NEWS BRIEFS

Court to decide on 'Suicide Solution'

ATLANTA (AP) — A lawyer for Ozzy Osbourne says if a 16-year-old killed himself as a result of listening to the British rock star's song "Suicide Solution," he was misinterpreting its message.

During a beer party at a friend's house in 1986, 16-year-old Michael Jeffery Waller of Fitzgerald wrote a suicide note to his family, then shot himself.

A few days later, his father found a tape of the album "Blizzard of Ozz," by Osbourne, in the youth's pickup.

The Waller family claims in a $9 million lawsuit that "Suicide Solution," performed on that album, caused Michael to take his life.

The 11th U.S. Court of Appeals heard oral arguments in the case on Monday.

Savannah wants 'human garbage' picked up

SAVANNAH, Ga. (AP) — The city manager and police chief urged Savannah residents to fight crime by reporting the "human garbage" in their neighborhoods.

"We have a responsibility as citizens to help identify the people who are making this city unattractive," City Manager Don Mendonsa said at a news conference Monday. "We, meaning all of us, can make a difference."

Police Chief David Gellatly said people who report crimes must also be willing to give sworn statements and testify in court.

The news conference followed the city's seventh homicide of the year Sunday, but Mendonsa said it was not prompted by any particular crime.

The city's violent crime rate has climbed steadily in the past two years, due largely to crack cocaine and socioeconomic problems, city officials say.

Savannah home of Girl Scouts founder getting facelift

SAVANNAH, Ga. (AP) — The pale pink home of the founder of the Girl Scouts is getting a facelift to correct a 1964 restoration.

"The colors will be much different and brighter," curator Stephen Bohlin-Davis said. "The color we have now has no historic basis. It's been pink since 1964. That's going to be a real shock."

Some tourists say interior colors are not tasteful and don't fit with anybody's concept of the 19th century, Bohlin-Davis said.

The Girls Scouts plan to spend up to $500,000 on the project at the Juliette Gordon Low House, a historic landmark toured by 62,000 people last year. Experts say the 1964 restoration was shoddy and historically inaccurate.

Victorian homes were believed to have been painted in muted tones. But paint analysis improvements developed during the last 20 years indicate the Victorian period was one filled with bright colors, with the trim often being painted in contrasting shades.

Bohlin-Davis said. "Our job is to re-create, not to edit. We might have chosen a more subtle color, but we couldn't do that and maintain our historical integrity."

Restorers aren't sure exactly what color the outside of Mrs. Low's home will turn out to be. Bohlin-Davis anticipates it will be several colors.

Glover calls for renewed activism

By Doug Gross
Assistant News Editor

Actor Danny Glover called for renewed activism on the part of college students as he spoke to a capacity audience in the Union Ballroom Monday night.

Glover, keynote speaker for GSU's Black Awareness Month observances, said his travels to the nation's college campuses have revealed an eagerness for change among black students.

"The answers of the past aren't acceptable to you," Glover said, "You're tired of this over-idealized, over-perpetuated vacuum you find yourself in."

"We need some extremists today ... some people who are going to come out and say 'I'm tired of the way things are existing right now ... I'm going to make my stand.'"

The actor, whose credits include The Color Purple and the Lethal Weapon series, spoke out against the lack of funds designated by the government to education and the homeless situation, citing in contrast the millions of dollars used to bail out the savings and loans.

Glover also mentioned Statesboro's Blitch Street Community Center, which recently received a Point of Light award from President Bush, as deserving of government aid.

"I'm sure the center would have been much more encouraged if they had received a piece of paper with seven digits on it," Glover said. "So many people have willingly given of their time freely ... but we can't count on that. That should supplement whatever ... allocations are given to the center."

During his speech, Glover read several works by Langston Hughes, one of America's most prominent black poets.

"He was a poet that made us smile at ourselves, made African-Americans dream, made us cry with just the poems he wrote," Glover said.

Glover, who devotes time yearly to touring and speaking to college and high school students, downplayed his role as an actor, seldom mentioning his career in his speech. This met with approval from members of the Black Awareness Month committee.

"We didn't pay him to come and talk about Mel Gibson," said Georgene Bess, head of GSU's NAACP chapter. "I was excited to have a man of Danny Glover's character come to GSU. I feel he addressed several vital issues facing students today."

The keynote ceremony was sponsored by Delta Sigma Theta sorority and Omega Psi Phi fraternity.

Phi Mu entry wins at 'Big Man on Campus'

By Jennifer Booth

Male contestants battled for honor Tuesday night in the University Union Ballroom as Zeta Tau Alpha presented the 6th annual Big Man On Campus.

Matt White, sponsored by Phi Mu sorority, competed with fourteen other participants to win the contest. First runner-up Rich Cellino, sponsored by Kappa Sigma, was accompanied by three other finalists: Kurt George, Kerry Martin and Jason Lovett.

B.M.O.C. is ZTA's annual fundraiser for their national philanthropy, the Association for Retarded Citizens.

Amy Owens, publicity coordinator for ZTA, said they raised over $1400 last year and they hoped to surpass that this year. Tickets sold for $3 at the door, and each contestant paid a $50 entry fee.

Each of the competitors modeled sportswear and formal wear, and the five finalists also answered questions.

The gentlemen dressed in a wide range of sportswear, including cowboy, surfer, and scuba attire.

Some of the questions finalists answered were: Where do you see yourself in ten years? and What do you look for in a girlfriend?

White said that in ten years he would like to own a bar in Destin, Florida to support his friends' drinking habits.

Bill Crider, Mr. B.M.O.C. for 1991, said his experience as Mr. B.M.O.C. was a lot of fun and he met many people.

The four judges were Ma Futch, Pam Bourland, Hal Fulmer and Randy Roderick.

County looking into local nightclubs

By Kevin Hudson
Managing Editor

At least two local nightclubs are being scrutinized by the Bulloch County Commission and Sheriff's Department.

At the February 18 meeting of the county commission, Sheriff Arnold Ray Akins reportedly told commissioners that he had been "flooded" with complaints about alcohol being furnished to minors. Thursdays and the Collegiate were mentioned in particular.

Under a new policy, underage students who are caught for possession or consumption of alcohol on campus must complete and sign a form letter to the sheriff stating where he or she was served alcoholic beverages.

Part of the letter reads as follows: "I have been asked to inform you that on [date] I was served alcoholic beverages at [place]. I am under the legal drinking age. Furthermore, I was not asked to provide proof of age while (purchasing/consuming) [circle one] alcoholic beverages."

The student must have the sheriff sign the letter that he receives.

The letter writing is a required part of the university's disciplinary procedures, and a copy of the letter is retained by GSU for future reference.

According to the reports, all the letters written so far indicate that alcohol was consumed, but not purchased by the offenders.

Ed Bayens, assistant director of special programs, said seven letters have been sent via judicial affairs. Two letters have been sent by decision of residence life.

In addressing the council, Akins said "I think we're going to have to buckle down on these folks who are allowing these folks in who are under the age of 21."

Akins also reportedly said Thursdays held an illegal gathering on Sunday, January 26.

sion by consumption (.13 BAC) and obstruction of an officer.

After officers were called to a fight at the complex, Bearse "refused to leave the premises and officers had to use force due to her resisting," according to the report.

Bearse was released on $1000 bond.

Also arrested at the scene were Kevin Brian Jackson, 19, of Chandler Square 75, charged with minor in possession by consumption (.09 BAC) and Simple Battery; and Jason Michael Ware, 19, charged with minor in possession by consumption (.11 BAC) and possession of an altered drivers license.

Jackson and Ware were released on $1000 bond each.

Jeremy Carl Baker of 30 Oxford Hall on Feb. 24 was also arrested in relation to the incident.

Baker was charged with aggravated battery and damage to property, and was released on $2000 bond.

"We've got some leads that we're trying to track down...but nothing yet," said Mitch Jones, GSU police captain. Squad cars patrolled the parking lots at Oxford until 2:30 in the morning Friday, according to Jones.

Many Oxford residents are blaming the incident on poor lighting and lack of security. "I think they should upgrade the security and put in lights...this is a problem unsolved," said Andy Cambruzzi, whose personal losses were estimated at $1,600.

Recently, all Oxford residents were ordered to move their vehicles to the rear parking lots by the Housing Administration to make way for construction in front of the building. Many residents claim the area is unlit.

Glover: Acting should be the 'universality of voices'

Actor believes that faith in God has given him incentive to make the right choices

By Carlton Dickerson
Staff Writer

On Monday Feb. 24, Danny Glover paid a visit to Statesboro. His agenda included talking to an Afro-American theater class, visiting a local youth center, attending a reception, and speaking in the Union ballroom.

Glover was born in San Francisco, but his mother is a Georgia native. Glover is often associated with this state. Glover also identified with Georgia, saying that although he was not born in this state he claims it as his own. He spent numerous summers on his grandparents' farm in Augusta, which played an important part in the enhancement of his maturity.

Students and guests were given the opportunity to hold a question and answer session with Glover. He later went to Foy where he was greeted by faculty and student reporters.

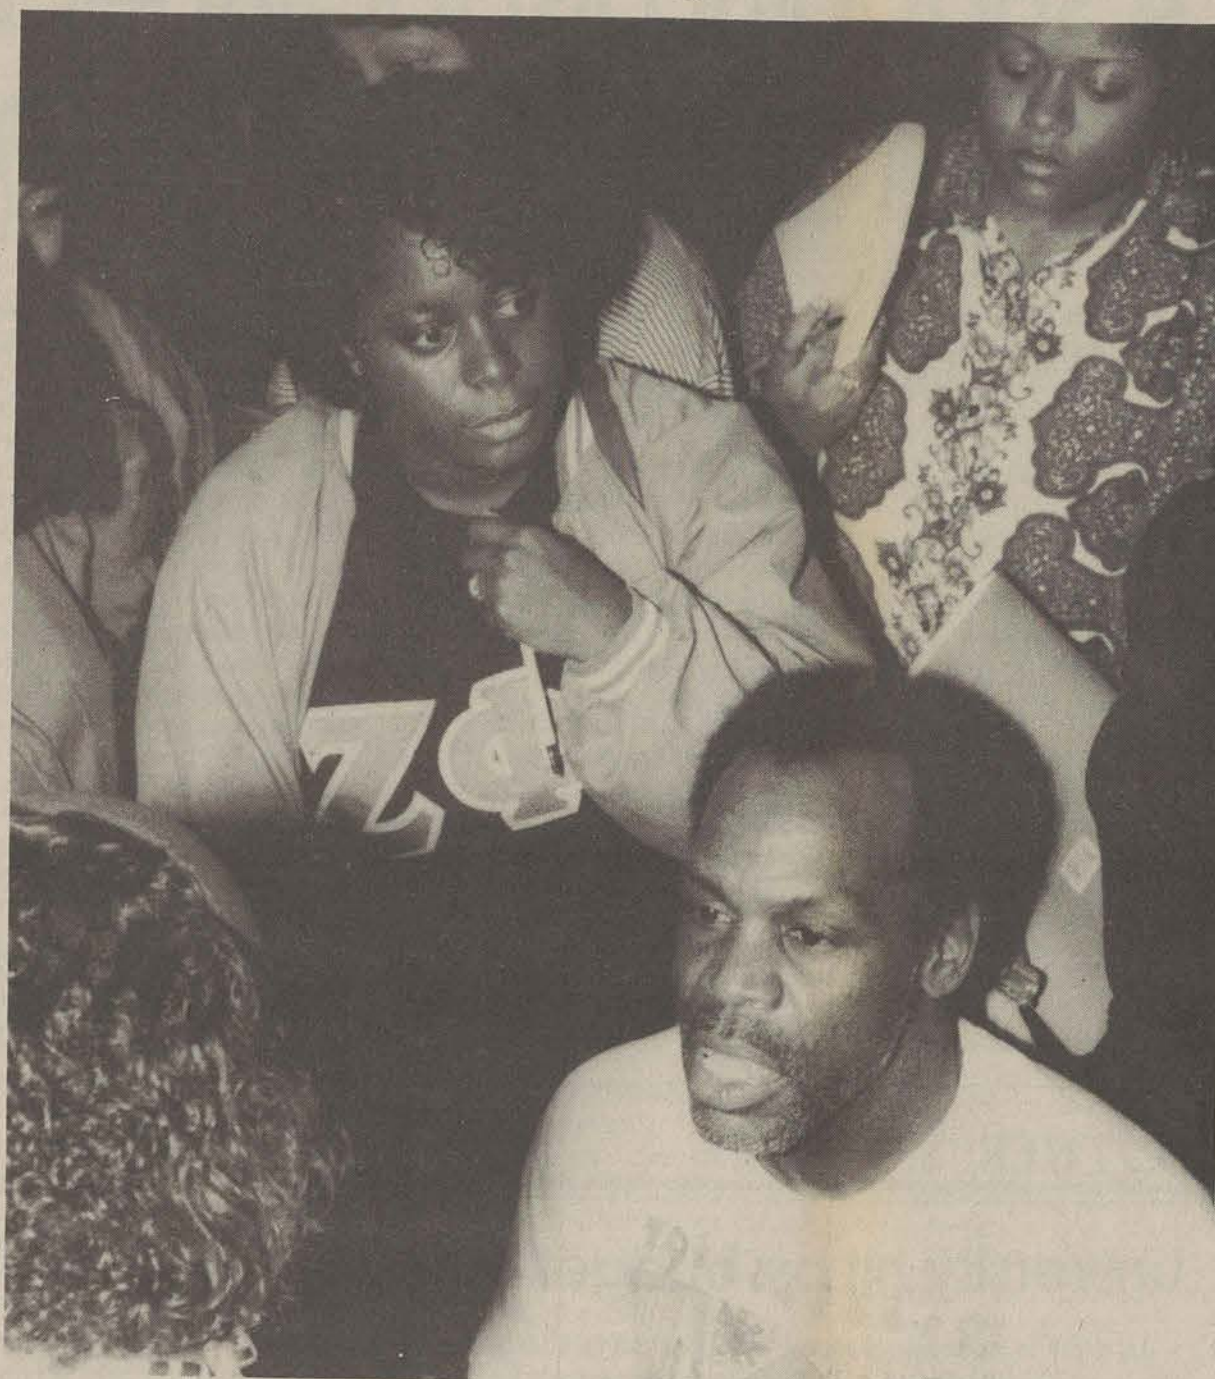

The following are questions that Mr. Glover was asked and his responses:

Q: How important would you say education would be for a performer's artistic and academic well-being?

A: Well, I would without a doubt say that it is extremely crucial, and the type of training you choose as an actor is that which supports the art. Someone once said that "Talent is understanding the human art; talent is understanding humanity so that there some ways in which you allow yourself to develop an understanding and an appreciation for what happens between people. What I do in a sense is an act of love. When I say an act of love I mean that love is humanity. There are so many ways I go about it, like when I do Shakespeare, a play by Sam Shepherd, I understand not with their voices, I understand within my voice, and not just with my voice but with the universality of voices. I think that is the key: "the universality of voices."

Q: How do you feel about exploitation and how do you feel it has affected your career?

A: Well, it is certainly a fact that racism has been institutionalized in every facet of society. It has to play a role in what I do; it definitely has to play a role in the industry I'm in and that's the film industry. It has to exist in some form in what I do. It has played a role in my development as Danny Glover.

Q: Do you feel that casting has kept you from getting roles because you are black?

A: One role was in the movie Suspect. I wanted to play the homeless mute only because I've always wanted to do interesting things. It would have been a challenge for me to play a homeless mute, but they [casting directors] thought there would be some racial implications surrounding me playing that role. I remember once, many years ago, I wanted to play Tibalt in Romeo and Juliet and the director said he was going with an Aryan and I said, "Well, if you knew anything about the history of Spain, Italy and other parts of Europe you would realize that the Moors conquered many parts of Europe." So there could have very well been a situation where Juliet's cousin could have been of African descent. In fact, the reason why Morgan Freeman ended up doing the role of the Moor in Robin Hood was because I came to the people first and said that, he being an Afro-American, I thought he should have the role of the Arab.

Q: How do you feel about cross-casting, like a white person in a black person's role?

A: Well I don't know, but why can't there be a white production of Raisin In the Sun? Because the play is about blacks who are struggling and trying to gain power for themselves; there are white people who are discriminated against because they are poor whites. Maybe there is something you can learn from this.

Q: Do you feel that it is hard for blacks to get roles in the industry?

A: It is always hard for blacks to get roles, but I would just like to say that it is a very competitive field; ninety-four percent of SAG (Screen Actors Guild) do not make their primary living acting. In this six percent there are people who make a whole lot of money and people who make just enough.

Q: How did you get into theater and movies?

A: I came to this whole thing indirectly. I did my first stage performance while in college. I graduated with a degree in economics and later I began improvisational theater again between 1971-1977. It was purely recreational. I had no intention of doing this professionally, although my interest in growing as an actor came through this.

Q: What role would you say religion has played in your life?

A: I feel that with out God's hand in my life I would not be able to accomplish the things I set out to do. Certainly faith has played a major role in my life and without that there were times I would not have returned with the wisdom to do things I wouldn't normally have done.

Q: Are you originally from Augusta?

A: No, my mother is and this will clear that up. I consider myself part Georgian simply because my mother is from Georgia. I spent numerous summers on my grandfather's farm and I spend a great deal of time with my grandmother.

Q: So is their really a Lethal Weapon Three?

A: There is a Lethal Weapon Three. It will be released May 30th in a ton of theaters.

Foy Gallery to house works of various artists through March

GSU News Service

Water color and India ink, painted wood animals, 3-dimensional drawings on clay, prints, and photographs by artists Conrad Mehlenbacher, Gary Blackburn, Lori Gene M. Mulherin, Yvonne H.

Leonard, and Sam Wang will be on display in Gallery 303 and the adjacent small gallery from March 5-31. The opening is Thursday, March 5 at noon. Gallery 303 is located on the third floor of Foy Fine Arts Building. It is open weekdays from 9 a.m.-5 p.m. Admission is free.

From Atlanta, Lori Gene M. Mulherin is a self-employed studio artist and part-time faculty member at DeKalb College. Mulherin has received recognition for the quality of her work through grants from the Georgia Council for the Arts, the DeKalb Council for the Arts and the city of Atlanta's Bureau of Cultural Affairs. She earned her B.V.A. at Georgia State University and currently teaches and conducts workshops in the Southeast. Her work is included in many private and corporate collections, and she has participated both in group shows and solo exhibitions. Mulherin says, "I use my work to touch people. Feelings are opened and held to the light. The colors and movement that spring from my paintings and sculptures help us recognize that basic spark of humanity which connects us all."

Precise and visually complex compositions characterize the work of Conrad Mehlenbacher, associate professor of art and theater at USC-Salkehatchie, an artist who uses watercolor and India ink to create small-scale objects which delight the eye with their intricacy and rich color. "The way I paint and draw is stream-of-consciousness," Mehlenbacher says. "I don't have any idea what I'm looking for when I start. I like creating images that are private things."

Gary Blackburn, assistant professor of art at Mercer University, will exhibit 3-dimensional painted wood animals. Blackburn has had several one-person exhibitions and has participated in many national exhibitions.

Yvonne H. Leonard, printmaker, works primarily in direct-process screen printing, drawing, and small printed and mixed-media books.

In the small gallery, the photography of Sam Wang will be displayed. His work is found in many prestigious collections, such as the New York Metropolitan Museum of Art, the Cincinnati Art Museum, the Seattle Art Museum, the Chase Manhattan Collection, the University of Notre Dame

Art Museum, the University of South Carolina at Sumter, the High Museum of Art in Atlanta and others. In 1987 he won a Photography Fellowship from the SAF/National Endowment for the Arts.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Afro-centricity is needed

Dear Editor,

It is imperative that we start to consolidate our separate energies towards one common goal: the "Black Agenda." As I look at "Black History Month" (Carter G. Woodson, founder), I wonder why we have not expanded that idea more than just a month out of each year.

Dr. Maulana Karenga dealt with this idea of expansion with the powerful brainstorm that produced Kwanza; this celebration of Afro-centricity takes place Dec. 26 through Jan. 1. Some refer to it as "Black Christmas." These two men, along with many other leaders, dealt with the issue of "Blackness" or "Afro-centricity," but these celebrations only cover roughly five weeks of a twelve month year.

We must stop being so docile and lazy; we must stop resting our laurels on the accomplishments of those who advanced our people yesterday, and start joining them in the Act of Advancement.

Minister Louis Farrakan, leader of the Nation of Islam, stated that "We must stop living off the accomplishments of the ancestors, my daddy built the first universities, my daddy did this and my daddy did that..." do not brag on what the ancestors did yesterday if you're not going to do anything today.

In America, we are suffering from what was termed by the late black psychologist Dr. Robin Wright as "Mentalicide." This theory deals with one losing the ability to identify with self because he or she is too busy trying to identify with some other group's definition of self.

I submit this theory to my brothers and sisters and ask them to open their African eyes and take a thorough look at the system we are presently existing in. I think Dr. Wright was right when he analyzed the African-American community and developed this theory.

The system is the most destructive thing that our people could have been introduced to; it is demeaning for me as an African-American to be forced to learn about George Washington and for my white counterparts, Sundiata Keita, ancient King of Mali is optional.

African-Americans are constantly subjected to learning about American Government and how it's democratic value system came from the Iroquois Indians, but where they got it from is what we need to know.

I am willing to bet the ideology of Democracy was first taught in the first universities, Timbuktu and Jenne, many centuries before the diaspora, which is often times spoken of in reference to the Jews, but all truth [sic] speaking anthropologists will tell you the origins of life started with the same tree which was planted on the continent of Africa, then grew to create all the other societies, but [we] were not told this, and our mind have been so conditioned that we will not even ask. This is mentalicide.

These issues must start to come out and have to start with you because the desire to know starts in one's own mind. I submit to you that if one starts to learn about self, he or she will begin to understand why the truth is being kept away from him or her.

We must listen to the words of truth that is killing our people physically, spiritually, and mentally. We must either start getting education pertaining to self within the system, or we must start to self-educate. An idea popularized by leaders like Elijah Mohammed and Marcus Garvey many years ago.

Dr. Na'im Akbar says, "We must stop being trained as African-Americans how to be something we are not, and learn through self-knowledge (truth) how we should be."

We must throw off the slave mentality and put on the true armor of Afro-Centricity that made our people great at the start of civilization and will do the same for us now. This

The Georgia Republican and Democratic Primaries are next Tuesday, so for you eight students out there who are actually registered to vote, here's a review of your choices.

For all you Young Republicans, we have George Herbert Walker Bush and Patrick J. Buchanan.

As the incumbent, Bush definitely has more experience as a politician. You can decide for yourself if that's a plus or a minus.

If foreign policy is important to you in a president, then Bush is your man. To hear him tell it, he single-handedly brought down world-wide communism, Manuel Noriega and Saddam Hussein in just three short years.

If, on the other hand, you consider domestic issues more important, consider voting for Buchanan. Bush didn't admit our two year-long recession existed until this fall, and now he's trying to convince us that he really does understand the problems of the middle-class.

In contrast, Buchanan wants to deal only with domestic problems. "America First" is his battle cry. He wants to have very little, if anything, to do with the other nations of the world. Rumor has it that he would cut welfare and use the money to build an Astrodome-type structure over the country.

Buchanan is slightly to the right of Attila the Hun politically. He's opposed to abortion under any circumstances and some of his comments regarding Jews and blacks border on blatant racism. Buchanan should pick up some of the votes that David Duke would have gotten, had he been allowed on the ballot.

All right, now for the Democrats. We have a veritable plethora of choices: Edmund G. (Jerry) Brown, Bob Kerry, Tom Harkin, Paul Tsongas and Bill Clinton.

Jerry Brown is the former governor of California who ran for president in 1980 and was nicknamed "Governor Moonbeam" because some of his ideas were considered a little far out.

He's gained a little more respect this time around. By refusing money from PAC's and by accepting campaign contributions of only 100 dollars or less, he's gotten the support of many anti-establishment voters. He has probably already peaked by winning 29 percent of the vote in Maine — a close second to Paul Tsongas.

Bob Kerry is the former Navy Seal who lost a leg in Vietnam. After returning to America and becoming a successful businessman, he was elected to the U.S. Senate by his home state of Nebraska, and he is now in his second term.

Kerry is best known for his comprehensive national health care plan, which has become a major issue in this presidential campaign. However, he seems to have little else to say, which makes for a fairly weak platform. On the other hand, he could do surprisingly well in Georgia because of this state's high veteran population.

Tom Harkin is the man I am most in sync with ideologically. He calls himself

University hit by budget cuts

In GSU's second year as a university, the state of the university remains: So much promise...so little money.

Georgia's economic downturn collided head on with GSU's upswing as the state's new university and the nation's fastest growing university. Our budget shrank by $1.3 million in a year when our enrollment swelled by more than 1,000 students. According to the state funding formula, GSU is a university of 13,400 students budgeted for a campus of 10,000.

As a whole, the University System and its 34 campuses took the hardest hit in the state's FY'92 budget cuts. While cutbacks reduced the total state budget by five percent, the University System's loss was 7.5 percent. Although the System accounts for only 12 percent of the state budget, higher education absorbed 17 percent of the total reduction.

Our state thus joins a dozen others in the nation where support for public colleges and universities actually lost ground in the past two years. Georgia has now slid from first to sixth among the Southern states in faculty salaries.

We in the University System are eager to do our share to help our state live within the taxpayer's means. We have done our share — and more. Colleges and universities must be efficient and accountable in delivering quality on the dollar. But what a short-sighted shame it would be to allow a university System which has greatness within its grasp to slip backward at the very time Georgians need great universities to move our state forward.

At a time when three out of four Americans say that a college education is vital to success, Georgia — ranking 49th among states in per capita college attendance — risks capping enrollment by cutting funds.

At a time when the demand for an educated workforce is escalating, funds for higher education are ebbing.

At a time when there are so many problems dragging on Georgia's economic present and future, the institutions with the capacity to discover solutions are being drained of their resources to do so.

At a time when South Georgia has, at last, birthed its university, GSU could be stillborn — strangled by its fiscal umbilical cord.

Governor Zell Miller has asked for a three percent increase in faculty and staff salaries in the next fiscal year — if the money is there. The Governor has recommended moving forward with a capital projects list which includes GSU's desperately needed classroom building to replace the growing trailer park where we teach our students — if the money is there.

I urge you to urge your legislators to make sure the money is there — not just for the University System's future, but for Georgia's.

—President Nicholas L. Henry, writing for the Southern Record, a GSU Alumni publication

NASA astronauts may be the first humans to have sex in space

HUNTSVILLE, Ala. (AP) — Space sex? Irish potatoes on Mars? Astronauts without The Right Stuff?

Those were some of the out-of-this-world topics launched at a two-day conference on life-support systems for space explorers. The meeting ended Thursday.

NASA hasn't dealt with things like conjugal spaceflight in the past. But speakers said that issue and others are on the horizon as America looks to Mars and a Moon base in the coming century.

Regina North, a behavioral scientist at NASA's Johnson Space Center in Houston, said the agency is about to miss a golden opportunity to conduct its first research on sex in zero gravity.

Astronauts Mark Lee, 39, and Jan Davis, 37, who were married last year, are scheduled to be among seven people aboard an August space shuttle mission dealing with materials and life sciences.

A married couple could experiment in an area that is bound to crop up should NASA undertake an extended voyage in the future, she said. With current technology, a trip to Mars would take three years.

"We have this incredible opportunity, and there is no experiment planned," she said Wednesday. "This could be an experiment like no other life science experiment. We could monitor heart rates and determine what are the physiological problems that microgravity presents."

But spaceflight is so action-packed that taking time out for romance might be a problem, she added. "They are using all their libido to do experiments. They're busy almost 24 hours a day."

The only data available on sex in space was a study of rats by Soviet cosmonauts, she said. The rodents, she said, proved "it was no big deal."

"NASA doesn't want to talk about that, but I'm thinking about that," she said. "It's a very Puritan society."

While NASA has not focused attention on space borne reproduction, it does worry about feeding space travelers. Ted W. Tibbitts of the University of Wisconsin-Madison said his research shows an Irish potato crop probably would fare better than other foods on another planet.

Potatoes, he said, can be grown easily in a sterile environment. They would be almost ideal for space farming because of their nutrient value and they many ways they can be prepared.

"I recommend their use in space, not only for food but for oxygen," Tibbitts said at the International Conference on Life Support and Biospherics, held at the University of Alabama in Huntsville.

With NASA working on life-support systems for long stays on Mars and the Moon, Mrs. North said, the agency might have to change its standards for picking astronauts, whose gung-ho attitude was depicted in the book and movie "The Right Stuff."

"The current shuttle astronauts are perfect," she said. "They are pilots, they are self-sufficient, they love themselves, they do their jobs. But exactly what made them good for short missions may not be good for long missions."

That's because the effects of a different environment can lead to physical and psychotic disorders in people who do not have enough patience, she said.

Josef Gitelson of the Institute of Biophysics and the Academic of Sciences of Russia said the end of the Cold War should lead life-support scientists in his country and the United States to share their knowledge.

Gitelson invited people at the conference to visit Bios 3, a center for ecosystems at Krasnoyarsk, Russia.

"We need to use the potential of both sides to improve our area of work," he said. "There is no reason not to exchange results. We are ready to do that."

Cool As Ice scoops up seven Golden Raspberry Award nominations

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Vanilla Ice's "Cool As Ice" scooped up seven Golden Raspberry Awards nominations Monday and Sean Young got two bids for playing twins badly as Hollywood prepared to saute the worst of 1991.

Bruce Willis' "Hudson Hawk" and Dan Aykroyd's "Nothing But Trouble" both picked up six nominations for the Oscar-spoofing Razzie trophy, a golf ball-sized gold-painted raspberry with an estimated street value of $1.79.

The Razzie nominations come just two days before Wednesday's announcement of the Academy Award contenders.

The 12th Annual Golden Raspberry Awards, determined by more than 350 voters from 26 states and five countries, will be meted out March 29 at a "Press Conference Cum Performance Piece," the Golden Raspberry Award Foundation said in a statement.

Getting the biggest raspberry reception for 1991 was "Cool As Ice," nominated for worst picture, worst actor (Ice), worst director (David Kellogg), worst screenplay (David Stenn), two worst new star nominations (including one for Ice) and worst original song.

Other worst picture nominees were "Dice Rules," "Hudson Hawk," "Nothing But Trouble," and "Return to the Blue Lagoon."

In an unprecedented double nomination for the same film, Miss Young was nominated as worst actress in "Kiss Before Dying" as the twin who survives and for worst supporting actress as the twin who's killed in the first reel.

Razzie officials cited Miss Young for her "pathetically puppet-like portrayal of two twins stalked by a psychopath in the risible murder mystery."

John Candy was nominated for worst supporting actress for appearing in drag in "Nothing

But Trouble."

Last year's worst actor winner, Andrew Dice Clay, was again nominated in the same category for "Dice Rules." Another past winner, Sylvester Stallone, was nominated for the eighth consecutive year, this time for "Oscar."

Competing with Miss Young for the worst actress award are past Razzie winner Madonna, for "Truth or Dare," Kim Basinger for "The Marrying Man," Sally Field for "Not Without My Daughter," and Demi Moore for both "The Butcher's Wife" and "Nothing But Trouble."

The awards are organized each year by John Wilson, a

Los Angeles-area writer for movie advertising trailers and television commercials. Voters include film industry professionals, journalists, publicists, Wilson's friends and "other people who have heard about the foundation," Wilson said.

Philosophy of Malcolm X often misunderstood

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — If Malcolm X were alive today, he would be appalled by the way some African-American youths are interpreting his philosophies, a Penn State researcher says.

Part of the university's Black History Month activities, the symposium featured a presentation on "Malcolm X: A Legacy in the Radical Tradition of Black Political music — all in the name of honoring Malcolm X.

"We must move beyond the videos that often miseducate by misrepresenting Malcolm. We must read his speeches, substantive books, and articles, and then we must commit ourselves as Malcolm did to creating a new American society and truly new world order," Clarke says.

"People who really understand the philosophies of Malcolm X know that no one can appropriately honor him by committing violent crimes or serving time in jail."

"A number of African-American youths are wearing Malcolm X paraphernalia without understanding the entire substance of his philosophies," says Rev. Kenneth I. Clarke, Penn State assistant director of religious affairs.

Thought" by Dr. James Turner, Cornell University African Studies and Research Center scholar.

Clarke says that resurgent interest in Malcolm X has been popular among African-American teens and young adults for several years now as they try to make sense of today's political conservatism.

"In some cases the people who wear paraphernalia in honor of Malcolm X are the same people who are committing violent crimes, selling drugs, and turning their neighborhoods into war zones," Clarke says. "Malcolm X would be appalled. But he would recognize such behavior as the byproduct of a society where physical and institutional violence against under-represented groups is the norm."

Clarke and Penn State's Black Caucus organized a two-day symposium, "Malcolm X: A Life, Legacies and Lessons, Continued," Feb. 19 and 20, to help Penn State students better understand Malcolm X and to observe the 27th anniversary of his death on Feb. 21.

"Malcolm X in the end supported the advancement of all humanity, although his primary priority was removing barriers to African-American advancement. He encouraged young African-Americans to help their communities. He wanted blacks to take responsibility for improving their conditions, while pressing the government to take responsibility to eliminate institutional discrimination," Clarke says.

Malcolm X did not advocate violence, but encouraged blacks to defend themselves against the vigilante violence of racist individuals and groups. But some youths focused on violence and using aggressive and negative messages in music videos and rap

are important

Are women's sports treated like second-class citizens here at GSU? I would say so.

The most dominant athlete in our history is swimmer Stacey Scheible (see article on opposite page). She's lost twice in two years. The women's swim team has lost just four times in the past three years.

Forward Gwen Thomas is in the top ten in the nation in scoring at more than 25 points per game. The women's basketball team isn't having much of a season this year, but they have won the New South Women's Athletic Conference tournament three times in the last four years.

Alicia Hewes, a runner on the women's cross country team, has consistently performed well for the past three years.

There are many female athletes that I'm sure I've left out and I hope they forgive me, but my memory isn't perfect.

The point is that no one, except for their parents and a select few on campus, knows who any of these women are or what they do.

I guess the George-Anne could be blamed, but I've been the sports editor for two of the last three years and I know that they've gotten some coverage.

Two of the three sports I mentioned above aren't exactly geared for an audience and I have to admit, even as sports editor, I've never been to a swim meet - ever. But they got covered, just not by me.

GSU participates in Division I and offers the following sports for women: basketball, softball, swimming, cross country, volleyball and tennis. We have a soccer team that competes at club level and as such should receive some assistance from Campus Recreation and Intramurals.

For men we have: football, basketball, soccer, golf, cross country, baseball and swimming. Rugby and volleyball compete as clubs as well.

The score is nine to seven, in favor of the men. Hmm...more for the men than the women. Well that's not uncommon. It doesn't make it right, but it's not uncommon.

I know that the state has reduced the budget and everything, but why do I play on the same softball field as the women's team when J.I. Clements Stadium is off-limits? Do the women not deserve equal treatment?

They do deserve equal treatment, but are not receiving it.

There is always a puddle after it rains in short right field on the women's softball field and it smells like a sewer. I don't think that Clements Stadium smells like a sewer. And I'm sure that there aren't sprinkler heads sticking up in the outfield.

There are always two arguments for not funding women's athletics the same as they men's: they aren't revenue sports and they aren't as exciting.

The revenue argument is the schools; the exciting argument is that of the fan. Neither is relevant because if you provide the sport, you should fund it properly, regardless of revenue generation or excitement.

Besides, GSU events are free to students and the others who attend aren't keeping those programs afloat with their $2 admission fee.

GSU's Lady Eagle Softball team took one out of six games in this past week's action.

Valdosta State swept GSU last Friday, and Georgia State split a doubleheader with the Lady Eagles on Sunday.

GSU also dropped two games of a Wednesday afternoon two-game set with the University of South Carolina.

Lady Blazers sweep GSU

In the first game of a doubleheader against Valdosta State University, the Lady Eagles lost 4-3.

Carrie Collins pitched seven innings and gave up four runs, only two of which were earned. In the third inning, Melissa Williams singled and advanced to second base on a steal. Marginia Kemp got a single on an error by Valdosta's third baseman.

With runners on first and third and two outs, Heather McAdam hit a two-run double, thus scoring Williams and Kemp. Cathy Stinson moved McAdam to third with a single.

On a double steal attempt by the Lady Eagles, Stinson stole second. However, McAdam was thrown out at home plate, ending the rally.

Julie Cieszkowski started off the fourth inning with a single to left field. Debbie Hensley made a sacrifice bunt to third base to advance Cieszkowski to second. Amy Barnett grounded out to third.

Kim Holden singled, scoring Cieszkowski and Williams grounded to the second baseman to end the inning. Valdosta scored two runs on a bases loaded single due to an error by outfielder Holden.

In the fifth inning, Valdosta scored a single due to an error by GSU's left fielder McAdam.

Jeff Sanders

Sanders signs with Atlanta

G-A Staff Reports

Former GSU basketball great Jeff Sanders reportedly inked a ten-day contract to play with the Atlanta Hawks on Wednesday.

Sanders will join the Hawks leaving behind the Fort Wayne Fury of the CBA who are currently 17-29.

The Fury will retain the rights to Sanders unless Atlanta decides to sign him to a permanent contract.

The season ending achilles tendon injury of Dominique Wilkins has prompted the Hawks to seek added help inside. The 6'9" Sanders could possibly provide some low post help.

Sanders holds several GSU school records as well as TAAC conference records.

He holds GSU records for single-season scoring (674) and single-season blocks (39). He is GSU's all-time leading scorer (1,861 points), all-time career leader in blocks (101) and all-time leader in career starts and games (117/119).

Sanders also holds the distinction of being only the second player in conference history to be named TAAC MVP for two consecutive years.

In the 1989 NBA draft, Sanders was selected 20th overall by the Chicago Bulls.

Since then he has played with the Miami Heat, the Albany (NY) Patroons and the Grand Rapids Hoops of the CBA.

He was also named to the CBA all-star team this season.

Valdosta State had seven hits, two earned runs, four runs total and three errors. GSU scored three runs, two of which were earned; had seven hits and made two errors. Holden went two for four; McAdam one for two with two RBIs and Stinson two for two with two singles and one stolen base.

Valdosta State took the second game 1-0.

In the seventh inning Amy Barnett made an error which allowed Valdosta's Durant to make it to first base. Their next batter struck out. Kitz Miller, designated hitter for Valdosta, booted a triple in the left center field gap between Williams and Kemp. Durant scored.

The next batter grounded out to the pitcher and Miller was thrown out at home by Hensley.

The bottom of the seventh started with a pop-up to third base by Michelle Amazon. Hensley got to first on an error by the shortstop.

The third baseman for Valdosta made an error on Holden's bunt which gave GSU runners at first and third. Next, Williams popped up to first. With two outs, the Lady Eagles attempted to double steal. The umpire called Holden out with a tag before the run was scored.

Williams struck out five and gave 13 ground ball outs. GSU had eight hits, no runs and one error. Valdosta State scored one run, had two hits and made two errors.

Brooke O'Meara, catcher for GSU, was injured in the fifth inning. Her right leg buckled while taking a lead off of first base and trying to return. O'Meara pulled some muscles in the area around the knee and will undergo surgery.

Lady Eagles split with Georgia State

GSU rallied on Sunday only to split games against a long-time rival, Georgia State University.

Hensley doubled to the left center field gap to score McAdam. Mary Cain came in to pinch-run for Hensley at second with one out. Williams grounded out to the shortstop and Cain was thrown out attempting to steal third which ended the inning and the game.

Georgia State had seven hits, two runs and no errors. GSU had five hits, one run and two errors.

The second game of the doubleheader against Georgia State resulted in a win for Georgia Southern, 4-0.

Olejcek, in the fourth inning, got to first base on an error by the shortstop. McAdam grounded out to the shortstop. Olejcek advanced to second on a wild pitch. Hensley grounded out to the second baseman, but Williams came through to RBI single up the middle scoring Olejcek. Michelle Amazon popped up to the second baseman to end the inning.

The Lady Eagles rallied to score three more runs in the fifth. Barnett went to first on a shortstop error. The shortstop made another error to put Holden on first base. Stinson bunted and got to first due to an error by the pitcher, giving the Lady Eagles bases loaded. Kemp grounded to second and Barnett scored on the fielder's choice. McAdam RBI singled to left field scoring Kemp. Olejcek doubled and Cain came in to pinch-run. Hensley singled and moved Cain to third. With bases loaded again, Williams walked and Cain scored. Amazon pop-flied to center field to end the inning.

The Lady Eagles had four runs, six hits and one error. The Lady Panthers scored no runs, had four hits and made four errors.

Scheible quietly dominates her sport

By Michael Strong
Assistant Sports Editor

The most dominant athlete in the history of GSU doesn't carry a football, dunk a basketball or throw a baseball, she simply swims faster than anybody she faces — period.

Stacey Scheible, a junior therapeutic recreation major, has compiled a 52-2 match record in her three years at GSU. She has helped the women's swim team post a 27-4 record over those three years.

She owns or shares eight school records, and had one broken this year. She completely dominates any event she enters, according to Scott Farmer, women's swimming coach.

"We always put Stacey against the other team's strength," he said. "It feels great to know that you can do that and know that you're going to win."

Scheible modestly speaks about her teammates when the talk of dominance comes up.

"I really consider it a team sport," she said. "I'm just glad I could help the team."

But do not mistake modesty for impishness or a lack of intensity on her part, when the gun sounds she's ready to race.

"I like a lot of competition, I swim better against good competition," she said.

This self-motivation, a laid back attitude and several school records make her a natural leader and helps the team in other ways as well.

"She definitely turns it on," said Farmer. "She gets fired up in her own way. She doesn't like to lose at all. She is one of those natural team leaders."

"Stacey never misses practice. It doesn't matter what's going on, she's always there."

Scheible, who is from Columbus, has been swimming since she was seven years old. It might be safe to say she's a natural because there were only three other swimmers in the Columbus Aquatic Club that were her age, so she had to compete against expectations and times, not other people, to attain the level of excellence she now enjoys.

Like many other successful athletes, swimming has been the dominant force in her life. Her parents used to drive her to all her meets and practices, which led to some unexpected pressure.

"I used to feel pressure, I would be disappointed for them [her parents] if I didn't do well," said Scheible. "They never put any pressure on me. They're very proud of me, but it was kind of a relief to go to college and swim."

This kind of pressure could be what drives her to compete, but leaves her humble enough to have fun with her teammates, who are also her roommates.

"They're the best friends I have," she said. "But if one's mad everybody knows about it."

Scheible's attitude about pressure is what brought her to GSU, and took her away from the University of Georgia.

"All through high school, I was going to go to UGA. Then I went up there to visit and to see a meet. It was just way too intense," she said, shaking her head.

This led to the strange sequence of events that brought Scheible to GSU. She had her high school swimming coach call Farmer and ask if he was interested in her; needless to say he was.

"It was really odd," said Farmer. "Her coach called and it was kind of late at night and said that he had this backstroke with these [great] times and wanted to know if I was interested."

"Of course I said I was. I had to call him back to make sure I wasn't dreaming. She came to visit and we signed her that weekend. It was great."

The team's dramatic improvement can be directly traced to Scheible. A winning team brings in more winners,

The CR/I basketball "game of the week" for February 17-23 is the first to come from the women's league. The powerful inside game of the Woody's took on the awesome guard tandem of Too Legit. Braves prepare to tackle media

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The Atlanta Braves are ready to take the field. Soon they'll be ready to take on the news media.

The National League champions hold their first full squad workout on Wednesday. General manager John Schuerholz said he expected all the players to report by today.

The team has hired consultant Andrea Kirby to meet with coaches and front office personnel and then with the players to teach them how to deal with the media.

Hunter, a right-handed hitter, is expected to share play-

"I got in trouble and I had to pay the consequences," said Hunter, who spent Thursday and Friday nights in the Fayette County Jail south of Atlanta for a driving-under-the-influence conviction.

Hunter was arrested and charged with DUI on Oct. 30 in Fayetteville, five weeks after he was ticketed for DUI in suburban Cobb County.

"Everyone makes mistakes; I just happened to have two quick ones," Hunter said. "But I'm going to put it behind me deal with interviews. The Braves, who went from last place to first in one season, are drawing greatly increased attention.

Kirby, of Sports Media Group, has performed similar tasks for several other clubs, including the St. Louis Cardinals and New York Mets.

"This will prepare the players to deal with what I think is going to be a media crunch," Schuerholz said. "We don't want them to feel intimidated."

A consultant who had an impact last year will be back in an expanded capacity.

Sports psychology consultant Jack Llewellyn, who helped pitcher John Smoltz regain his confidence and win 12 games in the second half after a dismal start, will work with pitcher Kent Mercker and first baseman Nick Esasky.

"Why not?" Mercker said. "I talked to John about what he did for him. You try to help yourself in any way you can."

Esasky missed the entire 1991 season with a vertigo problem that developed the previous year.

Among the players reporting Monday was first baseman Brian Hunter, who vowed to put last week's two-day jail sentence for drunken driving behind him.

Top Ten Reasons to live at PLAYERS CLUB

10. Ralph Lauren likes the logo.
9. Highest percentage of blondes on campus.
8. Work-out room to maintain your hard body.
7. Like to tan your body at a pool or the only beach on campus.
6. Like the hot sweaty feeling – we have tennis, basketball, and volleyball.
5. You don't have three other people you would like to live with, so we have two and three bedroom units.
4. Don't like to spend precious time at those exciting laundromats. You have washer/dryer hookups.
3. Best rental rates in the 'Boro.
2. Because all your friends will be here.

Okay, so that's only nine— the blondes are not counting and the rest of you intellectuals know a great deal when you hear it!

Centricity

is the only answer I can see that will really help the plight of the African-American community. African-Americans must grow intellectually, so that we can understand the world and our true place in it.

We must wake up like W.E.B. Dubois, Ida B. Wells, Marcus Garvey, Angela Davis and many others; we must start pressing for mental rights. Malcolm X said, "If a man has a knife stuck in his back nine inches, and you pull it out six inches, that's no progress; if you pull it out all the way, that's no progress, it's only when you start to sew up the wound that the blow made that progress can be seen."

For the African-American, there has been some physical progression, but much more mental digression. This is the clear reason why we must celebrate ourselves more; we must remove the knife for ourselves; this happens when we throw off the slave mentality that tells us we should only celebrate self at certain times of the year and put on the true armor of Afro-Centricity that allows us to celebrate every day for 365 days out of a 12-month full scale year.

I think that this is the only thing that will wake up the African-American community from our comatose state. A group of people can not continue to hear about the positive accomplishments of another group, and rarely hear anything positive linked with their group for some 400 years and not suffer some form of mental breakdown.

The African-American community must be like the Egyptian symbol, the Ankh, which represents the start of life, the convergence of feminine and masculine principles which produces life.

We need to come together just like the Ankh to bring forth a rebirth in our communities, and we will then unify, and through this unification will come better education, which will make us stronger politically, socially, and economically.

a fact that Farmer knows well.

"The biggest thing she does for us is win," he said. "I can't even tell you [how she helps overall]. It starts with recruiting, we use her times. Those times get us into meets we have no business being in."

Those times have helped Farmer recruit two other excellent swimmers: Vicky Haklin and Karen Hurley. Haklin broke Scheible's record in the 100 meter backstroke earlier this year.

In the Southern States Championship this year, Scheible won all six events she entered, as GSU took the championship. In the process of winning, they beat UNC-Charlotte and Louisville.

"Beating Louisville, for us, is like the basketball team beating Louisville's basketball team," said Farmer.

Scheible has done something that few athletes can do: she's taken her team to another level, where it will stay even after she's gone. Jeff Sanders, Tracy Ham and John Tudor have nothing on Stacey Scheible.

an old-fashioned Democrat who's not afraid to call himself liberal. His hero is Franklin D. Roosevelt, and this senator from Iowa believes it's time for the government to start working for the common man, rather than the rich and powerful.

Unfortunately, FDR himself probably couldn't get elected today. This country seems to want a president who'll get tough on the poor, who they often perceive as lazy and undeserving.

Now, let's talk about the two that actually have a chance to get the Democratic nomination.

Paul Tsongas won the first primary in New Hampshire, but didn't do as well in Maine, where he barely edged out Brown with 30 percent of the vote. Despite the Dukakis Curse (he's a Greek from Massachusetts), he is not a typical liberal. Many of his economic policies are more conservative than any of the other presidential candidates, including Bush and Buchanan.

His social policies, on the other hand, are pretty liberal. That fact, coupled with his background, probably won't allow him to do as well in the South.

Finally, the man I endorse and urge you to vote for: Bill Clinton.

This governor of Arkansas is probably the most electable Democratic candidate. His economic and social policies are, for the most part, moderate, which is what the country seems to be looking for. He's pro-choice, but he's also in favor of welfare reform which would have recipients work for their benefits.

Clinton placed a strong second in New Hampshire and he seems to have the greatest momentum of all the candidates as they head into Georgia.

He should do well in the South, which is vital in the primaries, and his middle-of-the-road position should satisfy moderate Democrats and Republicans in the general election.

What I see happening in the future is that the influence of Pat Buchanan will force the Republican party further to the right. Hopefully the Democrats, led by Clinton, can capture the vacated moderate position and win the presidency.

So come on all you registered voters out there. Vote in the upcoming primaries (Democratic or Republican) and take control of this country's future.
