bounced checks, which, if I recall correctly, are criminal offenses which should result in jail time.

Our Congressmen think we, the voting public, are stupid and ignorant, and they believe we have a pitifully short memory. Therefore, while they are in office, they can behave in whatever reprehensible manner suits them, and we are not smart enough to know the difference or care. For the voters, a simple apology is enough.

You want to know something? The number of years these people spend in elected positions would tend to support their beliefs.

But here's something else for you to think about. I spoke of the politicians' opinion of us, the voting public. But statistics would indicate that all but a handful of the students on this campus cannot be included in that group. You don't vote.

I read a survey that said only two percent of the eligible voters age 18-25 even bother to vote. Therefore, when politicians start planning their campaigns, they don't even bother targeting the "youth" vote, because the youth aren't going to bother to vote.

It was during the social turmoil of the sixties and seventies that the eighteen-year-olds got the vote. While the activists were trying to end the war, and get equal treatment for minorities, they were also trying to get the right to vote extended to the eighteen-year-olds, many of whom were coming home from Southeast Asia in wheelchairs and body bags.

They were successful, but it wasn't easy, and a lot of people endured pain and sacrifices to get the voting laws changed. The least you could do to show your recognition and appreciation for their efforts is to get out and vote in every election.

I think there's another thing we could do next November, too. I've been studying on this a lot, and the more I study it, the better sense it makes.

When you go to the polls, step in that booth and vote against every incumbent in every office all the way down the ballot.

It's time that we start treating our Capitol like the sewer that it has become and simply get rid of every stinking thing in it and start out fresh. Just give them one term, no matter who or what they are, then vote the bums out. If nothing else, consistently following such a policy would save us millions in Congressional retirement benefits.

Well, I think I got all that straight. Y'all tell me all about it if I got something wrong.

Republicans use racism, bad economics

Some fellows get credit for being conservative when they are only stupid.

-Kin Hubbard

Bush finally signed a civil rights bill and he's claiming victory because this one doesn't require quotas. Of course, the Democrats never asked for quotas, but it seemed to Bush to be a good hook for frustrated whites.

Bush has always found the race issue an effective one for him. He pulled a similar, yet far more heinous stunt during the 1988 presidential election, when he frightened the white electorate with Willie Horton.

The real reason Bush finally signed the bill is to soften the voices of dissent from women. This civil rights bill provided additional protection for women in the workplace, and he wasn't about deny that, after the way he allowed Anita Hill to be abused on Capital Hill.

But the Grand Old Party's racial politics are still being played out in Louisiana, where the Republican candidate for governor is within a white sheet's width of winning.

David Duke is a former Grand Dragon of the Ku Klux Klan and founder of the National Points to ponder...

Jason Lewis

Association for the Advancement of White People. He may lose this election, but he'll remain a state senator.

The Republican Party says he's not one of them, and President Bush has condemned his racially divisive tactics, but he sounded remarkably like a Republican when he wholeheartedly supported Bush's refusal to sign a "quota" bill.

That Duke would get such wide-spread support is evidence of the frustration felt by many middle-class Americans during increasingly tough economic times. They're looking for someone to blame, and Duke points to blacks, immigrants and anyone else who doesn't have much political power.

But the racist tone set by twelve years of Republican presidencies pervades every aspect of American life.

Recently, at the University of Alabama, a fraternity and a sorority had a pledge swap party, at which the theme was "Who Rides the Bus?"

Some pledges painted their faces black, and mocked blacks with all the disgusting stereotypes you can imagine.

Another tragic result of a decade of Republican presidents is the financial shape this nation is in.

The United States is the largest debtor nation in the world. The deficit built up since 1980 is greater than the previous 200 years combined, and today's budget deficit is nearly three times what it was in 1988, when Bush was elected.

Perhaps you believe that's because Bush refuses to raise taxes, like he promised in his presidential campaign. The fact is, he has agreed to several tax increases since his inauguration.

The nation's economic growth during the Bush administration is the slowest since the presidency of Herbert Hoover (another Republican), in the early 1930's.

If you like Republicans because you believe Americans are better off than they were 12 years ago, you're partly right. Very rich Americans are much better off.

Between 1980 and 1990, the average income of the top one percent of the population increased by 87 percent. The average income of the bottom 50 percent decreased by as much as 10 percent.

Like they say, the rich got richer and the poor got poorer.

But with all those rich guys, the government should be raking in the taxes, right?

Wrong. In the same time period, the top half of the population paid about eight percent less in taxes, while the bottom half paid about 12 percent more.

Jimmy Carter lost his bid for re-election in 1980 primarily because of economic reasons. But the overall economy expanded more during the '70's than in the '80's.

It's been said that economic concerns override all other issues when election time comes. If that's true, Democrats should win big in the next couple of years.

Betty Friedan speaks out on the new "feminine mystique"

By Sandy Hill

Knight-Ridder Newspapers

Twenty-five years ago the National Organization for Women was founded. Charlotte (N.C.) Observer deputy features editor Sandy Hill talked recently with Betty Friedan, who is author of "The Feminine Mystique" and "The Second Stage," founding president of NOW and one of the founders of the National Women's Political Caucus. Friedan, 70, is widely regarded as the mother of the modern women's movement. Here are some of her observations on the women's movement today.

Q. You have been quoted as saying you saw "alarming signs of a new feminist mystique" in which women are being encouraged to return to old roles.

A. Absolutely, and if we ever have any doubt, the Thomas hearings certainly gave alarming evidence of it. You can see it in the media; you can see it in the movies.

Take "Fatal Attraction" where the career woman is a monster ... a menace to men, to children, to family.

The shock reaction to "Thelma and Louise" just showed how widespread the "new feminine mystique" was. (To me) the shock was that we have come so far from that image of an autonomous, independent woman.

The hit movies that have anything to do with women recently have been the hooker ... Take "Pretty Woman" - her whole mission in life is to get a sugar daddy to buy her pretty clothes.

And when women are shown on television practicing their professions they are shown in the kitchen. I mean how can you be an architect if you spend 24 hours a day in the kitchen, like in the Cosby show?

Q. What effect do you think the Clarence Thomas hearings are going to have on women?

A. I'll tell you what effect it has had. And don't let anybody kid you to the contrary. I have NEVER seen women as angry as they are today.

I won't say every woman, because there are some women that have been coopted and corrupted by the culture of greed. And not every woman identifies herself with the women's movement for equality.

But (polls show that) the great majority of women do, whether they call themselves feminists or not.

Q. What do American men and women need to do next?

A. I think we are in the middle of working out the patterns, really good, new patterns in relationships, women and men. (We are moving away from) relationships that were based on polarization of sex roles, based on dominance and inequality.

And now as we move toward equality, there is a basis for real intimacy and real sharing and ... a human sexual liberation. ... And there is the sharing of parenting by women and men.

So there is a renaissance of the family if you will, not in a reactionary sense but in a new diversity of family, a new flexibility of roles in the family.

Q. What about the political level?

A. There is a whole unfinished agenda on the political level just to be able to live the equality that we have been fighting for.

We MUST have parental leave. We MUST have more flexible work structures. Work is still geared to not only the technology of the past but to the men of the past that had wives to take care of the details of life.

If we continue with ... the very poor getting poorer and the very, very rich getting much richer and the middle class being more and more hard pressed ... we could be in for a real bad scene.

But if we can use this moment of (economic) crisis to break through the crumbling walls here as they did in Berlin and in Eastern Europe and reassert a primacy of human priorities in politics, ... then I think the future looks good for women and for men.

Smithereens try something different

By Gary Graff

Knight-Ridder Newspapers

Songwriting is his career, but Pat DiNizio is not a career songwriter. In other words, he doesn't punch a clock, and you can't separate the composer from the person.

The leader of the band the Smithereens maintains his muse in every step he takes - literally. He came up with "Blood and Roses," the Smithereens' first big radio song, while he was walking home one night. "There was a certain stride to my walk, a certain tempo, and I got the bass line in my head that starts off the song," he explains.

So writing is a way of life for the goateed singer-guitarist, and the making of the Smithereens' fourth and latest album, "Blow Up," provided a wealth of new adventures in his craft. For instance, "Too Much Passion," the group's Motownish new single, was discovered by accident, unearthed while DiNizio was going through one of the 200 or so idea tapes he had.

"Usually you might go through a 90-minute tape and come up with one 10-second bit that's worthwhile," DiNizio, 36, explains. "This time I came upon a completely finished song that I had completely forgotten I had written at some point. What a revelation - and a lifesaver."

A couple of the album's new songs were also inspired by DiNizio's move from New York to Chicago a couple of years ago. "I felt a heavy R&B and blues influence there," he explains. It can be felt in "Indigo Blues," which he wrote after seeing a show at the club Blues Chicago. The rhythm was again drawn from his gait while walking home.

The song "Evening Dress," meanwhile, came about after DiNizio heard "Have You Seen Her," a hit by the Chicago vocal group the Chi-Lites, over a supermarket's public address system. "Now where else but Chicago would you hear the Chi-Lites at supermarket Muzak?" DiNizio asks.

And then there were the collaborations - a brand new avenue for DiNizio, who usually writes in solitary. For "Get a Hold of My Heart" he worked with Diane Warren, who has written for Michael Bolton and Heart. On "If You Want the Sun to Shine," he teamed with Julian Lennon, whose father, the late John Lennon, was one of DiNizio's primary influences.

"It was the first time I'd ever sat down with anyone else to write a song," he says. "It was really an exercise, having to confront your insecurities about what you're doing with songwriting and getting beyond the negative aspects of thinking 'Is this any good?' or 'What is this person going to say?'"

Aptly describing that tune as a cross between the Beatles' "I Am the Walrus" and Led Zeppelin's "Kashmir," DiNizio says he was out to get Lennon "to be true to his roots. I think his real forte is pop, but it's something he denies because it was his dad's forte, too, and people knock him for it."

DiNizio says he's happy with their song, though he has some trouble relating to it. "The lyrics don't really say anything to me. They were just something I created for a particular melody. ... I probably relate more to 'Get a Hold of My Heart.'"

These experiences are significant because they've steered DiNizio and the Smithereens - guitarist Jim Babjak, bassist Mike Mesaros and drummer Dennis Diken - into a broader array of styles. Until "Blow Up," the Smithereens were defined by power-chord crunchers steeped in such '60s influences as the Beatles, the Who and the Searchers. The formula finally paid off in 1990, when "A Girl Like You" became the group's first full-fledged hit.

But on "Blow Up," there are string sections, horns, keyboards, ambitious background vocal arrangements, featuring such guests as the Cowsills and Carlene Carter, and only a couple of songs that hold to the estab-

Stress-relieving humor used by doctors

By Brad Kava

Knight-Ridder Newspapers

SANTA CLARA, Calif. - On his death bed, writer Oscar Wilde said, "Either that wallpaper has to go or I do."

If Wilde could benefit from a joke in that situation, so could a lot of patients and physicians, said Stu Silverstein, an Oakland, Calif., doctor who is also a stand-up comedian.

Silverstein led a lunch-hour seminar last week for doctors at Kaiser Permanente Medical Center in Santa Clara to teach them to use humor in their practice.

"You can't joke about patients unless it comes from them," he warned, and also cautioned against sexist and racist jokes.

Mostly, he did what a comedian-doctor should do: He kept them in stitches.

A 32-year-old New York native, he said he got into comedy after a schoolteacher who failed him said, "What are you, some kind of comedian? Why don't you go on stage?"

He told them about the origin of blue corn chips.

A New Jersey guy had a whole warehouse of moldy corn chips no one would eat, so the guy decided to ship them to California and tell them as health food. (Maybe you had to be there for that one.)

Silverstein also has a comedy writing service called "Standup Medicine." In 1990, he won the San Francisco round of the Merit Comedy Competition.

His talk was attended by the media, as well as doctors, mainly because it was so unusual to see a room full of doctors laughing, he said.

He suggested that doctors use themselves as the brunt of jokes, and that they should learn a new joke each week and write it down to use in their practice. He also said that laughing has physiological benefits, both for stressed physicians and their patients.

He suggested that doctors especially should use jokes to cut the boredom from educational speeches.

He told them to avoid cracking jokes before a patient is treated. Save the jokes for the recovery room, after the patient understands that the doctor is competent.

And he said medical people should not feel guilty if they find themselves laughing in the coffee room after a trying surgery, because they need to relieve stress. Medical gallows humor is common because doctors have to deal with their

Lady Eagles stuff Teddy Bears

By Eddie Womack
Staff Writer

Tuesday night the Lady Eagle volleyball team sent a message to their opponents in the upcoming TAAC tournament—"we're ready to play ball."

Taking advantage of a injured Mercer team and splendid play by Alexis "kill" Dankulic GSU blanked Mercer 3 games to nil at Hanner Fieldhouse.

Head Coach J.B. Claiborne felt good about the win.

"We needed a win," said Coach Claiborne. "Mercer beat us earlier in the year. We stayed up and played good fundamental volleyball."

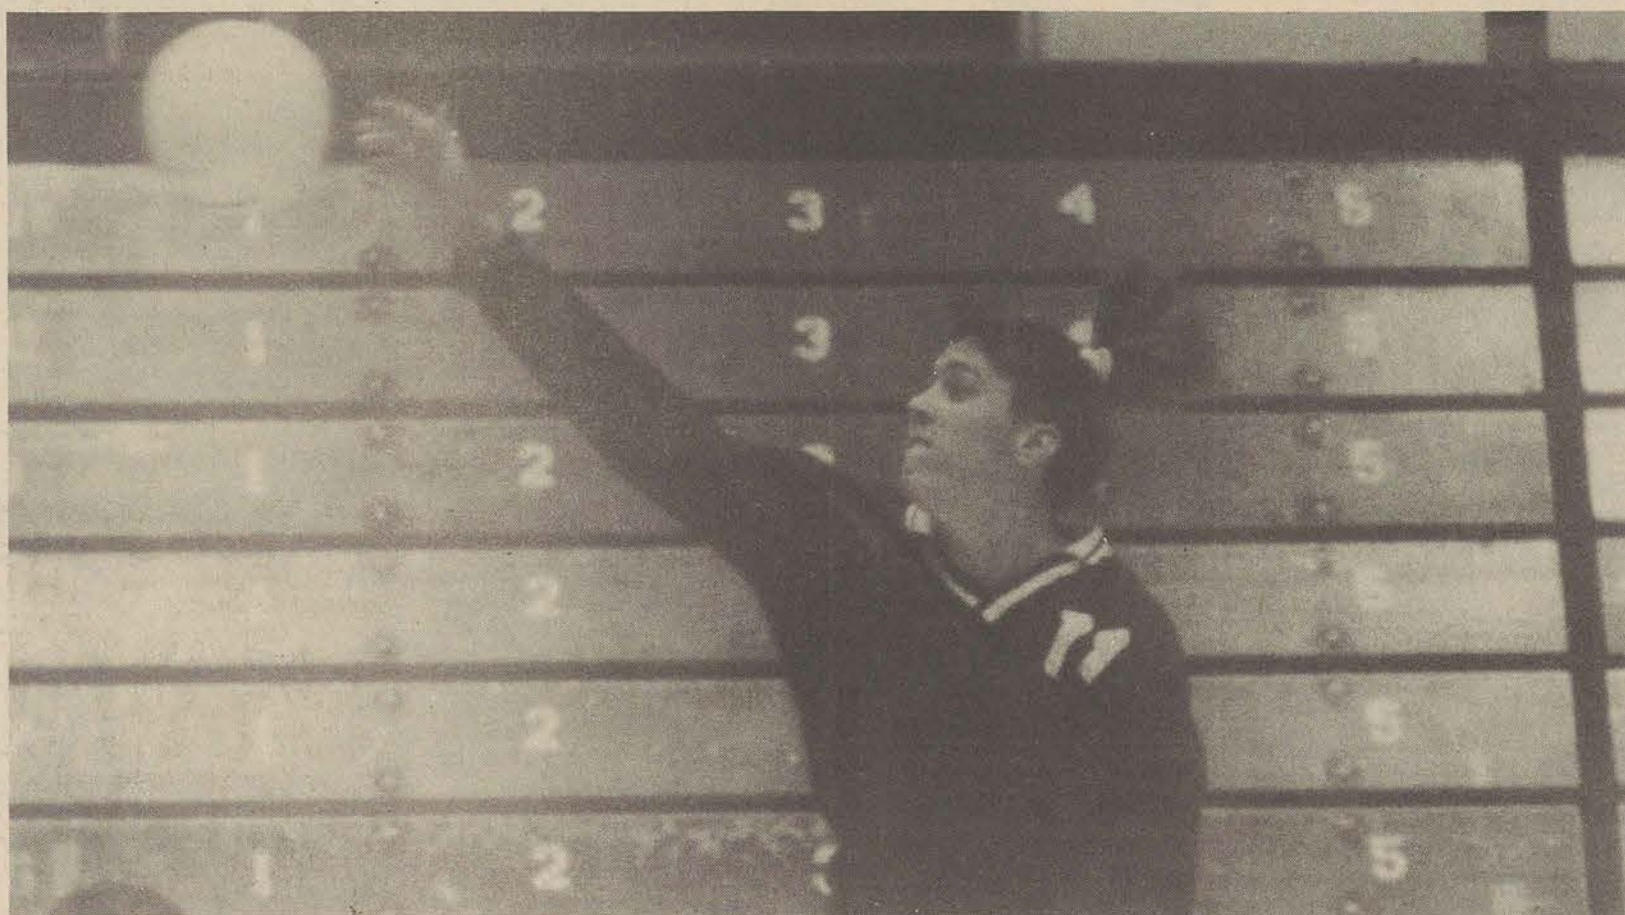

Due to splendid play GSU took to a quick 6-1 lead. After the third straight ace by Julie Ciezowski, Mercer called a time out stalling the inevitable at 7-1.

So much for the time out theory. Before you could yell "set" the Lady Eagles stretched out to a comfortable 14-1 lead.

After a two point run by Mercer GSU closed the first game 15-5 on a kill by Nicci Borisek.

Riding a wave of momentum the Lady Eagles pulled away to an impressive 7-1 lead in game two.

Managing only their sixth point of the match Mercer pulled to within four at 9-5.

Then the preview to the Alexis show began. After three straight kills courtesy of Ms. Borisek, GSU again had a commanding lead of 12-5.

Again Mercer tried the time out theory...Need I say more?

The Lady Eagles started where they left off putting away Mercer 15-6 in front of an energetic home crowd.

If Dankulic did not feel good about her Tuesday night at the office than game three would erase any doubts in the freshman's mind.

After the Bears took their only lead of the match 1-0, three more kills by Borisek helped the Lady Eagles lead 6-3.

The straight game win seemed in jeopardy as the Bears kept it close at the halfway point 8-7.

But the growl was taken out of the Bears game when GSU received three kills again courtesy of Ms. Borisek to set the Lady Eagles up for the win.

Borisek felt good about the pressure of being the workhorse of the team as a freshman.

Coach Claiborne feels confident going into post season play.

The Lady Eagles will begin tournament play Friday in Deland, Florida on November 8.

Runners sprint to strong finish

By Chris Smith

Staff Writer

This past Monday the GSU cross-country teams competed in the Trans America Athletic Conference (TAAC) championships in Hammond, Louisiana.

The womens' team finished in third place overall, while the mens' team placed fourth.

Alicia Hewes was the top finisher for the women with a seventh place finish while earning all-conference honors for the fourth consecutive year. Hewes finished the 5K course in a time of 19:06.

Other top finishers were Beth Thomas (19:34), Gail McLeroy (20:23), Angie Stewart (20:24), Gina Elliano (20:50), Jessica Lloyd (20:51) and Melanie Jarvis (21:45).

The mens' squad was led by Mike King who finished the five mile course in a time of 25:06. King finished third overall and earned all-conference honors. This is second time in as many years he has earned all-conference honors.

Other top finishers for the men were Tommy Trent (26:38), Cedric Crumbley (27:15), Chris Smith (27:28), Gene Sapino (27:30), Don Daniels (28:06) and Jay Knight (28:28).

Almost every individual ran his or her best time of the year this past week at conference.

Both teams ended their last year in the TAAC conference with a strong showing. Next year GSU will be competing in the strong Southern Conference.

The Eagles were led all year by Alicia Hewes and Mike King. Hewes is the lone senior on either squad while King is a sophomore.

The team as a group had a strong showing throughout the year as both teams finished in the top five at the Winthrop Invitational in Rock Hill, S.C.

This past year in the West Georgia Invitational the teams finished in the top three while both King and Hewes won top individual honors.

At the Georgia Intercollegiate Championships both teams once again finished in the top five. Both King and Hewes ran their way to all-state honors.

The Furman Invitational was the most competitive competitive meet of the year. At this meet almost everyone improved their time from the previous meets.

The Georgia Southern Invitational turned out to be a duel meet between Georgia State and GSU. Georgia State edged out the Eagles for top honors in both the mens' and womens' races.

After the conference meet Coach Vargo said, "Both teams ran well this past week. Alicia Hewes is the only senior on the womens' team with no seniors on the mens' team. The Southern Conference will present different challenges for us."

Eagles drop three

By Elise Lane

Guest writer

The GSU soccer team completed its disappointing season this past week with three straight losses to Mercer (3-1), Florida International (4-0) and Florida Atlantic (4-3) in overtime.

In GSU's final home game of the season (last Wednesday), Mercer scored early as Vince Dattilo slammed a loose ball past Eagle goalkeeper Kevin Chambers.

The Bears controlled play for the next twenty minutes. Sammy Bonfim punctuated the siege with a score.

Southern retaliated with a goal when Ted Davidson and Scott Sutton dishd off an indirect kick to Andy Edwards who buried the ball in the back of the net.

Mercer dominated the second half. Bonfim finished off the scoring on an 18-yard shot.

The loss dashed GSU's hopes of participating in the Trans America Athletic Conference's Eastern Division Tournament.

GSU took on Florida International on Friday in Miami. The Eagles and the Golden Panthers played evenly for the first 30 minutes, but Richard Peer scored back-to-back goals in less than four minutes to give FIU a 2-0 advantage at half-time.

FIU added two more goals in the second half.

Eagle reserve goalkeeper Tim Boorman made several sliding saves to prevent any further scoring damage.

In the season finale at Florida Atlantic the score was deadlocked at 0-0 at the end of regulation.

The only real scoring threat came when an FAU striker lofted a ball over the head of Chris Chambers. Midfielder Chris Chambers cleared the ball away with his head.

During overtime the Eagles and the Owls threw defense out the window. In a span of 19 minutes seven goals were scored. FAU scored twice in the extra period to claim the victory.

GSU said "goodbye" to the 1991 season with the 4-3 loss.

The Eagles finish the season with a record of 4-11-4 overall (1-5-2 in the TAAC Eastern Division).

Strong Points

By Michael Strong

The song by Madness went "Our house in the middle of our street, our house it was our castle and our keep." — until now.

We had only lost twice before in "our house" until the Penguins slid into Paulson Stadium this past Saturday and slid out with a victory and possibly our playoff chances.

"We don't need to think about the playoffs right now," said Tim Stowers, after the loss. "We need to concentrate on Troy State and let the playoffs take care of themselves."

Sounds like sage advice to me, coach. By the way Tim — is it all right if I call you Tim? Thanks. What was I saying? Oh yeah, nice cliché Tim. We'll talk about those later.

Well, I'm here to help, Tim. We will make the playoffs if you just listen to my advice, OK? Good.

You have two weeks to prepare for Troy State, a Division II team that wants to be Division I-AA. This is good because you need to do to them what Sherman did to Georgia.

Are you with me so far? Great.

Ok, now the final game of the season is against Nicholls State. Do you remember what you did to Troy State? Well, you need to do it again to Nicholls State.

Now, you need teams like Appalachian State and Youngstown State to lose. Appalachian State has already done this. The Penguins play James Madison this week.

JMU needs to beat Youngstown because we beat JMU, but lost to Youngstown. This is a dilemma for the committee who chooses the playoff teams because they have to factor the "intangibles" into any playoff choices.

The "intangibles" are: We are the two-time defending national champs; two other teams made it into the playoffs with 7-4 records last year; also we are hosting the national championship this year and this is the only place where the game has ever made a profit. This is because we were in it, so we deserve another shot.

Besides who wants to see two teams with stupid mascots in the playoffs? "The Dukes" sounds like a team that just parades around trying to institute new taxes on its subjects, er, student body.

On the other hand, we have the Penguins. What kind of wimp thought this name up? I would have loved to have been in on this staff meeting: "Well, guys we've got a school, now we need a nickname. Any suggestions? Remember we want something that's tough and inspires fear."

"Hey, remember went we went to the zoo? Those penguins were tough. Hey, if I was in a fight, I'd want a penguin on my side."

"Hey !!! I like that, all right, we'll be the Penguins."

What a joke. But back to what is important.

These are the basic ingredients in the recipe for "Getting the Eagles Back Into the Playoffs."

Other things that will make the recipe a bit better will have to come from you, Tim.

Practice those clichés. You've got them down pretty well, but remember that clichés are your friends. They will keep you and the Eagles out the the NCAA's doghouse.

A new slogan for the team. Something catchy. Hmmm ... I've got it: "If you guys don't win the last two games, spring practice is going to be hell."

Naw, we don't want to scare the team, we just want them to kill two teams. Besides it's too long to put on a t-shirt.

How about this: "The drive for five starts with the last two." It's a bit long also, but it's honest.

Also, praying to the football upset gods would be in order at this point.

If you just follow my advice, I think we may just have a shot at the big dance.

All right now lets practice those clichés Tim: "We're just gonna let the chips fall where they may... We're just concentrating on Troy State... We'll let the playoffs take care of themselves..."

GSU looks for tourney win

By Michael Strong

Sports Editor

The Lady Eagle volleyball team will ride into their first ever TAAC tournament this weekend in Deland, Fla. with a school record 18 wins and a positive outlook.

"If we play like we can, we'll have a shot," said Coach J.B.

Claiborne.

GSU is seeded second in the tournament and will face the winner of the Florida International-Southeast Louisiana match-up.

Should they win that match they will face the winner of the Stetson-Florida A&M match.

The biggest problem for the Lady Eagles is unfamiliarity of their opponents. They have played matches against just two of the ten teams in the conference. They lost to the College of Charleston in three games and split the season series with Mercer 1-1.

"GSU's chances are good [in the tournament] as anybody's," said Mercer coach, Bradley Hufs.

"As long as they keep it together. They've improved a lot in every position."

The factor of not knowing anything about the other teams concerns Claiborne.

"There are some good teams in there," he said. "FIU (the defending champion) has a poor record, but they have been playing against Florida, Florida State and some Division I powerhouses. I don't know anything about Southeast Louisiana, so it's going to be tough."

Samford drew the top seed, the Lady Eagles are second and FAMU is seeded third—but it was close. All three teams are nationally ranked within eight places of one another. They are ranked 150, 153 and 158 respectively.

"We're all real close, so who knows what could happen," said Claiborne.

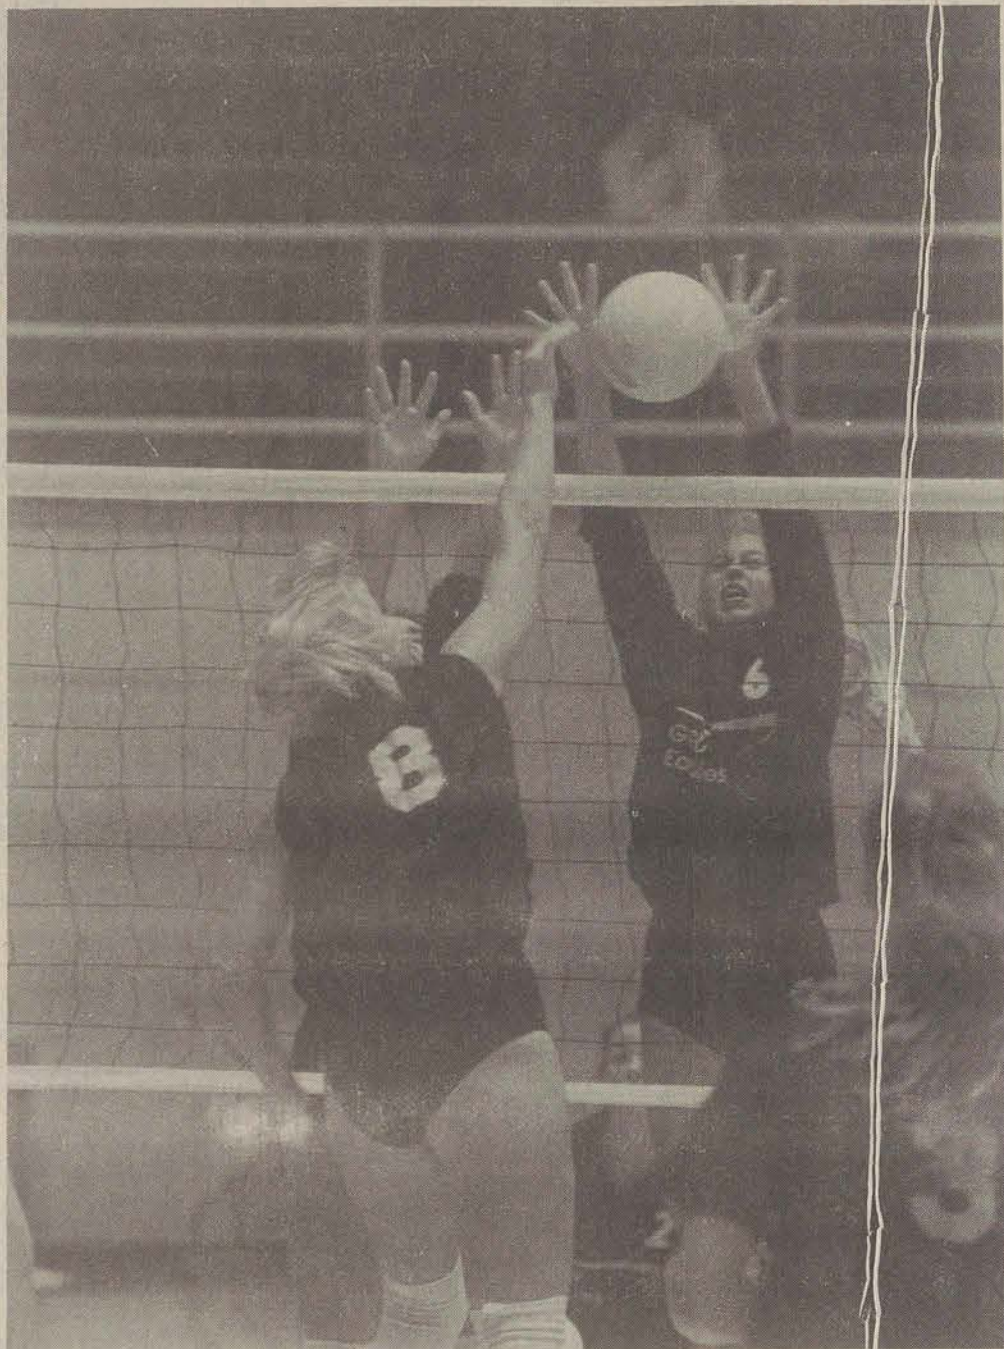

The one weakness in the team is a change in the lineup. Freshman hitter Jennifer Petelle was suspended for disciplinary reasons and replaced by freshman Jill Galasso. Petelle is off suspension, but will have to fight to get her starting job back.

"Jill has played well," said Claiborne. "She has a good attitude and Jennifer will have to work to get her spot back."

Regardless of what happens in the tournament, the Lady Eagles will finish with a winning record. They are currently 18-14, which is an improvement on last season's 13-18 mark.

They have at least one incentive to win the tournament, according to Claiborne.

"I told them we'd go to Disney World if we won."

majors, but like most firms, PRestige accepts applications before giving anyone a position.

"Sometimes clients and I tend to forget that PRestige members are students and they are not getting paid for their work. They volunteer for assignments and do work for the firm in addition to everything else they are required to do on campus," said Rowden.

"Students are putting their classroom lessons into practice. They are developing professionalism and rapport with clients and for the most part, our students at Southern are very skilled at getting along with others," Rowden said.

Although PRestige members work in a very relaxed atmosphere, they are challenged not only by their clients, but by one another as well. They must meet deadlines within the firm as well as those of the clients.

"Being involved with an organization like PRestige takes some getting used to, but the challenges and benefits are well worth the effort," said Ingrid Lawing, treasurer.

own mortality every day, he said.

He told the doctors they should have a Kaiser miniature golf course to go with their miniature salaries.

The first joke he told them to write down was about the plumber who went to a doctor's house and charged $150 an hour to fix his sink.

"I'm a doctor, I've been through years of training and residency and I only charge $40 an hour," the doctor said.

"That's what I used to charge when I was a doctor," the plumber replied.

The physicians said they got the serious message behind Silverstein's jokes.

"He was talking about concepts a lot of people use," said Dr. Tom Dailey, a pulmonary critical care physician who attended the talk. "I think he had reasonable examples of humor that would be helpful. It's important to relieve a lot of stress for all involved, patients and physicians."

lished Smithereens sound. Change is always chancy, but DiNizio takes the artistic high ground when he asks "What choice is there?"

"The fear of an artist or anyone lucky enough to have a career in music is that, by changing too much, you're going to lose the audience you worked 10 years to achieve," he says.

"But you also have to make yourself happy artistically ... so sometimes there has to be a conscious effort to move forward."
