Ted Turner launching cartoon cable TV network

ATLANTA (AP) — Media mogul Ted Turner is launching his fifth major cable TV network with a channel that will show cartoons around the clock.

The Cartoon Network, a basic cable television channel, will debut Oct. 1, Turner said Tuesday in making the announcement.

The network will feature cartoons from Turner Broadcasting System Inc.'s vast stock of animated features, which was bolstered last year by the $320 million purchase of the Hanna-Barbera library.

Prosecutor's car stolen during talk on car theft

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — When acting Essex County Prosecutor James Mulvihill talks about car theft, he speaks from experience.

While talking at a Newark church Wednesday night on the evils of stealing cars, his unmarked county car was stolen from its parking place around the corner.

An 11-year-old Newark boy snatched the 1988 Oldsmobile and led police on a chase through North Bergen, Union City and Jersey City, where it ended about two hours later when he rammed it into two other cars and tried to flee, police said.

The youth and a 14-year-old companion were arrested; two other people in the car escaped by jumping down the nearby 50-foot cliffs overlooking Hoboken, said Hudson County Police Lt. Michael Critelli.

The two boys were being held in the Hudson County Youth House in Secaucus. They face charges in Family Court in Newark, where they live.

Patrol car stolen by drunken driving suspect

JONESBORO, Ga. (AP) — It took six hours, but Clayton County police recovered a patrol car stolen by a drunken driving suspect early Friday.

Police pulled over Benjamin Saye, 30, in Clayton County at 2 a.m. for suspected drunken driving. He was handcuffed and placed in the back seat of the patrol car, said Lt. Doug Jewett.

Somehow, Saye crawled into the front seat of the patrol car and sped off.

Saye was arrested at 6 a.m. when he showed up at a labor pool office in Atlanta, about 20 miles from Clayton County, still wearing one handcuff on his wrist, Jewett said.

But police didn't find the police cruiser until about 8:15 a.m., when police in College Park, between Clayton County and Atlanta, saw it parked near an abandoned school, said Jack Bencale, College Park assistant police chief.

Ogeechee Poetry Journal accepting submissions

The Ogeechee Poetry Journal, GSU's journal of poetry, is accepting submissions from students, faculty, staff and area residents.

According to Professor of English John Humma, each submission should be no more than five poems of 40 lines each. They should not be submitted for publication elsewhere.

Submissions should be sent to L.B. 8023 by March 13.

GSU cracks down on drinkers

Students must 'tattle' on alcohol providers

STATESBORO, Ga. (AP) — Georgia Southern University is helping authorities crack down on illegal drinking by forcing underage boozing students to tell the sheriff which establishments serve minors.

Ed Bayens, Georgia Southern's assistant director of special programs, said the school started its new policy this quarter. It requires students under 21 charged on campus with drinking to write a letter to the sheriff telling him where they were served alcohol and when the violation occurred.

"I'm getting flooded with these letters from students who are in trouble at Georgia Southern," Bulloch County Sheriff Ray Akins told county commissioners Tuesday.

Akins and the commissioners have warned nightclub owners to start following the letter of the law when it comes to verifying that customers are old enough to drink alcohol.

"These establishments are breaking the law, either by serving alcohol or allowing them to drink it without checking their age, and we want them to stop," Bayens said.

Bayens said the students'

Two GSU students were arrested around 2 a.m. Sunday after the car they were driving was stopped for driving the wrong way on Sweetheart Circle.

Unrecay D. Ringfeld of 3755 Forrest Park Road, Atlanta, was charged with DUI and driving without a license.

Marcus M. Wimberly of 100 Arlethia Drive, Macon, was charged with minor in possession/consumption.

Ringfeld had a bleeding wound on his right elbow at the time of the arrest. The car he was driving was towed from the circle.

Just prior to the arrest, two GSU students reported that they were victims of an aggravated assault that occurred behind the Blue Building Sunday between 1 a.m. and 2:30 a.m., according to a report by the GSU Division of Public Safety.

The case is under investigation by the Criminal Investigations Division of the University Police Department.

Students witnessed a crowd gather in the parking lot by the Blue Building shortly after a party hosted in the Williams Center by the Omega Psi Phi fraternity ended at 1 a.m. It is not known whether the incidents were related to happenings at the party.

Students can register to vote at class registration

By Todd Homan
Staff Writer

The Student Government Association is sponsoring the upcoming voter registration drive scheduled to run today through Friday.

The drive, co-sponsored by the Young Republicans and several Greek organizations, will be held in the Williams Center from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Students who register will be eligible to participate in include all local, state and national elections with the exception of the presidential primary scheduled for March. Students will also be eligible to vote in any future liquor referendums.

Students already registered in another county can transfer their eligibility to Bulloch County during the drive.

"A big misconception is that if you've got it [registration] in one place, you've got to stick with it there," according to SGA Executive Vice-President David Miles.

Miles also said that if a student is registered to vote in another county while they're home, transferring their eligibility during school months is simple.

For the students' convenience, tables will be set up adjacent to Spring Quarter registration tables. All students are encouraged to fill out the forms before or after class registration.

Two SGA representatives will be on hand throughout the day to answer any questions pertaining to registration.

The whole process is expected to take less than 10 minutes and students need only bring with them a picture I.D. and a desire to get involved.

"You can make a difference...if one out of ten people voted, that's 1,300 people," said Miles.

Approximately 1,000-1,300 students are expected to take part in the drive.

Gamma Beta Phi will also have a booth set up in the registration area to elect the "Professor of the year".

Placement office offers student assistance

By Ken Ward
Staff Writer

One of the most useful offices on campus, the Placement Office, is often ignored by GSU students until it is too late to take advantage of the services it provides, according to Dave Graham, Director of Placement.

By serving as a quasi-advisor and catalyst, the Placement Office, which is located in the Rosenwald Building, seeks to assist all GSU students with their career planning and professional job search. Unfortunately, the process does not guarantee a student employment.

Primarily, the office operates as a place where students and alumni can plan, review and then implement their career goals.

"Many students feel that the Placement Office can't help them, and that couldn't be further from the truth," Graham said. "We can help students identify employers, write resumes, interview effectively and make them more aware of useful job search strategies; therefore, as they get closer to graduation, they can initiate their own job search campaign."

The Placement Office provides a variety of services to all GSU students. At one time, the purpose of the office was simply job placement; however, in recent months the office has undergone a structural change and has added job planning as another function.

This change shifted a part of the office's focus from job search to preparing all students with solid skills, thus enabling them to present themselves effectively to prospective employers.

The Placement Office also offers a co-op program, which is promoted as a way to go to college and gain "real work" experience. In March, the office will have a full-time career development professional to assist all students with selecting a major.

"Unlike in the past, acquiring a college education does not come with a job guarantee," Graham said. "Today, students need to be aware of the reality of the job

Grant funds Woodland development at garden

The GSU Botanical Garden has received a $6,670 matching grant from the Georgia Forestry Commission as part of the America the Beautiful Urban and Community Forestry Program.

The federal program funds community-based urban forestry projects throughout the U.S.

The Garden's grant is being used to develop a long-term site management plan for the forested areas at the Garden and to install interpretive signs on the existing forest trails. An orientation sign describing the forest will also be developed as part of the project, scheduled for completion this summer.

The site management plan will be based on an assessment and mapping of existing trees and shrubs. Computer-based site maps will serve as a foundation for developing detailed site plans for each section of the forest.

Interpretive signs along the forest trails will help visitors learn about the elements of forest ecosystems in the context of a changing urban forest.

The grant supports several student assistants who are working with the Garden's staff on the project. Purchase of computer software associated with forest mapping is also included in the grant.

Sorority sponsors Big Man of Campus

The sixth annual Big Man on Campus (BMOC) Contest, sponsored by the local collegiate chapter of Zeta Tau Alpha (ZTA), will be held Feb. 25 at 7:30 p.m. in the Union Ballroom.

BMOC is ZTA's annual fundraiser for the Association for Retarded Citizens and High Hope Associations, its national and local philanthropies.

This year the contest will feature 14 GSU men sponsored by fraternity and sorority organizations at GSU. Each of the guys will model casual and formal wear, as well as answer impromptu questions if chosen as a finalist.

Admission for the event is $3.

UGA student newspaper wins a partial victory in lawsuit

ATLANTA (AP) — The University of Georgia student newspaper, the Red and Black, on Thursday won a partial victory in its lawsuit to gain access to the school's student University Organization Court.

The newspaper had filed suit in July 1991 against the Board of Regents of the state university system, school president Charles Knapp and William Bracewell, director of the Office of Judicial Programs at the school.

The Red and Black wanted to be allowed to attend meetings and hearings of the student court and to have access to its records under Georgia's Open Meetings and Open Records acts.

Atlanta Superior Court Judge Frank Hull ruled that the newspaper be allowed to see any records of meetings and hearings, but she denied the request that reporters be permitted to attend the meetings and hearings.

Hull ruled that the meetings of the student organization are not covered by the Open Meetings Act.

Keegan Federal, attorney for the Red and Black, said he will appeal the judge's ruling.

"We're delighted we got half a loaf," Federal said. "We will be filing an appeal on the other half."

The former editor of the Red and Black, Jennifer Squillante, said, "The issue is too important to leave at this."

"Although it's great to have access to the records, you can't tell anything about the process by which you've arrived at these things on paper. It's the job of the press to monitor these processes."

Bracewell had testified that he was prevented from releasing the student court records by the federal Family and Education Rights and Privacy Act, known as the Buckley Amendment.

The student newspaper argued that the act does not absolutely prohibit release of student information, but provides for withholding of federal money if such information is released indiscriminately.

Hull agreed, saying in her decision, "The underlying purpose of the Buckley Amendment was not to grant individual students a right to privacy ... but to stem the growing policy of many institutions to carelessly release educational information."

She also said the act covers only "education records," which does not include information regarding hazing charges against social fraternities. And she said release of records under a court order would not trigger loss of federal money in any case.

The judge dismissed Knapp from the lawsuit, saying the records in issue are in the office supervised by Bracewell, but he allowed the lawsuit to remain against the Board of Regents, of which Bracewell is an employee.

The suit was filed after the newspaper was refused admittance into two hearings in May 1991 in which hazing charges against two fraternities were discussed.

Atlanta fraternity helps youth at risk

ATLANTA (AP) — An Atlanta chapter of a black fraternity is pairing successful men with black youth at risk of dropping out of school or getting into legal trouble.

"I've been in a lot of programs and been in a lot of schools," said Robert Smith, 17, who participates in the Alpha Phi Alpha mentor program. "It looks pretty different than any program I've been in. They seem legit."

The program is modeled after the fraternity's national education endeavor, "Go to High School, Go to College." The fraternity operates the program at four Fulton County high schools and one Atlanta middle school.

Ron Jenkins, a state health program consultant, is helping 18-year-old Andre Weaver sort out problems at home, at school and with the law.

Jenkins said Weaver has done an about-face from the angry young man he was nearly four years ago.

"He's got an idea of where he's going and how to get there," Jenkins said. "The benefit I've gotten out of it is being there and making a difference."

Weaver has spent little time with his own father and says he has benefited from spending time with Jenkins.

"It's been like a real positive thing in my life. I might have been worse off if it wasn't for this," said Weaver, a Frank McClarin High student. "He's been more like a best friend-father figure."

The fraternity in October bought a former school building from the Fulton County school system to use as a community center.

In exchange for a low purchase price, the fraternity agreed to serve as mentors each year to 25 black males from the county's Banneker, McClarin, Tri-Cities and Westlake high schools. About 95 Fulton County students are involved in the program.

"This is a very unusual contract," said Fulton County School Superintendent James H. Fox Jr. "The most effective approach to mentoring involves sticking with kids over an extended period of time, so that's what we're doing."

The fraternity members want to serve as mentors to 300 students over four years.

Scholarships will be awarded to students in the program who plan to attend college.

Court rules underage drinking fault of furnisher

OLYMPIA (AP) — The state Supreme Court ruled in a 5-4 decision Thursday that a person who furnishes liquor to a minor in a social setting can be held responsible for harm that befalls the minor as the result of intoxication.

In a strongly worded dissent, Justice Jim Dolliver called the majority opinion by Justice Charles Johnson a usurpation of legislative powers. Dolliver predicted that past decisions granting immunity to social hosts who have provided liquor to adults will be scrapped.

The decision reversed the 1988 dismissal by King County Superior Court Judge Charles Burdell of a wrongful death suit filed by Judith Hansen, the mother of Keith Hansen, against Robert Friend and Robert M. Petty.

Hansen drowned while on a fishing trip at Lake Jameson in Eastern Washington. Court records show he was intoxicated at the time and that his access to beer at the site had not been restricted by Petty and Friend.

In his opinion, Johnson relied on state law that makes it a crime to sell, give, or otherwise supply liquor to people under 21 years of age.

"The Legislature has thus established that both commercial hosts and social hosts commit a criminal act if they furnish liquor to a minor," Johnson wrote.

Johnson conceded that in an earlier case the high court ruled that social hosts who served liquor to an adult guest could not be sued for injuries resulting from the guest's intoxication.

In that case, the court noted that the Legislature had repealed in 1955 the dram-shop act that imposed liability on social hosts.

Because it is illegal to give, sell or supply liquor to a minor, Johnson wrote, "Social hosts owe a duty to exercise ordinary care not to furnish liquor to a minor."

Dolliver was not persuaded by that reasoning.

"The majority, apparently transfixed by the facts before it and harboring a belief that 'youth must be served' has determined it can and, indeed, should take on a more creative role in usurping powers of the Legislature," he wrote. "This is an odd way to maintain continuity in the law and surely does little to engender respect."

Dolliver added: "It seems more than likely that in the next case involving a social host the court will declare the doctrine of social host immunity has ceased to exist in this state and hold there is a duty by any social host toward those to whom the host has furnished alcoholic beverages."

Joining Johnson in the majority opinion were justices Jim Andersen, Bob Brachtenbach, Charles Smith and Bob Utter. Signing Dolliver's dissent were justices Rich Guy, Barbara Durham and Chief Justice Fred Dore.

Buckley (partially) busted

This past Thursday, the University of Georgia's student newspaper, the Red and Black, won a partial victory over the closed hearings of their school's Organizational Court.

The Red and Black had sued for access to the hearings and records of the decisions made by the courts. UGA claimed refuge under the federal Family and Education Rights and Privacy Act, otherwise known as the Buckley Amendment.

UGA claimed that the records were "educational records," and therefore couldn't be released and that the student court wasn't covered under the Georgia Open Meeting's Act.

Judge Frank Hull ruled that the paper is allowed access to any records of meetings and hearings, but denied that the courts were covered under the state's Open Meeting's Law.

It is important that Judge Hull stated, "The underlying purpose of the Buckley Amendment was not to grant individual students a right to privacy ... but to stem the growing policy of many institutions to carelessly release educational material."

Now that the ruling has clearly shown that individual privacy is not the purpose of the Buckley Amendment, it is time that universities and colleges drop the veil of secrecy that shrouds their student courts: one university in particular being our own GSU.

As institutions of higher learning, we should stand up for open student courts, rather than cowering at the demands of the Education Department and using the Buckley Amendment as a way to keep student journalists away from "university business."

Since when has it been laudable to hold court in secret?

We applaud the Red and Black's efforts and wish them luck in their appeal to gain admission to the Organizational Court.

Students rude at concert

Last Tuesday night, the internationally acclaimed Falla Guitar Trio performed for a standing room only audience in the Foy Auditorium.

Unfortunately for those enjoying the trio's dynamic performance, a vocal group of students in attendance found it necessary to converse freely, often laughing at several points in the show.

Based on the blatant immaturity and lack of respect displayed, it seems evident these students were required to attend the performance for academic credit, a system used by professors in several departments on campus.

If the instructors of GSU are to continue making attendance of fine arts events mandatory, we suggest class time be set aside to teach proper decorum at these events.

As sad as it may be that certain college students - much like elementary school children - need to be instructed in how to behave in public, actions like those of the noisy crowd at Tuesday's concert need to be addressed.

Students who take advantage of on-campus programs for their own enjoyment should not be made to suffer by the actions of those who have no personal interest in the performance.

President Bush has a long road to hoe over the next nine months or so.

Hard-core conservatives aren't happy with him. People like Pat Buchanan and William F. Buckley feel like he has abandoned the "Reagan legacy."

Despite his pro-life views and his stacking of the Supreme Court, abortion remains legal. He raised taxes. He hasn't slammed the borders shut on Japanese products. China retained its most favored nation trading status despite the Tianenmen Square massacre.

Obviously, left-wingers don't like him either. He hasn't done anything of note about health care. He's been stacking the Supreme Court so that Roe v. Wade will probably be overturned. His promises to be an "education" and an "environmental" president didn't really amount to anything.

Moderates (i.e. the middle class) are ready to throw him out because of the economy and the rise in middle class unemployment. The President's upper class favoritism isn't going to help him any.

FROM THE EDITOR'S DESK...

Gary A. Witte

23 percent of the Republican voters in the New Hampshire primary said if Bush was the Republican nominee in November, they would not vote for him.

I can't say I blame them. By registration, I am a Democrat (my terrible secret revealed). However, this would not stop me from voting for a Republican if I thought he or she was the better candidate.

George Bush is not that candidate. There are any number of reasons I can give you why I'm not voting for him.

For instance, China retained its most favored nation status, he's been stacking the Supreme Court, the economy stinks, etc.

But I think one of the main reasons is his contrariness.

If someone (fill in name of voter here) said, "Look Mr. President, there's a tiger over there!" George would look and smile that sort of lips-stuck-to-teeth kind of smile and say "No, that's not a tiger. It's just a large housecat with stripes."

Then, as the tiger was busily devouring the voter, George would turn to the other voters and say, "By gosh, that IS a tiger! But it's obviously the Democrats who let it loose."

As it was devouring the second voter, George would say, "Everyone remain calm, I've given Congress a March deadline to deal with this tiger, so you know who is at fault if it continues eating you, the American people."

"Isn't that right Dan?"

Let's face it, he didn't admit there was even a recession until a few months ago, when someone finally whispered in his ear and told him the voters were getting really hacked off about the economy.

It was just like when he suddenly started caring about at-home issues, when it became painfully obvious everyone thought he was paying too much attention to foreign issues and not enough to American issues.

Very convenient turns of opinion on part of our President. He changes only when he realizes that he may lose some votes.

The second big reason I'm not voting for him is what he sees as his biggest plus.

Desert Storm.

Every time I think of our little excursion into the sands of Iraq, I think of the unfinished business we left behind.

The Kurds.

Oh, I give the President full marks for self-control. He never said we would depose Hussein by force, ignoring for the moment that it's what he was hoping for, and that everyone knew it.

He said that liberating Kuwait was our goal, and that was what we did.

But after calling on the Iraqi people to revolt against their leader, he turned around and left enough of Hussein's army so the rebel Kurds were soundly defeated, leading to a mass exodus of refugees who ended up starving in the mountains of Iraq.

It took a public outcry and

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Adoption is the answer to the abortion question

Dear Editor,

I, as many others have done, would like to take this opportunity to talk about abortion. I am a Christian and believe very strongly in pro-life. It seems that this whole issue revolves around one thing - women that can't stand the thought of men telling them what they can or can't do.

I really think that abortion needs a lot more serious thought than that. After all, this is a human life that's being discussed. Not an embryo, not a fetus, but a human life. If people would quit beating around the bush and oversimplifying the situation, they would realize that.

Many women say they are mature enough to make their own decisions about their body. Then why don't they use some of that maturity to keep from getting pregnant in the first place? After all, is a few moments of pleasure worth the cost of a human life? That's what it essentially comes down to. It seems really selfish to take a baby's life just because of the mistakes of his/her parents.

I do believe adoption is the key. In the article in the Feb. 18 edition ["Pro-life and Christian"], a writer said we'd have too many babies. WRONG!! I know of couples who must wait eight to ten years or longer to get a child. And yet people say there would be too many children?

Also, I'd like to tell that same writer that God can work miracles and that's being realistic. He can do anything whether you want to be realistic or not.

I also don't believe there is any such thing as an "unwanted" child. Every child is wanted and loved by God first. But also that child is wanted by someone else; if not the parents than a different person. It seems very cold and unfeeling to say unwanted. What if someone else labeled you with that title?

As proven in a previous editorial by Tom Scarborough ["Bible clearly states that abortion is murder," Feb. 11], the Bible clearly states God's high regard of human life.

There are hundreds of scriptures to support pro-life, but the most effective one to me is when Jesus states in Matthew 19:14, "...Let the little children come unto me, and do not hinder them, for the kingdom of Heaven belongs to such as these."

You see, Jesus's disciples wanted to keep the children away from Him, but Jesus specifically told them to allow the children to come and sit with Him. He especially wanted to take time to talk with them and show them love.

That's the bottom line - Love. Do you love yourself more or do you love the precious gift God's given you? After all, a child is a precious gift from God no matter what circumstances he/she was conceived in.

In closing, I'd like to say to all the abortion advocates that they can stand up and voice their opinion because they've already been born. What if their parents felt like they do? Also, I commend all Christians who have written in and taken a stand. It's very comforting to know others share in my beliefs and convictions. Thanks for the opportunity.

P.S. - Would the writer in the Feb. 18 issue ["Pro-life and Christian"] please write me and tell me where the Bible supports homosexuality? Thanks!

Campus organization 'Revisions' restarted

Group is dedicated to improving education and communication of women

By Carol McWilliams
Staff Writer

Revisions is a new organization on campus that is committed to the education and communication of women.

Although this definition may scare some individuals, "This group is not about male bashing," states faculty adviser Linda Page. "It is about simply improving communications."

The original group was founded in 1990 under the direction of Catherine Hungerford, director of Upward Bound.

The new group is organized by students for their own individual interests.

During the meeting the group discussed subjects which might be possible topics to explore. Date Rape or dating practices, the National Organization for Women (NOW), harassment and abortion were some of the subjects that were discussed for the possibility of speakers and workshops.

Along with these subjects several others were explored that are not the norm. For example, the glass ceiling effect in business was discussed. This is when more and more women enter a certain profession and the amount of salary and benefits decreases due to the lack of male participation. This is common in the nursing profession.

Other subjects such as social roles or gender roles, sex information and tips on balancing a family and a career are of an interest to the group.

The group is also interested in the creation of a newsletter to let others know about the activities that are planned.

Revisions is made of different types of people with the common goal of discussing gender issues or any other issue that is of a concern to the student body, faculty, and staff. Although gender issues are important to the group, both males and females are given an equal voice.

The groups next meeting will be tonight, Tuesday February 25, in the Student Union, room 247 at 6 p.m. Another related program will be held in Johnson Hall at 7 p.m., March 5. The topics of relationships and abuse will be discussed.

Men are ten times more likely to snore than women

"Snoring is often caused by an obstruction in or narrowing of the airway of the sleeper," says Men's Health magazine.

The problem is usually the tongue, which falls backward during sleep and rests against the soft palate and other flexible tissues at the back of the throat.

As one breathes, the inhaled air causes the tongue and these tissues to vibrate against each other.

Males are 10 times more likely to be snorers than are women. Also, "about 30% of all snorers have a disease called sleep apnea," according to Philip Smith, M.D., director of John Hopkin's Sleep Disorders Center.

Sleep apnea occurs as a result of the tongue dropping back so far that it gets sucked into the airway "like a moist cork," says Chicago snoring specialist Charles F. Samelson, M.D.

The flexible throat muscles collapse around the tongue, the snorer's airway is completely obstructed (ceasing all sound) and he actually stops breathing for 10, 20, 30 seconds or more.

These alarming pauses of breathing occur at regular intervals, frequently following extended sequences of harsh snoring.

HEALTH AND FITNESS

Donald Jordan

When breathing stops, the snorer's survival instincts usually cause him to wake up enough to pull his tongue out of his airway and continue breathing. However, as he falls into another deep sleep the process usually repeats itself.

Physicians consider this disorder very serious; as many as 3, 000 people die in their sleep because of it annually. Anyone who is a sleep apneic should consult a physician as soon as possible.

For a simple snoring problem, specialists recommend easy solutions. If the problem is more serious, the snorer can seek alternative techniques, such as surgery. Here are some anti-snoring treatments.

Elevate your head. This technique helps keep the airway open. Place a few wooden blocks under the bedposts at the head of the bed. Don't use additional pillows because they will only narrow your airway and make snoring worse.

Stop sleeping on your back. Sleep on your side or stomach to help prevent your tongue from dropping farther back into your mouth.

Lose some weight. When people get fat, they get fat all over - even the throat tissue can swell, contributing to airway obstruction.

Avoid pills. Tranquilizers, sleeping pills and antihistamines are central-nervous-system depressants that can predispose the muscles in a snorer's throat to become too relaxed and flexible. This increases the chance of vibration in the airway. Also, the relaxed muscles can cause the tongue to fall back in the throat's airway more easily.

Cut back on alcohol. "NOT!" as many of you are responding to this gesture. However, alcohol is also a depressant.

Clear your nose. Nasal congestion causes you to breathe through your mouth. When you open your mouth, your jaw position changes and may block your nose so you are more likely to snore.

Two anti-depressant drugs, imipramine and protriptyline, taken in small doses, are fairly effective in treating snoring and mild cases of sleep apnea, says Daniel Wagner, M.D., a clinical neurologist at Cornell University's Sleep Wake Disorders Center. He also says that the drugs partially block chemical receptors in the muscles and may prevent imbalances between chest and throat muscles that can be lead to snoring.

Surgery is usually considered if none of the latter methods are effective. One procedure, uvulopalatopharyngoplasty (UPPP), is similar to a big tonsillectomy. The surgeon removes excess tissues from the throat, including the tonsils, uvula and edge of the soft palate, that could be obstructing the airway.

There are other types or surgery that are sometimes recommended for snoring and apnea patients. More advice on different procedures to stop snoring can be obtained from appropriate specialists.

Nature photography need not be expensive

The Associated Press

Generally speaking, professional nature photographers have a wide range of expensive accessories that help them get great photographs.

Does this mean that you cannot get outstanding nature pictures without spending a bundle of cash? Not at all. In fact, with the addition of a few inexpensive accessories, you can get images that rival those of top pros.

Tripod - With your camera securely atop a tripod, you will be able to shoot at slower shutter speeds without worrying about camera shake. This is especially useful when shooting in the early morning or late afternoon hours. In addition, slower shutter speeds let you shoot at smaller f-stops for increased depth-of-field. This is important when shooting with telephoto lenses, which don't offer great depth-of-field.

Tele-converters - These relatively inexpensive devices extend the range of your telephoto lens, giving you in effect two lenses in one. The major camera manufacturers - Minolta, Nikon, Canon, Pentax and Olympus - offer 1x, 1.4x and 2x tele-converters. A 1x tele-converter on a 100mm lens provides an effective focal length of 200mm, a 1.4x TC turns a 300mm lens into a 420mm lens, and a 2x TC gives you a 600mm effective focal length when using a 300mm lens.

The drawback to using tele-converters is that they don't produce razor-sharp pictures, as do true telephoto lenses. However, unless you are making very large enlargements, you will probably not notice the difference.

1:1 Extension Tube - When a 1:1 extension tube is mounted between the lens and the camera body, you can get a life-size reproduction of a very small object, such as the petals on a flower, without having to invest in a costly macro lens.

In most cases, you will not compromise quality when shooting with an extension tube as compared to shooting with a macro lens. This is because there is no glass in the tube. (Tele-converters use several glass elements to increase the lens focal length.) You will be limited, however, by reproduction ratio, which you can vary when shooting with a macro lens.

A tribute to Johnson's character

Considering this is my last opportunity to acknowledge a subject concerning an African American in this the "Black History Month," I would like to offer my print contribution for the month.

I don't mean to be ungrateful, (if I'm supposed to be grateful) but why is it that one out of 12 months in a year is designated as a month to acknowledge the accomplishments of African Americans in this a free and equal society.

Personally, I don't feel that one month should be slated to emphasized the achievements of African Americans because the achievements are continuous throughout the year; so why not give credit WHEN and WHERE they are due.

Let's push for Equal Opportunity Publicity throughout every year in the good as well as the bad situations.

On that note, let me venture back into the sports world, where the focus of this column is supposed to be.

As you have probably noticed, I have not deemed the Mike Tyson issue worthy of my column and let me express my reasons neatly and precisely and move on to a worthy topic.

I don't feel that the issue is worthy because I can not shuffle through all the mess and find an "innocent" party on either side of the court room.

Finished with that for good.

Now to pay tribute to the African American who I feel has earned tribute.

Earvin "Magic" Johnson is not a perfect person, but he has never to my knowledge placed himself in that category.

Johnson showed his imperfection when he made a monumental mistake that may, in the long run, cost him his life, but in this mistake he showed something that so many people lack: Character.

True, it took a real man (black or white) to come before a world full of critics to say he made a mistake and have become a member of the most undesired club in the world.

(Let me clarify "undesired." I mean that no one wants to go through what AIDS takes a person through.)

Johnson showed a great deal of character when he made his announcement on nation-wide television, but considering his current status in the world picture he was almost forced to do such.

Most people feel that he showed enormous character when he became a spokesperson for prevention of the virus and safe sex.

But personally, Magic earned his position with me, when he admitted the mistake of declaring that safe sex was the way, then correcting his mistake by declaring that no sex should have been his way.

I know that just as Magic has taken criticism for this stand, so shall I for advocating it, but that's what separates those who perform from those who conform.

So, I personally would like to pay tribute to Earvin "Magic" Johnson as an outstanding person, (not just an African American) for he is a man of much character and strength.

Johnson has given many good times to the world and now I, as a member of this world, pay him back with all that I can give: Respect,

Eagles 'get by' Mercer, 81-74

By Rod Swinson
Staff Writer

The Eagles played a sub-par game, but managed to down the Mercer Bears 81-74 Saturday night in Hanner Fieldhouse.

A crowd of 3,124 was restless most of the night because the Eagles seemed to never get on track to put away a Mercer team that refused to give up.

"It was a somewhat disappointing outing for us tonight," said point guard Charlton Young.

The Eagles, who had a week off before meeting the Bears, did not get on the board until the 17:46 mark when Wendell Charles bounced a jumper off the window to tie the game 2-2.

Both teams struggled from the field for the first five minutes of the game, managing just 16 points between them.

A layup by Young following a steal put the Eagles ahead 8-6 with 15:45 left in the half and Calvin Sinkfield hit a leaning jumper from the key to give the Eagles a 10-6 lead going into the first media timeout with 14:56 on the clock.

The Eagles increased their lead to 10 coming out of the timeout as Tommy Williams. Chris Birden and Dexter Abrams all hit layups to make the score 16-6 with 12:16 to go in the first stanza.

Following a jumper by Mercer's Yauun Pounds cutting the lead to six, the Eagle's Monty Noblitt drained a three pointer from the right wing to push the lead back up to nine at 19-10 going into the second media timeout with 9:23 left in the half.

But, the Bears battled back.

Bear forward Shaun Thompson grabbed an offensive rebound and put it back in to cut the lead to one at 19-18 with 7:20 remaining before the break.

The Eagles went on a short run and increased their lead to six on a jumper by Tony Windless and a three pointer by Young which made the score 24-18.

A layup by Young followed by an offensive rebound and put-back by Windless moved the Eagles lead up to eight at 28-20 with 5:28 on the clock.

The Eagles managed to get their lead back out to 10 on a tip in by Windless at 32-22, but the Bears battled their way back.

The Eagles scored only three points in the last 3:24 of the half.

A layup by Bear Kenny Brown with .3 on the clock cut the Eagles lead to four at 35-31 as they went into the locker room.

The Eagles shot 3-11 from the free throw line (for a dismal 27%) in the first half, much to the dismay of the home crowd.

"Coach Kerns was concerned about our performance in the half, especially from the line," said Young.

The Bears came out in the second half and immediately deleted the lead when Brown hit two free throws to tie the game 35-35.

But Abrams got hot inside and hit a couple of tough jumpers inside to move the Eagles back in front by six with the score 43-37 going into another media timeout with 14:43 remaining in the game.

Abrams came out of the timeout and hit a layup to give the Eagles a 45-37 lead.

When Mercer's Thompson got a hoop and some harm, then picked up a loose ball and converted it into two more points, the Eagles found their lead dwindled to four at 45-41 with 13:45 left in the contest.

A rainbow three pointer from Windless gave the Eagles a six-point lead going into a timeout by Mercer with 11:25 left on the clock.

When Young picked up his fourth foul, freshman Adonis Hill came in and immediately picked up the slack by draining a three pointer from the right baseline to give the Eagles a 54-48 lead with 10:41 remaining in the game.

The Bears cut the Eagles lead to four on a driving layup by Mike Smith to make the score 59-55, but Mercer could not get any closer.

Following a steal and layup by Young, Sinkfield converted on two free throws and hit a jumper in the lane to give the Eagles an eight-point lead at 65-57 with 5:52 left in the game.

An Abrams jumper made the score 67-57 and a couple of minutes later Sinkfield hit a free throw to give the Eagles a 13-point lead at 73-60 the largest margin of the night.

Following a timeout, the Eagles came out and ran some time off the clock and the game became a free throw shooting contest.

The Eagles hit enough free throws to hold off a last minute three-point onslaught by the Bears to finish the game plus seven in the scoring column.

GSU was led by Sinkfield who scored 17, while Young scored 15, Abrams had 14 and Windless added 12.

The Eagles improved their record to 20-5 overall (11-1 in the conference) while the Bears drop to 8-17 overall (4-8 in the conference.)

The Eagles conclude their regular season this week with two home conference games against Stetson Thursday at 7:30 p.m. and Florida International Saturday at 2 p.m.

Diamond Eagles notch first win

By John Munford
Staff Writer

The GSU Eagle baseball team got their first win of the season Friday, beating the University of New Orleans, 7-2.

They weren't as lucky against Tulane, losing 14-8 and also losing to LSU, ranked 13th in the nation, by a score of 20-7.

In the win over New Orleans, the Eagles' bats seemed to wake up. Right fielder Todd Greene went 3 for 5 with three RBIs and center fielder Mark Dean reached base five times.

But, the real hero of the game was Tim Roth. Roth (1-

1) pitched eight superb innings, allowing only two runs while striking out six and walking only one. Ron Buffington pitched the final inning to pick up the save, his first of the season.

In Saturday's 11-5 loss to Tulane, a lack of offense wasn't the problem. Second baseman Doug Eder continued to hit the ball well, going 3 for 3 with a double and a run scored.

However, the young, errant Eagle pitching continued to be a sore spot as Tulane scored four of their 11 runs without the benefit of a base hit.

On Sunday, LSU beat the Eagles with the strong offense that got them ranked 13th in the nation.

The offense continued to produce, however, led by senior first baseman Mike Miller, who went 2 for 5, hitting a monstrous 440 ft home run in the sixth inning and Chris Petersen, who hit a bases-clearing triple that scored three runs, also in the sixth.

The Eagles will hit the road for two games Tuesday and Wednesday at South Carolina.

The next home series begins Thursday against South Carolina at 7 p.m.

An 'up and down' week for Lady Eagles

By Eric Weisenmiller
Sports Editor

Bethune-Cookman 80,
GSU 73

In a non-conference game on Thursday night the Lady Eagles (10-15) were beaten by the Bethune-Cookman Lady Wildcats (11-11) by a final tally of 80-73.

GSU played an aggressive game defensively, but shot only 35 percent from the field to suffer their fifth consecutive defeat.

"We never could capitalize on the things that we created and therefore we didn't end up scoring," said coach Drema Greer.

After leading by one point 18-17 at the midway point in the opening half, the Lady Wildcats went on an 11-3 run to increase their lead to 29-20 at the 6:27 mark.

With four minutes remaining in the half two Janice Johnson free throws brought GSU to within one at 29-28. B-C took advantage of three Kim Farrington free throws in the final 1:42 to cling to a one-point 34-33 lead at halftime.

GSU stole the lead in the second half on a jumper by Gwenda Smith and a Gwen Thomas lay up resulting from a B-C turnover.

After enjoying a four-point lead two minutes into the half, the Lady Wildcats went on an 18-2 tear. Donna Davis scored 11 of her 25 second half points in the five minute run.

At the 13:40 mark the Lady Eagles found themselves down 54-42.

GSU could only get as close as five points in the remainder of the contest.

Bethune-Cookman evened their overall record at 11-11 with the win.

Donna Davis led all scorers in the game with 27 points—three of which were treys. Center Amanda Jones also had 19 for the Lady Wildcats.

Leading the scoring for GSU were Janice Johnson and Jill Dunn with 12 points apiece. Gwen Thomas and Stephanie Christmas both contributed 10, while Toy Williams had nine.

Subaricca Smith, who started her first game of the season, along with Gwenda Smith posted eight a piece.

At halftime the score stood at 37-29. The Lady Eagles never trailed in the ballgame and opened-up a lead which was extended to 16 points at several points.

Stetson's Kristen Follis paced the Lady Hatters with 22 points. She rallied her team to within six with by nailing a three pointer with 1:58 remaining in the game.

Gwen Thomas' two free throws with 23.1 seconds left put a lock on the game for GSU at 80-69.

Janice Johnson paced the Lady Eagles with 21 points and eight rebounds. Thomas had 14 and Jill Dunn added nine.

Stephanie Christmas and Subaricca Smith each contributed eight.

The Lady Eagles round out their regular season Saturday at home versus Florida International at 5:15 p.m.

'It's crazy here,' says Steve Avery

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Steve Avery soon discovered a difference in the Atlanta Braves' training camp.

"It's crazy here," the lefty said after he arrived on Thursday.

This time the Braves aren't perennial losers but defending National League champions. About 150 fans showed up at the Braves' spring training complex to welcome the team's pitchers and catchers, who begin workouts today.

"Last year at this time we might have had Tom and Jerry, a couple of mice out here," catcher Greg Olson said. "This year, look at all these people and we haven't even started."

"The phone never stops ringing," said ticket manager Ham Higgins, who had to stop spring season ticket sales at 1,800. "A lot of games are close to sellouts."

"I know this is the most excited I've been for a spring training," said manager Bobby Cox, who typically shows little emotion. But he's got a lot to be excited about.

Unlike previous seasons, when some Braves managers struggled to fill every position with even one talented player, there is expected to be strong competition for roster spots.

"You want to have problems like that," Cox said. "That's when you know you're getting better."

The rest of the arrivals are excited, too.

"The offseason has gone just like that," Olson said. "But who cares? I think everybody is dying to get back to work."

"I'm one guy that really looks forward to the spring," said left-hander Tom Glavine, last season's 1991 Cy Young Award winner. "But now I think everybody coming in here will feel the same way."

"Everybody was really busy during the offseason, getting asked to do so many things," Glavine said. "It's nice to get focused back on baseball. I will have to say that the difference between today and last year at this time is really incredible."

It's more fun this time, said left-handed reliever Kent

Mercker.

"I don't think the team has much of a different attitude. We never got too up or down on ourselves last season," he said.

"Usually we fill up this place when the Dodgers or Mets come to town, but now other parks will sellout because the Braves are coming."

Even the little things are different. Gone is the seven-step walk between the lockers of Avery and outfielder Deion Sanders, who became close friends last season. Now their lockers are side by side, so, as Avery put it, "We'll never miss each other."

LEADERSHIP AND VISION

WOMEN'S AWARENESS WEEK
MARCH 2-6, 1992

GEORGIA SOUTHERN UNIVERSITY

Wednesday, March 4

Noon, University Union, Room 247, Brown Bag Lunch*
Crash the Diet - Don't Crash Diet

* Ms. Whitney Himes, Health Educator, Health Center - This program is designed to enhance your skills for safe, healthy, and permanent weight loss. Learn how to increase your self esteem and body image, and create nutritional habits that will last a lifetime. Your days of feeling like a failure are over. *Beverages will be provided.

4:30 PM, University Union, Room 247

Women in Sports

* Ms. Ann Marie Lawler, Associate Athletic Director, University of Florida - Ms. Lawler will address issues facing women athletes on college and university campuses.

7:00 & 9:30 PM, University Union Theater, Movie*

Girlfriends

* Claudia Weill's directing debut was one of the first fiction films to come easily and spontaneously out of the culture of women's liberation. Girlfriends deals with a woman in her twenties trying to find her way in the world. Sponsored by Union Productions *Regular admission will be charged.

Thursday, March 5

11:30 AM, University Union, Room 248, Brown Bag Lunch*

Career Satisfaction Decisions

* Ms. Colleen Moore, Office of Staff Development - Time management, stress management, and career planning decisions will be discussed as forces which influence career satisfaction and self-fulfillment. We regret that we will be unable to issue magic wands! However, we invite you to come prepared for a lively discussion aimed at answering the following questions: Can I exchange my stress for peace of mind? Can I get it done and still be human? Where do I want my career to be five years from now? *Beverages will be provided.

4:00 PM, University Union, Room 248

Date/Acquaintance Rape on the College Campus

* Ms. Audrey Campbell, Counselor, Counseling Center - "It" continues to happen...the pain goes on...legal actions continue to further victimize...which way now? The widely-acclaimed video presentation, Campus Rape will be shown; society's gender role expectations/conditioning will be discussed; guidelines for protection/prevention will be given. Awareness, sensitivity, support and responsibility are demanded of each of us, regardless of gender.

7:00 PM, Johnson Hall

The Beast Within

* Ms. Stephanie Ray, Counselor, Counseling Center - "The Beast Within" is a program that deals with relationship abuse. The program centers around a graduate student who is forced to look at his violent behavior patterns. Relationship abuse is a growing crime on college campuses. Statistics prove that, without intervention, three out of four violent relationships will end in death.

Friday, March 6

12:00 PM, University Union, Room 247, Brown Bag Lunch*
